

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

COURT OF EXCHEQUER.

Price v. Hewett.—(15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 80—Pleading and demurring to same Matter—Fraud—Infant) ..... 4

LONDON, JANUARY 15, 1853.

In a former number of THE JURIST, when the Chancery Improvement Act had just been passed, we discussed the clauses relating to the oral examination of witnesses, and suggested that the cross-examination of witnesses, who have made affidavits on interlocutory applications, cannot, under the act, take place in court, but must be conducted before the examiner. The point has been so ruled by Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., in Smith v. The Swansea Dock Company, (16 Jur., part 1, p. 1130).

This is one of the defects of the act; whether the omission was intentional, or the result of a slip, we have, of course, no information; but that it is a defect is sufficiently obvious—that is, if we are to assume that oral cross-examination of witnesses upon affidavit is at any time valuable; for if it is valuable at the hearing of a cause, what possible distinction can be taken between that and the hearing of a motion, which should make the oral cross-examination of witnesses before the Court in the latter case useless? The distinction which actually exists between an interlocutory application and the hearing of a cause, has, in truth, no bearing whatever upon the mode of taking evidence. It is true, that it has been the old practice, on motions, to take affidavits; while, at the hearing, evidence upon interrogatories only was admissible. But this practice grew rather out of the necessity of admitting the more rapid process by affidavit for motions, if motions were to be heard at all, than out of any peculiarity in motions, as substantially distinguished from the hearing. And since it has been determined by the Legislature that affidavits may be used at the hearing as well as on motions, so far assimilating interlocutory and final hearing, it seems quite idle to say that a particular mode of cross-examining witnesses is good at the hearing, and is not good on motion.

The use of an interlocutory application, it should be recollected, is very often, not merely to obtain for the applicant the immediate relief that he seeks, but, in effect, to determine the cause—that is, by obtaining the opinion of the Court on the point affecting the immediate relief, to make all further proceedings useless. It is on this ground, if on no other, of the highest importance that every means should be provided for making the investigation and determination of interlocutory applications as complete and accurate as possible, since thereby often a prolonged litigation may be prevented.

We come, then, to the material point, whether it is not much better that the cross-examination of a witness should take place before the judge who is to hear the matter in which he has been examined in chief, than before an official person, not a judge, who is merely to take down his evidence, without its being necessary that he should form any idea of the merits of the case on which the evidence bears. The arguments in favour of this mode of proceeding have been so often discussed and urged, that we shall not trouble our readers with a recapitulation of them. We shall content ourselves with asserting broadly and positively, that if, on motions, the witnesses are to be cross-examined, it would be infinitely to the advantage of truth that they should be so examined while the motion is going on, and in the presence of the judge who hears it.

Further: while this cannot be done, it is a farce to talk, in practice, of oral cross-examination of the witnesses on a motion—that is, in the largest and most important class of cases, viz. those where immediate damage is apprehended, and a decision must be had quickly, if severe injury is not to be inflicted on one or other of the parties. Fancy, in a case of a motion to restrain a railway company from opening its line, and running its trains in a given manner, or from intersecting a given road, or knocking down a mansion-house—fancy, in such a case, having to serve subpoena on the witnesses, and to wait the turn of the parties to obtain an appointment in the examiner's office, in addition to all other delays, before a decision can be had. The result would be, that to bring on a motion would take nearly as long as to bring the cause to a hearing; and the very object of a motion, which is to obtain a speedy determination of the preliminary point in dispute, would be wholly defeated. Either the company would have to wait a ruinously long time before exercising its right, or the mischief would be done before the remedy could be applied; and, one way or the other, injustice would be inevitable. In effect, therefore, we say that in the very cases in which it is generally most wanted, oral cross-examination of the witnesses on a motion is impossible, and that so far the act has miscarried.

This is a question quite apart from the larger question, whether the whole system of oral examination before an examiner is not a mistake. In this journal we have before frequently urged, and we again repeat the opinion, that it is a mistake; that the value of oral examination depends mainly upon its being conducted before the tribunal that is to pronounce a decision upon the facts, and at the particular hearing on which the evidence bears; and sooner or later, and we believe rather sooner than later, we have no doubt that the separate oral examination of witnesses before an examiner will be abolished; and that wherever oral examination is used, it will take place before the Court, as already has been done on some occasions, with great success, before the Lords Justices of the Court of Appeal in Chancery.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—It appears from your report of Pegg v. Wisden (16 Jur., part 1, p. 1105) that the Master of the Rolls has very lately decided that the act of examining an abstract with the original deeds amounts to an acceptance of title on behalf of a purchaser. If this is to be a rule, the sooner solicitors are made generally acquainted with it the better; for certainly it is an extremely common practice to have an abstract examined with the deeds before it is submitted to counsel, as every conveyancer must be aware. But solicitors, in doing this, have never considered that they had already precluded themselves from making the objections which their counsel might suggest.

Your obedient servant,
T. S.

[There can be no doubt that, in ordinary cases, the examination of the deeds is not an acceptance of the title. Indeed, it is recommended in the Treatise on Vendors and Purchasers, and by other authorities, that the abstract should be so verified before it is submitted to counsel. The opinion of the Master of the Rolls in Pegg v. Wisden must have been founded on all the circumstances of the case taken together, though we confess the foundation does not appear to us sufficient.—ED.]

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Charles N. Wilde, Esq., to be the Registrar in Lunacy.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, appointing the Right Hon. Sir George James Turner, Knt., to be a Judge of the Court of Appeal in Chancery, in the room of the Right Hon. Robert Monsey, Lord Cranworth, resigned.

WHETHER A MORTGAGE IS JUSTIFIED BY A POWER OF SALE.

(From a Correspondent).

WE think the attention of the Profession should be particularly directed to the decision of Lord St. Leonard's in Stroughill v. Anstey, (16 Jur., part 1, p. 671; 1 De G., Mac., & G. 638), as tending to reopen a discussion we thought closed by Pago v. Adams and Forbes v. Peacocke, as to the liability of persons dealing with trustees to see to the application of the money where there is a general charge of debts. The case was this:—Trustees of a will held the testator's residue, of which certain houses were part, upon trust, at such time or times as to them should seem meet, to sell and convert into money, and to hold the proceeds upon trust to pay the testator's debts, an annuity, and certain legacies; and as to the residue, for A. and B. The will contained a clause in a very extensive form, declaring, not only that certain purchasers, but also that any "person who from time to time should have" any part of the trust monies in their hands, should not be accountable, after payment to the acting trustee or trustees, for the misapplication or non-application thereof, and that every receipt of the acting trustee or trustees should be a sufficient discharge for every sum therein acknowledged. A. was one of the trustees as well as one of the persons interested in the residue, and he and his co-trustee, sixteen years after the death of the testator, raised 2800*l.* by deposit of the title deeds of part of the unsold property and an agreement for mortgage, and both the trustees entered into a personal undertaking to repay the sum so raised. The co-trustee misapplied the funds, and Lord St. Leonard's held that the mortgage could not be enforced against the cestui que trust, as not being within the power of sale, and decreed a delivery up of the title deeds—reversing the decision of Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, V. C., who had made a decree for payment or sale of the mortgaged premises.

This case has all the appearance of a careful decision by Lord St. Leonard's, who referred to and commented on the authorities in his judgment, and without a rehearing or an appeal to the Lords, it must be taken to be law. Therefore the efficacy of a receipt clause to persons dealing with trustees, and the doctrine that a mortgage is a sale pro tanto, must be considered as very much narrowed, as well as the doctrine that a general charge of debts exempts a purchaser or mortgagee from making inquiries. There was in Stroughill v. Anstey a general charge of debts, a discretionary power of sale, and a clause to exonerate all persons paying money from seeing to the application; and yet a mortgagee was held not safe, and lost 2800*l.*, advanced to the trustees.

It seems at first sight difficult to contend, that raising money on mortgage is not a due execution of a power to "convert into money;" but the narrow point strictly decided by Stroughill v. Anstey is, that a mortgage is not a due execution of a power to sell and convert into money. However, the principle on which Lord St. Leonard's put his judgment is, that persons dealing with trustees, raising money after a considerable lapse of time, are bound to inquire and see that no breach of trust is being committed; and though he professes to consider this as not tending to lessen the security of purchasers and mortgagees, it certainly tends to unsettle the principles on which their advisers can transact their business. What amount of inquiry is to be necessary? What evidence of that inquiry is to be preserved? If each case is to stand on its own peculiarities, we are then entirely at sea, and possibly no two legal advisers could be got to agree as to what amount of inquiry will render a purchaser or mortgagee safe.

Again: what time is to be deemed considerable? In Stroughill v. Anstey the time was only sixteen years, but in Forbes v. Peacocke the time was twenty-seven years, and the Court there refused to permit a purchaser to inquire whether all the debts had been paid. In fact, it seems very difficult to consider Stroughill v. Anstey except as overruling Forbes v. Peacocke, and as restoring what Lord St. Leonard's calls "the opinion of the Profession prior to that case." We should be glad to hear that Stroughill v. Anstey was to be reheard before the full Court of Appeal; but we have done our duty by calling the attention of legal advisers and practitioners very particularly to the question, as of the utmost importance, practically, in all cases of sales or mortgages by the trustees of a will, notwithstanding a clause to exonerate persons taking receipts from liability for non-application.

REGULA GENERALIS.

ORDER OF COURT.—Dec. 24, 1852.

The Right Honourable EDWARD BURTENSHAW Lord ST. LEONARD'S, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say—

I. When any of the Masters in Ordinary shall request the opinion of any of the conveyancing counsel, nominated by the Lord Chancellor under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 41, to be taken upon any matter depending before such Master, such business is to be laid before the conveyancing counsel in rotation, to be ascertained in the manner prescribed by the General Orders of the 16th day of December, 1852; and a memorandum or minute of every such request is to be prepared by the Master's chief clerk, and signed by him, and such memorandum or minute, when marked with the name of the conveyancing counsel in rotation, shall be a sufficient authority for such counsel to proceed with such business; and if the conveyancing counsel in rotation shall be unable or decline to proceed therewith, the same shall be offered to the other conveyancing counsel, nominated as aforesaid, successively, according to their seniority at the Bar, until some one of them shall accept the same.

II. Where, under a decree or order of the Court, whether already made or hereafter to be made, any estate or interest shall be put up for sale with the approbation of one of the Masters in Ordinary, an abstract of the title to such estate or interest is, upon the request of the Master, to be laid before the conveyancing counsel in rotation, for the opinion of such counsel thereon, to the intent that the said Master may be the better enabled to give such directions as may be necessary respecting the conditions of sale of such estate or interest.

III. Notwithstanding the preceding Orders, the Master is to be at liberty to request the opinion of any one in particular of the said conveyancing counsel to be taken upon any matter before such Master, where the circumstances of the case may render it expedient to do so.

(Signed) ST. LEONARD'S, C.

The Queen has also been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, granting the office of a Vice-Chancellor unto Sir William Page Wood, Knt., in the room of the Right Hon. Sir George James Turner, Knt., resigned.

RULES OF PRACTICE OF THE COURTS OF QUEEN'S BENCH, COMMON PLEAS, AND EXCHEQUER OF PLEAS.—HILARY TERM, 1853.

THE New Rules of Practice of the Common-law Courts, which were promulgated and came into operation on the first day of the present Term, are so extremely important that we have thought it advisable to publish them in our present number. For the purpose of reference, we have compiled an alphabetical index of the chief subjects to which they relate, and have given the numbers of the rules after the titles. We have considered it advisable to retain many of the words italicised, as they appeared in the first copy of the rules.

Hilary Term, 1853.

1a. Whereas the practice of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, in civil actions, in respect of which the said Courts possess a common jurisdiction, has been to a great extent superseded or altered by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, and it is expedient that the written rules of practice of the said Courts should be consolidated and rendered uniform: it is ordered that all existing rules of practice in any of the said courts in regard to such civil actions, save and except as regards any step or proceeding heretofore taken, shall be and the same are hereby annulled, and that the practice to be observed in the said courts with respect to the matters hereafter mentioned shall be as follows; that is to say—

WRIT OF SUMMONS.

1. When a writ of summons is indorsed in the special form mentioned in sect. 27 of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, the following are the amounts which may be indorsed by the plaintiff's attorney or agent upon the writ for costs, and to include mileage:—

In actions under 20*l*.

In town causes, 2*l*. 14*s*.; in country or agency cases, (including mileage), 3*l*. 2*s*.

Where the plaintiff's attorney, at the time of issuing the writ, claims more than the sums fixed as above, the indorsement on the writ of summons in respect of costs shall be as follows:—"Such sum as shall be allowed on taxation for costs." And in case the plaintiff shall be found not entitled to more costs than such fixed sums, or if more than one-sixth shall be disallowed, the plaintiff's attorney shall pay the costs of taxation. So, if the attorney has indorsed on the writ one of the fixed sums for the costs of judgment, and claims more costs on signing judgment, and, on taxation, shall be found not entitled to more than such sum, or if more than one-sixth be taken off on taxation, the plaintiff's attorney shall in like manner pay the costs of taxation.

APPEARANCE.

2. If two or more defendants in the same action shall appear by the same attorney, and at the same time, the names of all the defendants so appearing shall be inserted in one appearance.

ATTORNEY AND GUARDIAN.

3. An attorney not entering an appearance in pursuance of his undertaking shall be liable to an attachment.

4. No attorney shall be changed without the order of a judge.

5. A special admission of prochein amy, or guardian, to prosecute or defend for an infant, shall not be deemed an authority to prosecute or defend in any but the particular action or actions specified.

JOINDER OF PARTIES.

6. Whenever a plaintiff shall amend the writ after notice by the defendant, or a plea in abatement of a non-joinder by virtue of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, s. 36, he shall file a consent in writing of the party or parties whose name or names are to be added, together with an affidavit of the handwriting, and give notice thereof to the defendant, unless the filing of such consent be dispensed with by order of the court or a judge.

PLEADINGS.

7. No side-bar rule for time to declare shall be granted.

8. The defendant shall not be at liberty to waive his plea, or enter a relicta verifications after a demurrer, without leave of the court or a judge, unless by consent of the plaintiff or his attorney.

9. In case the time for pleading to any declaration, or for answering any pleadings, shall not have expired before the 10th day of August in any year, the party called upon to plead, reply, &c. shall have the same number of days for that purpose, after the 24th day of October, as if the declaration or preceding pleading had been delivered or filed on the 24th of October.

10. Where a defendant shall plead a plea of judgment recovered, he shall in the margin of such plea state the date of such judgment, and if such judgment shall be in a court of record, the number of the roll on which such proceedings are entered, if any; and, in default of his so doing, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment as for want of a plea; and in case the same be falsely stated by the defendant, the plaintiff, on producing a certificate from the proper officer or person having the custody of the records or proceedings of the court where such judgment is alleged to have been recovered, that there is no such record or entry of a judgment as therein stated, shall be at liberty to sign judgment as for want of a plea.

PAYMENT OF MONEY INTO COURT.

11. No affidavit shall be necessary to verify the plaintiff's signature to the written authority to his attorney to take money out of court, unless specially required by the Master.

12. When money is paid into court in respect of any particular sum or cause of action in the declaration, and the plaintiff accepts the same in satisfaction, the plaintiff, when the costs of the cause are taxed, shall be entitled to the costs of the cause, in respect of that part of his claim so satisfied, up to the time the money is so paid in and taken out, whatever may be the result of any issue or issues in respect of other causes of action; and if the defendant succeeds in defeating the residue of the claim, he will be entitled to the costs of the cause in respect of such defence, commencing at "Instructions for Plea," but not before.

13. Where money is paid into court in several actions which are consolidated, and the plaintiff, without taxing costs, proceeds to trial on one and fails, he shall be entitled to costs on the others up to the time of paying money into court.

DEMURRER.

14. The party demurring may give a notice to the opposite party to join in demurrer in four days, which notice may be delivered separately or indorsed on the demurrer, otherwise judgment.

15. No motion or rule for a concilium shall be required; but demurrers as well as all special cases, special verdicts, and appeals from county courts, shall be set down for argument in the special paper, at the request of either party, four clear days before the day on which the same are to be argued, and notice thereof shall be given forthwith by such party to the opposite party.

16. Four clear days before the day appointed for ar-

30. In all cases of trials, writs of inquiry, or inquiries of any kind, either party may call on the other party, by notice, to admit documents in the manner provided by and subject to the provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852; and in case of the refusal or neglect to admit after such notice given, the costs of proving the document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the cause may be, unless at the trial or inquisition the judge or presiding officer shall certify that the refusal to admit was reasonable; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice be given, except in cases where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the Master, a saving of expense.

31. An order upon the lord of a manor to allow the usual limited inspection of the court rolls, on the application of a copyhold tenant, may be absolute in the first instance, upon an affidavit that the copyhold tenant has applied for and been refused inspection.

32. No subpoena for the production of an original record shall be issued unless a rule of court or the order of a judge shall be produced to the officer issuing the same, and filed with him, and unless the writ shall be made conformable to the description of the document mentioned in such rule or order.

33. All depositions of witnesses taken under the order of a judge, rule of court, or writ of commission, shall be returned to and filed in the office of the Masters of the court in which the action or proceeding is pending.

TRIAL—TRIAL BY PROVISIO, INQUIRY, NOTICE OF TRIAL, ETC.

34. Notice of trial or inquiry, and of continuance of trial or inquiry, shall be given in town; but countermand of notice of trial or inquiry may be given either in town or country, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge.

35. The expression "short notice of trial," or "short notice of inquiry," shall in all cases be taken to mean four days.

36. Notice of trial or inquiry may be continued to any sitting in or after term, on giving a notice of continuance four days before the time mentioned in the notice of trial or inquiry, unless short notice of trial or inquiry has been given, in which cases two days' previous notice shall be sufficient, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge, or by consent.

37. Countermand of notice of inquiry shall be given four days before the day of inquiry mentioned in the notice, unless short notice of inquiry has been given, and then two days before such day, unless otherwise ordered by the court or a judge, or by consent.

38. On a replication or other pleading denying the existence of a record pleaded by the defendant, a rule for the defendant to produce the record shall not be necessary or used, and instead thereof a four days' notice shall be substituted, requiring the defendant to produce the record, otherwise judgment.

39. The costs of the day for not proceeding to trial or to execute a writ of inquiry may be obtained by a side-bar rule, on the usual affidavit.

40. In all cases where the plaintiff's pleading is in denial of the pleading of the defendant, without joining issue, the plaintiff's attorney may give notice of trial at the time of delivering his replication or other subsequent pleading; and in case issue shall afterwards be joined, such notice shall be available; but if issue be not joined on such replication or other subsequent pleading, and the plaintiff shall sign judgment for want thereof, and forthwith give notice of executing a writ of inquiry, such notice shall operate from the time that notice of trial was given as aforesaid; and in all cases where the defendant demurs to the plaintiff's declaration, replication, or other subsequent pleading, the defendant's attorney, or the defendant, if he plead in person, shall be obliged to accept notice of executing a writ of inquiry on the back of the joinder in demurrer; and in case the defendant pleads a plea in bar or rejoinder, &c., to which the plaintiff demurs, the defendant's attorney, or the defendant, if he plead in person, shall be obliged to accept notice of executing a writ of inquiry on the back of such demurrer.

41. Notice of a trial at bar shall be given to the Masters of the court before giving notice of trial to the party.

42. No trial by proviso shall be allowed in the same term in which the default of the plaintiff has been made, and no rule for a trial by proviso shall be necessary.

43. All causes to be entered for trial in London and Middlesex shall be entered as follows: that is to say, if notice of trial shall be given for any sitting within term, two days before the day of sitting; and if for a sitting after term, before eight o'clock P. M. of the day before the first day of such sitting; and if the same shall not be so entered for such sittings respectively, a ne recipiatur may be entered.

JURY—SPECIAL JURY—VIEW.

44. No rule for a special jury shall be granted on behalf of any defendant, (or plaintiff in replevin), except on an affidavit, either stating that no notice of trial has been given, or if it has been given, then stating the day for which such notice has been given; and in the latter case, no such rule is to be granted unless such application is made for it more than six days before that day; provided that a judge may, on summons, order a rule for a special jury to be drawn up at any time.

45. No cause shall be tried by a special jury, in Middlesex or London, unless the rule for such special jury be served, and the cause marked in the Associate's book as a special jury cause, on or before the day preceding the day appointed, in Middlesex and London respectively, for the trial of special juries.

46. There shall be no rule for the sheriff to return a good jury upon a writ of inquiry, but an order shall be made by a judge upon summons for that purpose.

47. Sheriffs, other than the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex, shall, seven days before the commission day, make, and keep at their offices for inspection, a printed copy of the panel of the special jurymen to try the special jury causes at the assizes, as directed by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852; but such special jury need not be summoned, except notice be given, as provided for by the 112th section of the said act.

48. The rule for a view may, in all cases, be drawn up by the officer of the court, on the application of the party, without a motion for that purpose.

49. Upon any application for a view there shall be an affidavit, stating the place at which the view is to be made, and the distance thereof from the office of the undersheriff, and the sum to be deposited in the hand of the undersheriff shall be 10*l.* in case of a common jury, and 16*l.* in case of a special jury, if such distance do not exceed five miles, and 15*l.* in case of a common jury, and 21*l.* in case of a special jury, if it be above five miles; and if such sum shall be more than sufficient to pay the expenses of the view, the surplus shall forthwith be returned to the attorney of the party who obtained the view; and if such sum shall not be sufficient to pay such expenses, the deficiency shall forthwith be paid by such attorney to the undersheriff. And the undersheriff shall pay, and account for the money so deposited, according to the scale following; that is to say—

For travelling expenses to the undersheriff, showers, and jurymen, expenses actually paid, if reasonable.
Fee to the undersheriff, when the distance does not exceed five miles from his office .....	1	1	0
Where such distance exceeds five miles.....	2	2	0
And in case he shall be necessarily absent more than one day, then for each day after the first a further fee of .....	1	1	0
Fee to each of the showers the same as the undersheriff, calculating the distance from their respective places of abode.
Fee to each common jurymen, per diem .....	0	5	0
For each special jurymen, per diem .....	1	1	0
Allowance for refreshment to the undersheriff, showers, and jurymen, whether common or special, each per diem.....	0	5	0
To the bailiff for summoning each jurymen whose residence is not more than five miles distant from the office of the undersheriff...	0	2	6

NEW TRIALS, MOTIONS IN ARREST OF JUDGMENT, AND JUDGMENT NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.

50. No motion for a new trial, or to enter verdict or nonsuit, motion in arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, shall be allowed after the expiration of four days from the day of trial, nor in any case after the expiration of the term, if the cause be tried in or after the expiration of the first four days of the ensuing term when the cause is tried out of term, unless entered in a list of postponed motions by leave of the Court.

51. No suitor who appears in person shall be at liberty to set down any motion in such list of postponed motions, without the express leave of the Court.

52. No affidavit shall be used in support of a motion for a new trial in any case, unless such affidavit shall have been made within the time limited for the making such motion, without the special permission of the Court for that purpose.

53. If such motion as above mentioned be entered in such list of postponed motions, or if such motion be postponed by leave of the Court in the case of a cause tried in term, the attorney who has instructed counsel to make the motion shall give notice of it to the attorney of the opposite party, otherwise judgment signed on behalf of the opposite party shall be deemed regular, and every suitor who appears in person shall give a similar notice.

54. If a new trial be granted without any mention of costs in the rule, the costs of the first trial shall not be allowed to the successful party, though he succeed on the second.

JUDGMENT.

55. No rule for judgment shall be necessary; and after the return of a writ of inquiry, judgment may be signed at the expiration of four days from such return.

56. All judgments, whether interlocutory or final, shall be entered of record of the day of the month and year, whether in term or vacation, when signed, and shall not have relation to any other day; but it shall be competent for the court or a judge to order a judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc.

57. When a plaintiff or defendant has obtained a verdict in term, or in case a plaintiff has been nonsuited at the trial in or out of term, judgment may be signed and execution issued thereon in fourteen days, unless the judge who tries the cause, or some other judge, or the Court, shall order execution to issue at an earlier or later period, with or without terms.

58. Where issue shall be joined in any cause which is ordered to be tried before the sheriff or a judge of an inferior court of record, the defendant may at the time when, according to the 101st section of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, a defendant might give notice to the plaintiff to bring on an issue to be tried, give twenty days' notice to the plaintiff to bring on the issue to be tried, before such sheriff or judge, at the court to be holden next after the expiration of such twenty days; and if the plaintiff neglects to give notice of trial before such sheriff or judge, or to proceed to trial in pursuance thereof, the defendant may proceed as provided for by the said 101st section.

COSTS—SETTING OFF DAMAGES OR COSTS.

59. One day's notice of taxing costs, together with a copy of the bill of costs and affidavit of increase (if any), shall be given by the attorney of the party whose costs are to be taxed, to the other party, or his attorney, in all cases where a notice to tax is necessary.

60. One appointment only shall be deemed necessary for proceeding in the taxation of costs, or of an attorney's bill.

61. Notice of taxing costs shall not be necessary in any case where the defendant has not appeared in person, or by his attorney or guardian.

62. When issues in law and fact are raised, the costs of the several issues both in law and fact will follow the finding or judgment, and if the party entitled to the general costs of the cause obtain a verdict on any material issue, he will also be entitled to the general costs of the trial; but if no material issue in fact be found for the party otherwise entitled to the general costs of the cause, the costs of the trial shall be allowed to the opposite party.

63. No set-off of damages or costs between parties shall be allowed to the prejudice of the attorney's lien for costs in the particular suit against which the set-off is sought; provided nevertheless, that interlocutory costs in the same suit, awarded to the adverse party, may be deducted.

ERROR.

64. Within eight days after the filing with the Master of the memorandum of error in fact, required by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, the plaintiff in error shall assign error; and in default, the defendant in error, his executors or administrators, shall be entitled to sign judgment of non pros.

65. No rule to plead to assignment of error in fact, or any other pleadings in error, shall be necessary, but either party may give to the opposite party a notice to answer such pleading within four days, otherwise judgment, which notice may be delivered separately, or indorsed on the pleading.

66. Notice of trial, and all other proceedings thereon, shall be the same as in issues joined in an ordinary action.

67. After the suggestion of error in law, alleged and denied as prescribed by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, is entered, either party may set down the case for argument, and forthwith give notice in writing to the opposite party, and proceed to the argument thereof as on a demurrer, without any rule or motion for a concilium.

68. Four clear days before the day appointed for argument the plaintiff in error shall deliver copies of the judgment roll of the court below to the judges of the Queen's Bench on error from the Common Pleas or Exchequer, and to the judges of the Common Pleas on error from the Queen's Bench; and the defendant in error shall deliver copies thereof to the other judges of the Court of Exchequer Chamber before whom the case is to be heard; and in default by either party, the other party may on the following day deliver such books as ought to have been delivered by the party making default, and the party making default shall not be heard until he shall have paid for such copies, or deposited with the Master a sufficient sum to pay for such copies.

69. The costs of proceedings in error shall be taxed and allowed as costs in the cause.

EXECUTION.

70. It shall not be necessary, before issuing execution upon any judgment whatever, to enter the proceedings upon any roll.

71. No writ of execution shall be issued till the judgment paper, postea, or inquisition, as the case may be, has been seen by the proper officer, nor shall any writ of execution be issued without a præcipe being filed with the proper officer.

72. Every writ of execution shall bear date on the day on which the same shall be issued, and shall be tested in the name of the Lord Chief Justice or of the Lord Chief Baron of the court from which the same shall issue, or in case of a vacancy of such office, then in the name of the senior puisne judge of the said court, and may be made returnable on a day certain in term.

73. Every writ of execution shall be indorsed with the name and place of abode, or office of business, of the attorney actually suing out the same; and in case such attorney shall not be an attorney of the court in which the same is sued out, then also with the name and place of abode or office of business of the attorney of such court in whose name such writ shall be taken out; and when the attorney actually suing out any writ shall sue out the same as agent for an attorney in the country, the name and place of abode of such attorney in the country shall also be indorsed upon the said writ; and in case no attorney shall be employed to issue the writ, then it shall be indorsed with a memorandum expressing that the same has been sued out by the plaintiff or defendant in person, as the case may be, mentioning the city, town, or parish, and also the name of the hamlet, street, and number of the house of such plaintiff's or defendant's residence, if any such there be.

74. Writs of capias ad satisfaciendum for the purposes of outlawry on final process, or to fix bail, must be made returnable on a day certain in term, and may be so returnable on any day in term, and is shall be sufficient for either purpose that there be eight days between the tests and return.

75. A writ of capias ad satisfaciendum to fix bail shall have eight days between the tests and return, and must, in London and Middlesex, be entered four clear days in the public book at the sheriff's office.

76. Every writ of execution shall be indorsed with a direction to the sheriff, or other officer or person to whom the writ is directed, to levy the money really due and payable and sought to be recovered, under the judgment, stating the amount, and also to levy interest thereon, if sought to be recovered, at the rate of 4l. per centum per annum from the time when the judgment was entered up, or if it was entered up before the 1st of October, 1838, then from that day; provided that in cases where there is an agreement between the parties that more than 4l. per centum interest shall be secured by the judgment, then the indorsement may be accordingly to levy the amount of interest so agreed.

77. In cases of an assessment of further damages, pursuant to the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, it shall be stated in the body of the writ of execution, that the sheriff, or other officer or person to whom the writ is directed, is to levy interest on the damages assessed, and costs taxed in that behalf, at the rate of 4l. per centum per annum from the day on which execution was awarded, unless execution was awarded before the 1st October, 1838, and in that case from that day.

REVIVOR AND SCIRE FACIAS.

78. A plaintiff shall not be allowed a rule to quash his own writ of scire facias or revivor after a defendant has appeared, except on payment of costs.

AUDITA QUERELA.

79. No writ of audita querela shall be allowed unless by rule of court or order of a judge.

ENTRY OF SATISFACTION ON ROLL.

80. In order to acknowledge satisfaction of a judgment, it shall be requisite only to produce a satisfaction piece, in form as hereinafter mentioned; and such satisfaction piece shall be signed by the party or parties acknowledging the same, or their personal representatives; and such signature or signatures shall be witnessed by a practising attorney of one of the courts at Westminster expressly named by him or them, and attending at his or their request, to inform him or them of the nature and effect of such satisfaction piece before the same is signed, and which attorney shall declare himself, in the attestation thereto, to be the attorney for the person or persons so signing the same, and state he is witness as such attorney; [provided that a judge at chambers may make an order dispensing with such signature under special circumstances, if he thinks fit,] and in cases where the satisfaction piece is signed by the personal representative of a deceased, his representative character shall be proved in such manner as the Master may direct.

BAILABLE PROCEEDINGS, BAIL, AND BAIL IN ERROR.

81. The sheriff, or other officer or person to whom any writ of capias shall be directed, or who shall have the execution and return thereof, shall, within six days at least after the execution thereof, indorse on such writ the true day of the execution thereof.

82. Where the defendant is described in the writ of capias or affidavit to hold to bail, by initials, or by a wrong name, or without a Christian name, the defendant shall not be discharged out of custody, or the bail-bond delivered up to be cancelled, on motion for that purpose, if it shall appear to the Court that due diligence has been used to obtain knowledge of the proper name.

83. An action may be brought upon a bail-bond by the sheriff himself in any court.

84. In all cases where the bail-bond shall be directed to stand as a security, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to sign judgment upon it.

85. Proceedings on the bail-bond may be stayed on payment of costs in one action, unless sufficient reason be shewn for proceeding in more.

86. When bail to the sheriff become bail to the action, the plaintiff may except to them, though he has taken an assignment of the bail-bond.

87. A plaintiff shall not be at liberty to proceed on the bail-bond, pending a rule to bring in the body of the defendant.

88. No rule shall be drawn up for setting aside an attachment regularly obtained against a sheriff, for not bringing in the body, or for staying proceedings regularly commenced on the assignment of any bail-bond, unless the application for such rule shall, if made on the part of the original defendant, be grounded on an affidavit of merits, or if made on the part of the sheriff, or bail, or any officer of the sheriff, be grounded on an affidavit, shewing that such application is really and truly made on the part of the sheriff, or bail, or officer of the sheriff, as the case may be, at his or their own expense, and for his or their indemnity only, and without collusion with the original defendant.

89. Whenever a plaintiff shall rule the sheriff on a return of cepi corpus to bring in the body, the defendant shall be at liberty to put in and perfect bail at any time before the expiration of such rule; and, a plaintiff having so ruled the sheriff, shall not proceed on any assignment of the bail-bond, until the time has expired to bring in the body as aforesaid.

90. In case a rule for returning a writ of capias shall expire in vacation, and the sheriff or other officer having the return of such writ shall return cepi corpus thereon, a rule may thereupon issue, requiring the sheriff or other officer, within the like number of days after the service of such rule as by the practice of the Court is prescribed with respect to rules to bring in the body issued in term, to bring the defendant into court, by forthwith putting in and perfecting bail above to the action; and if the sheriff or other officer shall not duly obey such rule an attachment shall issue in the following term for disobedience of such rule, whether the bail shall or shall not have been put in and perfected in the meantime.

91. Notice of more bail than two shall be deemed irregular, unless by order of the court or a judge.

92. The bail, of whom notice shall be given, shall not be changed without leave of the court or a judge.

93. No person or persons shall be permitted to justify himself or themselves as good and sufficient bail for any defendant or defendants if such person or persons shall have been indemnified for so doing by the attorney or attorneys concerned for any such defendant or defendants.

94. If any person put in as bail to the action, except for the purpose of rendering only, be a practising attorney, or clerk to a practising attorney, or a sheriff's officer, bailiff, or person concerned in the execution of process, the plaintiff may treat the bail as a nullity, and sue upon the bail-bond as soon as the time for putting in bail has expired, unless good bail be duly put in in the meantime.

95. In the case of country bail, the bail-piece shall be transmitted and filed within eight days.

96. A defendant may justify bail at the same time at which they are put in, upon giving four days' notice for that purpose, before eleven o'clock in the morning, and exclusive of Sunday. If the plaintiff is desirous of time to inquire after the bail, and shall give one day's notice thereof as aforesaid to the defendant, his attorney or agent, as the case may be, before the time appointed for justification, stating therein what further time is required, such time not to exceed three days, then (unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order) the time for putting in and justifying bail shall be postponed accordingly, and all proceedings shall be stayed in the meantime.

97. Every notice of bail shall, in addition to the descriptions of the bail, mention the street or place, and number (if any), where each of the bail resides, and all the streets or places, and numbers (if any), in which each of them has been resident at any time within the last six months, and whether he is a housekeeper or freeholder.

98. If the notice of bail shall be accompanied by an affidavit of each of the bail, according to the following form, and if the plaintiff afterwards except to such bail, he shall, if such bail are allowed, pay the costs of justification; and, if such bail are rejected, the defendant shall pay the costs of opposition, unless the court or a judge thereof shall otherwise order.

Form of Affidavit of Justification of Bail.

In the Queen's Bench [or "Common Pleas," or "Exchequer of Pleas," as the case may be.]

Between A. B., Plaintiff, and C. D., Defendant.

B. B., one of the bail for the above-named defendant, maketh oath, and saith, that he is a housekeeper [or freeholder, as the case may be.] residing at —, [describing particularly the street or place, and number, if any]; that he is worth property to the amount of £— [the amount required by the practice of the Courts] over and above what will pay all his just debts, [if bail in any other action, add "and every other sum for which he is now bail"]; that he is not bail for any defendant except in this action [or, if bail in any other action or actions, add "except for C. D., at the suit of E. F., in the court of —, in the sum of £—, for G. H., at the suit of I. K., in the court of —, in the sum of £—," specifying the several actions, with the courts in which they are brought, and the sums in which the deponent is bail]; that the deponent's property, to the amount of the said sum of £—, [if bail in any other action or actions, here add "and of all other sums for which he is now bail as aforesaid"], consists of [here specify the nature and value of the property in respect of which the bail proposes to justify, as follows: "stock in trade, in his business of —, carried on by him at —, of the value of £—; of good book debts owing to him to the amount of £—; of furniture in his house at —, of the value of £—; of a freehold or leasehold farm of the value of £—, situate at —, occupied by —, or of a dwelling-house of the value of £—, situate at —, occupied by —;" or of other property, particularising each description of property with the value thereof]; and that the deponent hath for the last six months resided at — [describing the place or places of such residence].

Sworn [&c., as usual].

99. If the plaintiff shall not give one day's notice of exception to the bail by whom such affidavit shall have been made, the recognisance of such bail may be taken out of court without other justification than such affidavit.

100. Where notice of bail shall not be accompanied by such affidavit, and in bail in error, the plaintiff may except thereto within twenty days next after the putting in of such bail, and notice thereof, given in writing to the plaintiff or his attorney, or where special bail is put in before any commissioner, the plaintiff may except thereto within twenty days next after the bail-piece is transmitted and notice thereof given as aforesaid; and no exception to bail shall be admitted after the time hereinbefore limited.

101. Affidavits of justification shall be deemed insufficient unless they state that each person justifying is worth double the amount sworn to, over and above what will pay his just debts, and over and above every other sum for which he is then bail, except when the sum sworn to exceeds 1,000*l.*, when it shall be sufficient for the bail to justify in 1,000*l.* beyond the sum sworn to.

102. It shall be sufficient, in all cases, if notice of justification of bail be given two days before the time of justification.

103. In all cases, bail either to the action or in error shall be justified, when required, within four days after exception, before a judge at chambers, both in term and vacation.

104. Bail, though rejected, shall be allowed to render the principal without entering into a fresh recognisance.

105. Bail shall be at liberty to render the principal at any time during the last day for rendering, so as they make such render before the prison doors are closed for the night.

106. On application by a defendant or his bail, or either of them, for an order to render a defendant to a county gaol, it shall be specified on whose behalf such application shall be made, the state of the proceedings in the cause, for what amount the defendant was held to bail, and by the sheriff of what county he was arrested, which facts shall be stated in the order; and that on such order being lodged with the gaoler of the county gaol in which such defendant was so arrested, the defendant may be rendered to his custody in discharge of the bail; and that on such lodgment and render, a notice thereof, and of the defendant's being actually in custody thereon, in writing, signed by the defendant or his bail, or either of them, or the attorney or agent of any or either of them, shall be delivered to the plaintiff's attorney or agent, and thereupon the bail for the said defendant shall be wholly exonerated, without entering any exoneretur.

107. If a defendant shall be in custody of the gaoler of any county gaol, by virtue of any process issued out of any of the said courts, he may be rendered in discharge of his bail in any action depending in the said court in like manner as is last hereinbefore provided, and thereupon the bail shall be wholly exonerated, without entering any exoneretur.

108. Where the plaintiff proceeds by action on the recognisance of bail, the bail shall be at liberty to render their principal at any time within the space of eight days next after the service of the process upon them, but not at any later period; and notice thereof given, the proceedings shall be stayed upon payment of the costs of the writ and service thereof only.

109. Bail shall only be liable to the sum sworn to by the affidavit of debt and the costs of suit, not exceeding in the whole the amount of their recognisance.

110. To entitle bail to a stay of proceedings, pending a writ of error, the application must be made before the time to surrender is out.

111. Whenever two or more notices of justification of bail shall have been given before the notice on which bail shall appear to justify, no bail shall be permitted to justify without first paying (or securing to the satisfaction of the plaintiff, his attorney, or agent,) the reasonable costs incurred by such prior notices, although the names of the persons intended to justify, or any of them, may not have been changed, and whether the bail mentioned in any such prior notice shall not have appeared, or shall have been rejected.

EJECTMENT.

112. No judgment in ejectment, for want of appearance or defence, whether limited or otherwise, shall be signed without first filing an affidavit of the service of the writ, according to the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, and a copy thereof, or, where personal service has not been effected, without first obtaining a judge's order or a rule of court authorising the signing such judgment; which said rule or order, or a duplicate thereof, shall be filed together with a copy of the writ.

113. Where a person not named in the writ in ejectment has obtained leave of the court or a judge to appear and defend, he shall enter an appearance according to the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, entitled in the action against the party or parties named in the writ as defendant or defendants, and shall forthwith give notice of such appearance to the plaintiff's attorney, or to the plaintiff if he sues in person.

114. If the plaintiff in ejectment appears at the trial, and the defendant does not appear, the defendant shall be taken to have admitted the plaintiff's title, and the verdict shall be entered for the plaintiff, without producing any evidence, and the plaintiff shall have judgment for his costs of suit as in other cases.

CAUSES REMOVED FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

115. Rules to appear in causes removed from inferior courts shall in all cases be a four-day rule, both in term and vacation.

116. In cases of removal of causes from inferior courts by habeas corpus, where bail is required to be put in on behalf of the defendant, the same practice shall be used, as near as may be, as in putting in bail to an ordinary action, and in the event of no bail being put in within eight days after the habeas corpus allowed a procedendo may issue.

117. If a cause be removed from an inferior court having jurisdiction of the cause, the costs in the court below shall be costs in the cause.

PENAL ACTIONS, COMPOUNDING OF.

118. Leave to compound a penal action shall not be given in cases where part of the penalty goes to the Crown, unless notice shall have been given to the proper officer; but in other cases it may.

119. The rule for compounding any qui tam action shall express therein that the defendant thereby undertakes to pay the sum for which the Court has given him leave to compound such action.

120. When leave is given by the Court of Queen's Bench to compound a penal action, the Queen's half of the composition shall be paid into the hands of the Master of the Crown Office for the use of her Majesty.

PAUPERS, ACTION BY.

121. No person shall be admitted to sue in forma pauperis unless the case laid before counsel for his opinion, and his opinion thereon, with an affidavit of the party or his attorney that the same case contains a full and true statement of all the material facts, to the best of his knowledge and belief, shall be produced before the court or judge to whom application may be made; and no fees shall be payable by a pauper to his counsel and attorney, nor at the offices of the Masters, or Associates, or at the judges' chambers, or elsewhere, by reason of a verdict being found for such pauper exceeding 5*l*.

122. Where a pauper omits to proceed to trial, pursuant to notice, he may be called upon by a rule to shew cause why he should not pay costs, though he has not been dispaupered, and why all further proceedings should not be stayed until such costs shall be paid.

PRISONERS, AND PROCEEDINGS AGAINST.

123. Every rule or order of a judge directing the discharge of a defendant out of custody upon special bail being put in and perfected shall also direct a supersedeas to issue forthwith where defendant is in a county gaol.

124. The plaintiff shall proceed to trial, or final judgment, against a prisoner in the term next after issue is joined, or at the sittings or assizes next after such term, unless the court or a judge shall otherwise order, and shall cause the defendant to be charged in execution within the term next after such trial or judgment.

125. The keeper of the Queen's Prison shall present to the judges of the courts in their respective chambers at Westminster, within the first four days of every term, a list of all such prisoners as are supersedeable, showing as to what actions and on what account they are so, and as to what actions (if any) they still remain not supersedeable.

126. If, by reason of any writ of error, special order of the Court, agreement of parties, or other special matter, any person detained in the actual custody of the keeper of the Queen's Prison be not entitled to a supersedeas or discharge for want of proceeding to trial or judgment, or charging in execution, within the times prescribed, then and in every such case the plaintiff or plaintiffs at whose suit such prisoner shall be so detained in custody shall, with all convenient speed, give notice in writing of such writ of error, special order, agreement, or other special matter, to the keeper, upon pain of losing the right to detain such prisoner in custody by reason of such special matter; and the keeper shall forthwith, after the receipt of such notice, cause the matter thereof to be entered in the books of the prison, and shall also present to the judges of the respective courts, from time to time, a list of the prisoners to whom such special matter shall relate, showing such special matter, together with the list of the prisoners supersedeable.

127. All prisoners who have been or shall be in the custody of the keeper for the space of one calendar month after they are supersedeable, although not superseded, shall be forthwith discharged out of the Queen's Prison as to all such actions in which they have been or shall be supersedeable.

128. After notice given to any plaintiff by a prisoner of his intention to apply for his discharge under any act for the relief of insolvent debtors, no such prisoner shall be superseded or discharged out of custody at the suit of such plaintiff, by reason of such plaintiff's forbearing to proceed against him according to the rules and practice of the courts from the time of such notice given, until some rule or order shall be made in the cause in that behalf.

129. A rule or order for the discharge of a prisoner who has been detained in execution a year for a sum under twenty pounds, may be made absolute in the first instance, on an affidavit of notice given ten days before the intended application, which notice may be given before the year expires.

SHERIFFS—RULES TO RETURN WRITS OR BRING IN THE BODY.

130. All rules upon the Sheriffs of London and Middlesex to return writs or to bring in the bodies of defendants shall be four-day rules, and upon other sheriffs eight-day rules.

131. When the rule to return a writ expires in vacation, the sheriff shall file the writ at the expiration of the rule, or as soon after as the office shall be open; and the officer with whom it is filed shall indorse the day and hour when it was filed.

132. No judge's order shall issue for the return of any writ, or to bring in the body of a defendant, but a side-bar rule shall issue for that purpose in vacation as in term, which shall be of the same force and effect as side-bar rules made for that purpose in term.

133. In case a rule shall issue in vacation for the return of any writ of capias, ca. sa., fi. fa., elegit, habere facias possessionem, venditioni exponas, or other writ of execution, and such rule shall have been duly served, but obedience shall not have been paid thereto, an attachment shall issue for disobedience of such rule, whether the thing required by such rule shall or shall not have been done in the meantime.

134. Where any sheriff, before his going out of office, shall arrest any defendant and take a bail bond and make return of cepi corpus, he shall and may, within the time allowed by law, be called upon to bring in the body by a rule for that purpose, notwithstanding he may be out of office before such rule shall be granted.

IRREGULARITY.

135. No application to set aside process or proceedings for irregularity shall be allowed unless made within a reasonable time, nor if the party applying has taken a fresh step after knowledge of the irregularity.

136. Where a summons is obtained to set aside proceedings for irregularity, the several objections intended to be insisted upon shall be stated therein.

137. In all cases where a rule is obtained to shew cause why proceedings should not be set aside for irregularity with costs, and such rule is afterwards discharged generally without any special direction upon the matter of costs, it is to be understood as discharged with costs.

AFFIDAVITS.

138. The addition and true place of abode of every person making an affidavit shall be inserted therein.

139. In every affidavit made by two or more deponents, the names of the several persons making such affidavit shall be written in the jurat.

140. No affidavit shall be read or made use of in any matter depending in court in the jurat of which there shall be any interlineation or erasure.

141. Where any affidavit is sworn before any judge or any commissioner by any person who from his or her signature appears to be illiterate, the judge's clerk or commissioner taking such affidavit shall certify or state in the jurat that the affidavit was read in his presence to the party making the same, and that such party seemed perfectly to understand the same, and also that the said party wrote his or her mark or signature in the presence of the judge's clerk or commissioner taking the said affidavit.

142. No affidavit of the service of process shall be deemed sufficient if sworn before the plaintiff's own attorney or his clerk.

143. Where an agent in town, or an attorney in the country, is the attorney on the record, an affidavit sworn before the attorney in the country shall not be received; and an affidavit sworn before an attorney's clerk shall not be received in cases where it would not be receivable if sworn before the attorney himself; but this rule shall not extend to affidavits to hold to bail.

144. An affidavit sworn before a judge of any of the courts shall be received in the court to which such judge belongs, though not entitled of that court, but not in any other court unless entitled of the court in which it is to be used.

145. Where a special time is limited for filing affidavits, no affidavit filed after that time shall be made use of in court or before the Master, unless by leave of a court or a judge.

146. No rule which the Court has granted upon the foundation of any affidavit shall be of any force unless such affidavit shall have been actually made before such rule was moved for, and produced in court at the time of making the motion.

147. All affidavits used before a judge out of court shall be filed with the Masters of the said courts, and be alphabetically indexed; and such affidavits shall be delivered to the Masters of the respective courts, in order to be filed, ten days next after that on which the matter is disposed of.

148. No commission for taking affidavits shall be issued to any person practising as a conveyancer, unless such person be also an attorney or solicitor of one of the courts at Westminster; and no such commission shall issue without an affidavit made by the person intended to be named therein, that he is not and does not intend to become a practising conveyancer, or that he is an attorney or solicitor duly enrolled in one of the said courts, and hath taken out his certificate for the current year.

RULES, SUMMONSES, AND ORDERS.

149. Every rule of court shall be dated the day of the week, month, and year on which the same is drawn up, without reference to any other time or date.

150. Side bar rules may be obtained on the last as well as on other days in term.

151. A rule may be enlarged, if the Court think fit, without notice.

152. All enlarged rules shall be drawn up for the first day in the ensuing term, unless otherwise ordered by the Court.

153. It shall not be necessary to issue more than one summons for attendance before a judge, upon the same matter, and the party taking out such summons shall be entitled to an order on the return thereof, unless cause is shown to the contrary.

154. An attendance on a summons, or on an appointment before a master, for half an hour next immediately following the return thereof, shall be deemed a sufficient attendance.

155. All written consents upon which orders for signing judgments are obtained shall be preserved in the chambers of the judges of the respective courts.

156. In actions where the defendant has appeared by attorney no such order shall be made unless the consent of the defendant be given by his attorney or agent.

157. Where the defendant has not appeared or has appeared in person, no such order shall be made unless the defendant attends the judge, and gives his consent in person, or unless his written consent be attested by an attorney acting on his behalf; except in a case where the defendant is a barrister, conveyancer, special pleader, or attorney.

158. Where a judge's order is made during vacation, it shall not be made a rule of court before the next term.

159. Where a judge's order or order of Nisi Prius is made a rule of court, it shall be a part of the rule that the costs of making the order a rule of court shall be paid by the party against whom the order is made, provided an affidavit be made and filed that the order has been served on the party, his attorney or agent, and disobeyed.

160. Rules to show cause shall be no stay of proceedings unless two days notice of the motion shall have been served on the opposite party, except in the cases of rules for new trials, or to enter verdict or nonsuit, motion in arrest of judgment, or for judgment non obstante veredicto, to set aside award or annuity deed, or to enter a suggestion, or by the special direction of the Court.

NOTICES, SERVICE OF, AND OF RULES, PLEADINGS, &c.

161. All notices required by these rules, or by the practice of the Court, shall be in writing.

162. Where the residence of a defendant is unknown, rules, notices, and other proceedings may be stuck up in the office, but not without previous leave of the court or a judge.

163. It shall not be necessary to the regular service of a rule or order, that the original rule or order should be shown, unless sight thereof be demanded, except in cases of attachment.

164. Service of pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings shall be made before 7 o'clock p.m. If made after that hour, the service shall be deemed as made on the following day.

165. The Masters of the several courts shall cause to be kept an alphabetical book at their offices, to be there inspected by any attorney or his clerk, without fee or reward:—and every attorney practising in the said courts, and residing within ten miles of the General Post Office, shall enter in such book (in alphabetical order) his name and place of business, or some other proper place, within three miles of the said post office, where he may be served with pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings; and as often as any such attorney shall change his place of business, or the place where he may be so served as aforesaid, he shall make the like entry thereof in the said book; and all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings which do not require a personal service shall be deemed sufficiently served on such attorney if a copy thereof shall be left at the place lastly entered in such book with any person resident at or belonging to such place; and if any such attorney shall neglect to make such entry, the fixing up of any notice, or the copy of any pleadings, notice, summons, order, rule, or other proceeding, for such attorney, in the Masters' offices, shall be deemed a sufficient notice.

166. In all cases where a party sues or defends in person, he shall, upon issuing any writ of summons or other proceeding, or entering an appearance, enter in a book to be kept for that purpose at the Master's office an address within three miles from the General Post Office, at which all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings not requiring personal service shall be left; and if such address shall not be entered in the said book, or if such address shall be more than three miles from the General Post Office, then the opposite party shall be at liberty to proceed by sticking up all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, or other proceedings in the Master's office without the necessity of any further service.

167. In all cases where a plaintiff shall have sued out a writ in person, or a defendant shall have appeared in person, and either party shall by an attorney of the court have given notice in writing to the opposite party, or the attorney or agent of such party, of such attorney being authorised to act as attorney for the party on whose behalf such notice is given, all pleadings, notices, summonses, orders, rules, and other proceedings which according to the practice of the courts are to be delivered to or served upon the party on whose behalf such notice is given shall thereafter be delivered to or served upon such attorney.

ATTACHMENT.

168. Rules for attachments shall be absolute in the first instance in the two following cases only, viz. first, for non-payment of costs on a Master's allocatur; secondly, against a sheriff for not obeying a rule to return a writ or to bring in the body.

AWARDS AND ANNUITIES.

169. Where a rule to shew cause is obtained to set aside an award or annuity, the several objections thereto intended to be insisted upon at the time of moving to make such rule absolute shall be stated in the rule to shew cause.

170. Costs may be taxed on an award, notwithstanding the time for setting aside the award has not elapsed.

MISCELLANEOUS.

171. On a reference to the Master to ascertain the amount for which final judgment is to be signed, the Master's certificate shall be filed in the office when judgment is signed.

172. On every appointment made by the Master, the party on whom the same shall be served shall attend such appointment without waiting for a second, or in default thereof, the Master may proceed ex parte on the first appointment.

173. The Masters' offices in the several courts shall be open in term time, from eleven o'clock in the forenoon till five o'clock in the afternoon, and not in the evening; and in the vacation, from eleven o'clock in the forenoon till three o'clock in the afternoon, except between the 10th day of August and the 24th day of October, when they are to be open from eleven in the morning till two in the afternoon, and except on Good Friday, Easter Eve, Monday and Tuesday in Easter week, Christmas Day, and the three following days, and such of the four following days as may not fall in the time of term, but not otherwise, namely, the Queen's birthday, the Queen's accession, Whit Monday, and Whit Tuesday, when the offices shall be closed.

174. In all cases in which any particular number of days, not expressed to be clear days, is prescribed by the rules or practice of the courts, the same shall be reckoned exclusively of the first day, and inclusively of the last day, unless the last day shall happen to fall on a Sunday, Christmas Day, Good Friday, or a day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, in which case the time shall be reckoned exclusively of that day also.

175. The days between Thursday next before, and the Wednesday next after Easter Day, and Christmas Day and the three following days, shall not be reckoned or included in any rules, notices, or other proceedings, except notices of trial or notices of inquiry.

176. In all causes in which there have been no proceedings for one year from the last proceeding had, the party, whether plaintiff or defendant, who desires to proceed, shall give a calendar month's notice to the other party of his intention to proceed. The summons of a judge, if no order be made thereupon, shall not be deemed a proceeding within this rule. Notice of trial, though afterwards countermanded, shall be deemed a proceeding within it.

FORMS OF PROCEEDINGS.

The forms of proceedings contained in the schedule hereunder may be used in the cases to which they are applicable, with such alterations as the nature of the action, the description of the court in which the action is depending, the character of the parties, or the circumstances of the case may render necessary; but any variance therefrom, not being in matter of substance, shall not affect their validity or regularity.

SCHEDULE.

1.—Form of an Issue in General.

In the Queen's Bench [or "Common Pleas," or "Exchequer of Pleas," as the case may be].

The — day of —, in the year of our Lord 18—

Afterwards, on the — day of —, A. D. — (the commission day of the assizes), at — in the county [or "city"] of —, knt., and Sir — knt., Justices of our said lady the Queen, assigned to take the assizes in and for the within county [or "city and county," or "town and county," as the case may be], come the parties within mentioned by their respective attorneys within mentioned; and a jury of the said county [or "city and county," or "town and county," as the case may be,] being summoned also come, who, being sworn to try the matters in question between the said parties, upon their oath say, that [&c. state the negative or affirmative of the issue as it is found for the plaintiff, and in the terms adopted by the pleading.] [If there be several issues joined and tried, then say, "as to the first issue within joined upon their oath, say, that," (&c. state the affirmative or negative of the issue as it is found for the plaintiff,) "and as to the second issue within joined, the jury aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, say, that" (&c. so proceed to state the finding of the jury on all the issues.)] [Conclude with stating an assessment of the damages, thus:] And they assess the damages of the plaintiff on occasion of the premises within complained of by him, over and above his costs of suit, to £—, and for those costs to 40s. Therefore, &c.

5.—Form of a Judgment for Plaintiff on a Verdict in a Town Cause.

(Copy the Nisi Prius record, and then proceed thus:) Afterwards, on the — day of — in the year of our Lord — [day of signing final judgment] come the parties aforesaid, by their respective attorneys aforesaid (or as the case may be, if they have not appeared by attorneys), and the Right Hon. John Lord Campbell, her Majesty's Chief Justice assigned to hold Pleas in the Court of our lady the Queen before the Queen herself, (or if in Common Pleas, "the Right Hon. Sir John Jervis, knt., her Majesty's Chief Justice assigned to hold Pleas in her Majesty's Court of the Bench," or if in the Exchequer, "the Right Hon. Sir Frederick Pollock, knt., Chief Baron of her Majesty's Court of Exchequer," or "Sir —, knt., one of her Majesty's Justices of her Court of — (as the case may be), before whom the said issue was (or "issues were") tried in the absence of her Majesty's Chief Justice, &c." as the case may be,) hath sent hither his record had before him in these words: Afterwards [&c., copy the notes]. Therefore it is considered that the plaintiff do recover against the defendant the said monies by the jurors aforesaid in form aforesaid assessed [or if the action be in debt and the jury do not assess the debt, but only the damages and forty shillings costs, then say "do recover against the defendant the said debt of £—, and the monies by the jurors aforesaid in form aforesaid assessed"]; and also £— for his costs of suit by the Court here adjudged of increase to the plaintiff, which said monies and costs [or "debt, damages, and costs,"] in the whole amount to £—.

[In the margin of the roll, opposite the words "Therefore it is considered," write "Judgment signed the — day of —, A. D. —," stating the day of signing the judgment.]

6.—The like, in a Cause tried at the Assizes.

(Copy the Nisi Prius record, and then proceed thus:) Afterwards, on the — day of — in the year of our Lord — [day of signing final judgment] come the parties aforesaid, by their respective attorneys aforesaid (or, as the case may be); and Sir —, knt., and Sir —, knt., Justices of our lady the Queen assigned to take the assizes in and for the said county [or "city and county," &c., as the case may be], before whom the said issue was [or "issues were"] tried, have sent hither their record had before them in these words. Afterwards, [&c. Conclude as directed in the preceding form.]

7.—Form of an Issue where it is directed to be tried by the Sheriff, &c.

(Commence the issue as in the form No. 1. above prescribed. Then copy all the pleadings, and after the joinder of issue proceed as follows:) And forasmuch as the sum sought to be recovered in this suit, and indorsed on the said writ of summons, does not exceed 20l., hereupon on the — day of —, in the year — (state of writ of trial), pursuant to the statute in that case made and provided, the Sheriff [or "the Judge of —, being a court of record for the recovery of debt in the said county," as the case may be,] is commanded that he summon 12, &c., who neither, &c., who shall be sworn truly to try the issue [or "issues,"] above joined between the parties aforesaid, and that he proceed to try such issue [or "issues,"] accordingly; and when the same shall have been tried that he make known to the Court here what shall have been done by virtue of the writ of our lady the Queen to him in that behalf directed, with the finding of the jury thereon indorsed on the — day of —, &c.

8.—Form of a Writ of Trial before the Sheriff, &c.

Victoria, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith, to the Sheriff of —, [or "to the Judge of —, being a court of record for the recovery of debt in our county of —," as the case may be,] greeting: Whereas A. B. in our Court of Queen's Bench [or "Common Pleas," or "Exchequer of Pleas," as the case may be] at Westminster, on the — (date of first writ of summons) day of — in the year of our Lord — implored C. D. in an action for [&c., here cite the declaration in the past tense,] and the plaintiff claimed £—: And whereas the defendant on the — (date of plea) day of — last, by — his attorney, (or, as the case may be,) came into our said court, and said [&c., here cite the pleas and pleadings to the joinder of issue:] And whereas the sum sought to be recovered in the said action, and indorsed on the writ of summons therein, does not exceed 20l.; and it is fitting that the issue [or "issues"] joined as aforesaid should be tried before you the said Sheriff [or "Judge," as the case may be]: We therefore, pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, command you that you do summon 12 free and lawful men of your county duly qualified according to law, who are in nowise akin to the plaintiff or to the defendant, who shall be sworn truly to try the said issue [or "issues"] joined between the parties aforesaid, and that you proceed to try such issue [or "issues"] accordingly; and when the same shall have been tried in manner aforesaid, we command you that you make known to us [or in the Common Pleas "to our Justices," or in the Exchequer "to the Barons of our said Exchequer," as the case may be,] at Westminster, what shall have been done by virtue of this writ, with the finding of the jury hereon indorsed, on the — day of — next. Witness — [name of the Chief Justice, or of the Chief Baron if the action is in the Exchequer] at Westminster, the — day of — in the year of our Lord —.

9.—Form of Indorsement on the Writ of Trial of the Verdict.

Afterwards, on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord — [day of trial] before me, Sheriff of the county of — [or "Judge of the court of —"] came as well the within-named plaintiff as the within-named defendant, by their respective attorneys within-named, (or, as the case may be,) and the jurors of the jury by me duly summoned, as within commanded, also came, and being duly sworn to try the issue [or "issues"] within mentioned on their oath, said, that [&c. here state the finding of the jury as in a postea on a trial at Nisi Prius].

The answer to S. S., sheriff.

10.—The like, in case a Nonsuit takes place.

[Proceed as in the above form, but after the words "duly sworn to try the issue within-mentioned," proceed as follows:] and were ready to give their verdict in that behalf; but the plaintiff being solemnly called, came not, nor did he further prosecute his said suit against the defendant.

11.—Form of Judgment for the Plaintiff after Trial before the Sheriff.

(Copy the issue, and then proceed as follows:) Afterwards on the — day of —, in the year of our Lord — [day of signing final judgment], come the parties aforesaid, by their respective attorneys aforesaid (as the case may be), and the said Sheriff, [or "Judge," as the case may be], before whom the said issue [or "issues"] came on to be tried, hath sent hither the said last-mentioned writ, with an indorsement thereon, which said indorsement is in these words; to wit, (copy the indorsement). Therefore it is considered, (&c., conclude as in other cases. See the form supra, No. 5.)

LONDON, JANUARY 22, 1853.

In continuing our review of the Common-law Procedure Act, we resume the action of ejectment, first observing, that, since our last notice of the subject, the New Rules of Practice (published in our last number) have been issued by the judges. The following relate to ejectment:—

1st. No judgment, whether for want of appearance or defence, shall be signed without first filing an affidavit of service of the writ, together with a copy thereof; or, where personal service has not been effected, without first obtaining a judge's order or rule of Court authorising the signing of such judgment, which rule or order, or a duplicate thereof, is to be filed, together with a copy of the writ. (See sect. 177 of the act).

2ndly. Where a person not named in the writ has obtained leave to defend, he is to appear and give notice thereof to the plaintiff. (See sect. 172 of the act).

3rdly. If the plaintiff appears at the trial, and the defendant does not, the latter shall be taken to have admitted the plaintiff's title, and the verdict shall be entered for the plaintiff without producing any evidence, and he shall have judgment for his costs, as in other cases. (See sect. 183 of the act; Regulæ Generales, Hilary Term, 1853, rules 112—114).

The action of ejectment is not to abate by reason of the death of one of several claimants or defendants, or, where the right survives, by reason of the death of a sole claimant or defendant; but the action may be continued either by entering a suggestion, or, in some cases, without doing so. (Sects. 190—199).

A claimant may discontinue his action by giving notice to that effect, and thereupon the defendant may sign judgment for costs. So, one of several claimants may discontinue upon terms, by leave of the court or a judge, and the action will then proceed at the suit of the other claimants. (Sects. 200, 201).

A defendant, or one of several defendants, may also confess the action, in which case the claimant will be entitled to costs. (Sects. 203—205).

In conformity with the course of practice adopted in other actions where the plaintiff fails to proceed to trial, it is enacted, that if, in ejectment, after appearance entered, (which is, in fact, joinder of issue in this action), the claimant, without going to trial, allows the time allowed for going to trial, by the practice of the Court, in ordinary cases, after issue joined, to elapse, the defendant may give twenty days' notice to the claimant to proceed to trial at the sittings or assizes next after the expiration of the notice; and if the claimant afterwards neglects to give notice for such sittings or assizes, or to proceed to trial, in pursuance of the defendant's notice, and the time is not duly extended, the defendant may sign judgment for costs. (Sect. 202. See sect. 101 as to the practice in this respect in other actions).

The effect of a judgment in ejectment under the new procedure is to be the same as it was formerly, (sect. 207); so that it will not be conclusive as to the title, though between the same parties, and it will still be necessary to bring an action of trespass for mesne profits, in order to recover the rents and profits of the land, except in cases between landlord and tenant under sect. 214.

Error may be brought in ejectment as in other actions, but execution is not to be stayed unless security is given in double the yearly value of the property and double the costs recovered by the judgment. (Sect. 208). In this section the following words have been left in by mistake—"or by consent, after a special case stated," and, "except in the case of such consent as aforesaid." (See Report of Commissioners, p. 59, and Appendix thereto, p. 80, and sect. 180 of the new act).

Every tenant, to whose knowledge a writ of ejectment shall come, shall forthwith give notice to his landlord, under penalty of forfeiting the value of three years' improved or rack rent of the premises to his landlord. (Sect. 209). We agree with the observation, that now, as the proceedings in ejectment are rendered intelligible, it is to be regretted that the writ does not contain a warning to the tenant of the penalty to which he is liable, unless he gives notice to his landlord. (Quain & Holroyd's edition of the new act, p. 154).

The next three sections (sects. 210—212) relate to proceedings in ejectment by a landlord for non-payment of rent, and are substantially re-enactments of sects. 2, 3, and 4 of the 4 Geo. 2, c. 28.

The next four sections (sects. 213—216) relate to ejectment by a landlord where a tenant holds over after the expiration or determination of his term, and are substantially re-enactments of sects. 1 to 4 of the 1 Geo. 4, c. 87. In sect. 213 some words are omitted by mistake, and it should read, "upon the appearance of the party, or (in case of non-appearance) on (making) an affidavit of service," &c., the landlord may apply for a rule or summons for the tenant to give bail.

The next section (sect. 217) relates to cases where the right of entry accrues in or after Hilary or Trinity Terms, and is substantially a re-enactment of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 70, s. 36.

Then come provisions for ejectment by a mortgagee, (sects. 219, 220), which are re-enactments of the 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, ss. 1, 3.

This finishes the proceedings in ejectment, and we will now briefly consider the remaining clauses, which are of a miscellaneous character.

With regard to judgments, they need not be entered on the roll for the purpose of execution, but an incipitur may be made as heretofore; they may be entered on the roll for the purpose of evidence, or of bringing error, or the like. (Sect. 206*).

The most important section in the act is that which empowers the Courts, and every judge thereof, to make "all such amendments in civil causes as may be necessary for the purpose of determining in the existing suit the real question in controversy between the parties." (Sect. 222).

Power is given to the judges to make rules under the act—a power which, as we have seen, they have lately exercised. (Sects. 223—225).

Formerly an injunction had no effect upon an action, as a Court of common law would not notice it; (Foreman v. Jayes, 5 B. & Ad. 835); but now, upon the production of an injunction, proceedings are to be stayed. (Sect. 226).

Among the words mentioned in the interpretation clause, the only one calling for notice is "action," which is to mean "any personal action brought by writ of summons in any of the superior courts of common law." (Sect. 227). It will be observed, that in some sections (e. g. sect. 148) the word "cause" is used; in others (e. g. sect. 222) the expression "civil causes" is used, which will have a wider signification than the word "action," used in other sections, and defined as above in the interpretation clause.

The act, and rules made under it, may be applied, by Order in Council, to any court of record, (sect. 228); and certain provisions of it are extended to the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and the Court of Pleas at Durham. (Sects. 229—234).

The act is to be cited as "The Common-law Procedure Act, 1852." (Sect. 235).

It is not to extend to Ireland or Scotland, except in the cases specifically mentioned in the act. (Sect. 236). It will be remembered, that the clause relating to actions against British subjects residing out of the jurisdiction of the superior courts is expressly declared not to extend to Scotland or Ireland, (sect. 18); and it may be questionable whether aliens resident in either of those parts of the United Kingdom can be sued under the 19th section.

On a future occasion we shall consider the forms contained in the schedule to the act, together with the New Rules, and forms in the schedule thereto.

THE reluctance of a Court of equity to visit a trustee with all the consequences of his improper acts or defaults, with respect to the trust property, is most justly qualified by the consideration of the effect which may be produced upon the interest of the cestui que trust by the gratification of such a merciful disposition. Justice and mercy are somewhat strangely reconciled in the case of disregard of an express trust, which causes a loss to those beneficially interested.

If an executor be directed to put out surplus rents in the 4l. per Cents. until after the death of a person named, and then such sum as may be found to be divided among certain persons, that is an express trust for accumulation. And yet in such a case Sir Thomas Plumer, V. C., charged the executors, who had disobeyed the direction, only with the arrears of rent, and with the balances in their hands, and interest at 4l. per cent., without rests; but the executors were punished by being decreed to pay the costs of the subsequent inquiries as to the arrears of rent and balances in their hands, these being solely occasioned by their breach of trust. (Tabbs v. Carpenter, 1 Mad. 290).

* This section has unaccountably crept in among the ejectment clauses, although applicable to all actions.

The Vice-Chancellor founded his decision upon a close review of the preceding authorities, all of which he considered supported his view, except Raphael v. Boehm, (11 Ves. 92; 13 Ves. 407, 590). But, unfortunately for the authority of his Honor's decision, Raphael v. Boehm was a case which received the deliberate consideration of Lords Loughborough, Eldon, and Erskine, who all approved of the principle, though the application of it was noticed to be severe, because half-yearly rests were there directed, instead of annual rests. The main ground of the decision in Raphael v. Boehm was the express trust for accumulation. Lord Eldon, on the last occasion on which the case came before him, referring to his previous judgment, is reported to have said, (13 Ves. 592), "My opinion was, that in the instance of an express trust to accumulate, the Court was required to see that the cestuis que trust were placed as near as possible in the situation in which they would have been if the trust had been executed."

We are glad to see this principle carried out by a judge with such comprehensive views of equity as the present Master of the Rolls. The question came before him recently in Knott v. Cotes, (16 Jur., part 1, p. 752). In that case there was an express trust to accumulate, which had been disobeyed. His Honor said—"This is the case of an executor who has a direct and positive trust to perform, which is, to invest and accumulate, at compound interest, the surplus income, after maintaining the family of the testator, and who has failed to perform this trust, but has made certain improper investments. . . . I do not think there is such misconduct as to induce the Court to charge him with 5½ per cent. He must, therefore, be charged with interest at 4½ per cent., . . . with annual rests, since he ought to have accumulated the surplus income: that was a trust which he ought to have performed. . . . Up to the present time the defendant must have his usual costs, as between solicitor and client, out of the estate."

Notwithstanding Tobbs v. Carpenter, which, as well as Raphael v. Boehm, was cited to Sir J. Romilly, M. R., on this occasion, we submit that his Honor's judgment is well grounded, for, among others, the following reasons:—

If a settlor or testator have a right to direct an accumulation, those who accept the execution of the trust created for that purpose, accept an obligation to effect the accumulation, if possible. When, with their eyes open, such trustees neglect to make the accumulation, there is an actual loss to that extent of the trust property which, but for their negligence, would have existed at the termination of the trust. It is not a vindictive proceeding, but simple justice to those beneficially interested, to compel the trustees to make up the trust fund to the required amount, and this is effected as nearly as possible by decreeing them to pay the capital, and interest thereon at 4½ per cent., with yearly rests. The question of the costs of trustees in such a case rests upon different considerations. In giving the trustee, who has been only negligent, his costs, the Court exercises its prerogative of mercy upon very reasonable grounds. The equity of the cestuis que trust to claim the costs of the proceedings to recover the accumulations against the trustees, is balanced by the indisposition of the Court to make those, who have undertaken an onerous trust without reward, suffer too much by their negligent administration of it, in the absence of fraudulent intention. Even this is leaning greatly to the side of mercy, because the cestuis que trust, in most of these cases, may be little, if at all, to blame for the mal-administration of the trust, and in many may be positively unable, from ignorance or disability, to originate any means of prevention, and in all are driven into Chancery, because of the refusal of trustees to replace the fund. We are far, however, from desiring to blame this leniency. It would be a more dangerous error to punish the default of trustees too severely. But it seems to us that this is a sufficient shew of clemency, and that, unless the appointment of trustees is to be considered little better than an idle formality, this decision of Sir John Romilly, charging the trustees with the amount of the accumulated interest, is based upon a sound principle of equity, understanding that word in a wider sense than the merely technical rules which regulate the decisions of the Courts of Chancery.

THE CHURCHWARDENS ELECTION BILL.

In a bill introduced into the House of Lords in the Spring Session of 1852 we have another example of that deliberate and systematic attack, to which we have before called attention, on the system of local self-government—a system which has subsisted in this country for so many ages, and to which this country is indebted, even by the admission of M. Guizot, for the honour of giving to the world the first example of a great nation free and well governed*; and for want of, or by the loss of which, we may add, the great bulk of the population of so many other European countries have sunk into the condition of cattle. To this condition, it appears, from the bill before us, taken in connexion with many other signs of the times, there are some influential individuals desirous of reducing the people of England.

This bill, which was presented by the Bishop of Salisbury, at the request of the Bishop of London, is intitled "An Act for regulating the Election of Churchwardens," and is, in fact, an act for destroying the last remains of what formed the great school for making Englishmen what they have so long been, in contradistinction to Frenchmen, Prussians, and Austrians, namely, the management by themselves of their parochial affairs. Like many acts of Parliament of late years, devised with a like purpose, this bill was brought in quietly, and would have passed unobserved, had not individual attention been called to it; and, to add to the evil, under the present practice it is always extremely difficult, and often quite impossible, for the public to become acquainted with the bills introduced in the House of Lords; so that a great part, if not the whole, of the fundamental laws of England may be swept away without one subject in a hundred thousand knowing anything of the matter until the mischief is done; or, at least, until it is too late to organise any opposition to the threatened evil†.

As the name of the officer called "churchwarden" might lead, perhaps, to the supposition that "the regulating the election of churchwardens" is a matter which properly falls within the province of the ecclesiastical authorities, and therefore that the Bishops of London and Salisbury were not wandering out of their own domains when they took upon them to introduce this bill, it may be proper to shew, on competent authority, what the law of England really is on this point; and in this we shall avail ourselves of an able analysis of this bill made by Mr. Toulmin Smith, as chairman of a committee appointed by the parish of Hornsey to take such measures as should seem to them the most effectual for calling public attention to the nature and consequences of this bill, which proposes serious innovations in the common law of the land, and in the rights and customs of parishioners and vestries, and for opposing its passing into a law.

* See his Life of Washington, sub init.

† It is a crying grievance that the bills introduced in the House of Lords are not printed for public sale.

"Parishes were instituted for the ease and benefit of the people, and not of the parson." (Per Holt, C. J., 3 Salk. 85).

"The churchwardens be officers put in trust for the behoof of their parish; therefore, also, they are not enabled with any other power than for the good and profit of the parish." (Lambard's Dutie of Churchwarden, 72).

"The office of a churchwarden itself is mere temporal." (13 Rep. 70).

"The churchwarden is an officer of the parish, and his misbehaviour will prejudice them, and not the archdeacon. It is an office merely temporal." (Per Holt, C. J., Ld. Raym. 138).

"The churchwarden is a temporal officer. He has the property and custody of the parish goods: and as it is at the peril of the parishioners, so they may choose and trust whom they think fit." (1 Salk. 166).

In the preamble of the bill it is declared, that "the present mode of electing churchwardens is attended with inconvenience, and it is expedient to alter the same." It is not declared to whom the inconvenience attaches. "There might," said Lord Hardwicke, "be an inconvenience on the other side, to say the power [even of adjourning a vestry] is lodged in the vicar; for he might make use of it to influence which churchwarden he thought fit, against the sense of the majority of the parishioners." (Stoughton v. Reynolds, Lee, t. Hardw., 276).

By sects. 2 and 3 it is enacted that all churchwardens shall be elected or appointed yearly, in Easter week, and that the office shall continue until the Easter following. The words "or appointed," in this clause, are important, as indicating the new mode of nomination or appointment to be substituted for the ancient free popular election.

The following quotations will shew how far these clauses will affect the present practice, and the rights and privileges of parishioners:—

"It was resolved by all the judges, that if two churchwardens are chosen for a term, as of two years, nevertheless the parishioners may, at any time during the two years, remove those wardens and choose new ones. For, if the wardens should waste the property, it would be great inconvenience if the parish could not remove them." (26 Hen. 8, 25).

"Although they (the churchwardens) be chosen for two years, yet, for cause, they (the parishioners) may displace them." (13 Rep. 70).

By the 4th section the act is to apply to all parishes in which there shall be a population exceeding two thousand.

The 5th section enacts that the rector, vicar, or perpetual curate of the parish, or his deputy, to be nominated by him in writing, shall be the chairman of every election to be made by virtue of this act. This goes much further than Sturges Bourne's Act, 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, which made such unconstitutional inno-uations on the rights of parishioners, as guaranteed by the common law. The contrast* between the spirit of too many recent acts, as well as the present bill, and the old common law of England, will be seen at once from the following authorities:—

Lord Hardwicke expressly said, in a celebrated case—"I do not find any resolution, or even opinion, to give the vicar a right of presiding. There is indeed a notion that he has a right to preside, but that has taken its rise from special vestries." (Stoughton v. Reynolds, Lee, t. Hardw., 276; S. C., Str. 1046).

"As to the vicar, he seems to have no share in the election [of churchwarden], nor to have any right to preside," &c. (Str. 1046).

"We must resort to the common right, which is in the whole assembly, where all are [that is, before the people were robbed of their common-law right by Sturges Bourne's Act] upon an equal foot." (Str. 1046).

"The parson, perhaps, has a right of sitting [as a member of vestry] from his freehold in the church; but I do not think that can any ways give him a greater right or authority than any of the other members of the assembly." (Per Lee, J., Fort. 172).

By sect. 6, the chairman, (that is, the parson), or his deputy, is to issue notice of election.

"The parson never summons the vestries, that being the office of the churchwardens." (Str. 1046).

Sect. 7 empowers the parson to nominate, in writing, the minister's warden, where there is one.

The practice of nominating a minister's warden was attempted to be enforced by canon 89 of the church, but those canons are not law. However, as has been shewn, churchwardens, by whomsoever appointed, can by the existing law be removed by the parishioners at any time. The present proposed act, and some other late ones, which expressly recognise and enforce a minister's warden, obviously have as their purpose to fix and extend the encroachment, and to take away this remedy of removal.

"The parson of the parish, [sought to affect an elected officer], by colour of a new canon, [one of the present canons of the church], which is not of force to take away any custom." (13 Rep. 70).

"If any canon be against the common law, &c., such canon is void," (Id. 47); "for no statute or custom of the realm can be taken away or abrogated by any canon." (Id. 17).

"In London both the churchwardens are appointed by the parish; but in other places the parson chooses one of them, and the parish another; but this is rather by custom than by the common law." (Per Holt, C. J., Ld. Raym. 138).

"Holt, C. J., held that, of common right, the choosing churchwardens belonged to the parishioners, though [in some parishes] the incumbent had got the power of electing one churchwarden by custom: of this opinion, likewise, was Lord Hale." (Fort. 170).

Sect. 8 enacts, that a nomination, in writing, of any churchwarden shall be sent to the parson or his deputy.

By sect. 9, the parson or his deputy is to send out voting papers, if the number of candidates shall exceed the number to be elected.

By sect. 10, the parson or his deputy is to have the casting vote.

Sects. 11 and 12 enact how the voting papers shall be signed, and that all shall be collected by the parson.

By sect. 13, the chairman or his deputy is to "disallow all such votes as he shall find to be invalid," and to "declare the result of the election by a notice under his hand."

* This contrast may be further noted by comparing the modern Church Building Acts, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, &c., with the Church Building Act of the 10 Ann. c. 20.

The whole election is thus placed in the hands of the person, without check and without appeal, in direct opposition to the principles of the common law, and the uniform practice of centuries under that common law. Of course, the principles of the common law and the practice of centuries, in this respect, may have ceased to be expedient, and we shall be glad to see the proof of their having become so, and of the expediency of the proposed amendments, in the answer which, now that the public attention has been called to this extraordinary bill, must be given to the question, "On what grounds and for what purposes was the measure framed?"

STROUGHILL v. ANSTEY.

SIR,—I confess I do not share the alarm of your last week's correspondent at the decision in Stroughill v. Anstey, neither can I allow "that the principle on which Lord St. Leonard's put his judgment is, that persons dealing with trustees after a considerable lapse of time* are bound to see that no breach of trust is being committed."

The decision rested on the ground, that under the testator's will the trustees were not justified in raising money by mortgage. That being so, it was of course but a secondary question, how money so received was to be applied. The rule laid down is very plain, and in full accordance with Lord Langdale's decision in Halderby v. Spofforth, "that though, where a power of sale is given for the purpose of raising a particular charge, and the estate itself is devised subject to that charge, it may be proper to raise the money by mortgage, and the Court will support it as a conditional sale, and within the power, yet, under a power of sale out and out, for a purpose beyond the raising of a particular charge, a mortgage is not authorised, but is rather contrary to the trusts for sale."

Your correspondent's assertion, that the present decision virtually overrules Forbes v. Peacocke, assumes as the point in that case what is denied to be so by Lord St. Leonard's, who observes, "The other cases rest on a totally different point, viz. the intention to confer the right to give receipts; and certainly they do not touch the present question. And as to Forbes v. Peacocke, it is quite a mistake to suppose that that was a trust executed at a distance of twenty-five years from the time when it arose, for it was executed at the time at which it did arise, which happened to be twenty-five years from the death of the testator†." The Lord Chancellor confirmed these cases, and cleared the rule from the doubt which the reporter's note to Forbes v. Peacocke might have thrown upon it, resting it on the satisfactory ground, "that when a testator by his will charges his estate with debts and legacies, there is, by implication, a declaration by the testator that he intends to intrust the trustees with the receipt and application of the money, and not to throw any obligation at all upon the purchaser. That intention remains just as much if there are no debts as if there are debts, because the power arises from the circumstance that the debts are provided for, there being in the very creation of the trust a clear indication by the testator that he means that the trustees are alone to receive the money and apply it."

* Lord St. Leonard's added, "and without an apparent reason."

† [His Lordship seems to have misapprehended the meaning of the remark which has been made on the lapse of time in that case. The remarkable circumstance there was, that a charge of debts was held to operate as an authority to give receipts twenty-four years after the time when the debts should have been paid.—Ed.]

Your correspondent seems to object to the dictum, "that people who deal with trustees raising money at a considerable distance of time, and without an apparent reason for so doing, must be considered as under some obligation to inquire and look fairly what they are about." Whether a different rule ever prevailed or not, it was certainly neither established nor affected by Forbes v. Peacocke. The general rule, in fact, is, that where circumstances bear with them the appearance of fraud, persons dealing with trustees without inquiry will not be protected by a receipt clause, but will be deemed parties to the fraud. The Lord Chancellor thought Stroughill v. Anstey a case of this description, where for a great number of years the trusts remained unperformed, and parties being in possession of the rents of the trust property, an application was made of them without their concurrence. I apprehend there are few professional advisers who would not have judged it prudent to obtain that concurrence. The circumstances which must render inquiry necessary are those which will induce suspicion in the mind of a man of ordinary judgment; the amount of inquiry necessary must be such as will satisfy a man of ordinary judgment; this can never be exactly defined—it can only be partially indicated by successive judgments of the Court.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
B. A. F.

LONDON, JANUARY 29, 1853.

THE decision pronounced in a very recent case (not yet reported) by Sir W. P. Wood, V. C., on the construction of the late Evidence Act, to the effect that a plaintiff in equity may examine a substantial defendant without losing his right to a decree against him, is of great practical importance; not that it has at all taken the Profession by surprise; on the contrary, we believe the almost universal opinion of the Profession was in favour of that construction of the statute. But until there was a decision on the subject—and until the case before Sir W. P. Wood, V. C., there was no express decision—the boldest practitioners scarcely dared to venture on the experiment of examining a defendant, except in the case where no decree was wanted against that defendant, and losing it against him did not prejudice the plaintiff's right to a decree against other defendants. Now, however, there is no danger in any case of losing the right to a decree, if we understand correctly the scope of the Vice-Chancellor's decision, which seems to us to go the whole length of saying, that a plaintiff may examine a sole defendant without losing his right to a decree against him. This is unquestionably in accordance with the practice at law, where plaintiff and defendant examine each other and themselves, without the slightest detriment to the right of either to a verdict. Indeed, in a recent case at law, an individual, of some celebrity as a litigant, was his own counsel; opened his own case as counsel for himself; put himself into the witness box as a witness, and gave his own evidence in his own behalf; and then stepping out of the witness box, as counsel for himself, argued upon his own evidence; and it was ruled that his evidence was regularly given, and admissible.

So every day, at law, the plaintiff examines the defendant, and no one ever dreamed of saying that he thereby excluded himself from the right to a verdict, if the evidence justifies a verdict. That being so, it would be inconceivable why the statute, making no express exception in regard to proceedings in equity, should not be construed in equity as it is at law. In point of principle, there is much more ground for founding a decree in equity, upon the examination of the defendant, than there is at law; because at law, until the late statute, such a thing as examining a party was unknown; but in equity the defendant really has always been examined upon his oath, and thousands of decrees have been taken founded on the mere answer of the defendant. It is idle to attempt to distinguish between the answer of a defendant as discovery, and his examination as a witness. Such a distinction has no substance; it is purely verbal and technical. What can it matter, in point of principle, whether, charging a defendant with fraud, you interrogate him by the bill, and force him to put in an answer admitting the fraud; or whether, not interrogating him by the bill, you call him as a witness, and require him, on oath, to say whether he has or not committed the alleged fraud? Either way you require and obtain from him a statement, which is, to all intents and purposes, testimony given by himself against himself; and it is truly marvellous that there should ever have been such a distinction in Chancery as this, that you might, by your bill, interrogate a defendant, and obtain a decree against him on his admission, but you could not, after issue joined, interrogate him by a separate interrogatory without forfeiting the decree against him.

Another point of some importance, on the practice in equity as to evidence, occurred also recently before Vice-Chancellor Stuart, though we believe no express decision was pronounced upon it. The question was, whether a witness (examined under the old practice upon interrogatories) could be permitted to be re-examined to correct some error in his evidence. This would, according to the old practice, have been a terrible indulgence—a something fraught with danger to the rights of mankind; but, under the new practice, the Vice-Chancellor doubted, not so much whether the application ought to be entertained, as whether there was any use in refusing it, inasmuch as the Court, being at liberty, and being therefore bound, in a proper case, to examine witnesses orally at the hearing, the Court could hardly, when the cause came to a hearing, have refused to examine the witness, upon the allegation that he had made some mistake in his former testimony; and that, in fact, the truth could not be before the Court unless he was re-examined.

The practice on evidence seems, in truth, to be rapidly approaching the point which we have so often urged in this journal as desirable, viz. that all notions of inadmissibility of evidence should be discarded, and that credibility should be the only thing looked at. Interest is no longer an objection; being a party is no longer an objection; plaintiffs may examine defendants and themselves; defendants may examine plaintiffs and themselves, and may examine each other. There remains but to abolish the somewhat absurd and very useless notions, about not permitting leading questions; and, with the single exception of not examining husband and wife for or against each other, the sole exception with which we do not quarrel, there will then remain scarcely any objection to any evidence on the ground of admissibility.

DIRECTIONS TO THE MASTERS, AND TABLE OF COSTS,

SETTLED BY THE JUDGES IN HILARY TERM, 1853.

1. BETWEEN the 1st day of September and the 24th day of October in each year, one of the Masters of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer shall have authority to tax bills of costs, take references, and perform other necessary and immediate matters arising in or appertaining to any or either of the said courts, at the office of his own court; and for such purpose one of the Masters shall attend on certain days in each week, as may be found necessary, and of which due notice shall be affixed in the judges' chambers, and in the respective offices of the Masters of each court; and such Master shall be considered as the Vacation Master.

2. In order to diminish as much as possible the costs arising from the copying of documents to accompany the briefs of counsel, the Masters are to allow only the copying of such documents, or such parts of documents, as they may consider necessary for the instruction of counsel, or for use at the trial.

3. No fee to counsel to be allowed on writs of trial, except on trials before the judge of the Sheriff's Court of London, or of other courts of record where attorneys are not allowed to practise, and then one guinea only.

4. The Masters in all cases shall have discretion to allow, as between party and party, the fees of counsel or special pleader for drawing pleadings or other proceedings, whether special or otherwise, and advising.

5. When judgment is signed on a cognovit, or on a judge's order authorising the plaintiff to sign judgment, no declaration to ground judgment shall be necessary or allowed on the taxation of costs.

6. The costs of attendance by counsel or special pleader before a judge at chambers shall in no case be allowed, as between party and party, unless the judge shall certify for such allowance.

7. In all actions on contract, other than cases wherein, by reason of the nature of the action, no writ of trial can by law be issued, where the sum recovered or paid into court, and accepted by the plaintiff in satisfaction of his demand, or agreed to be paid on the settlement of the action, shall not exceed 20*l.*, (without costs), the plaintiff's costs, as against the defendant, shall be taxed according to the lower scale of allowances in the schedule of costs hereunto annexed; provided, that in case of trial before a judge in one of the superior courts, or judge of assize, if the judge shall certify on the postea that the cause was proper to be tried before him, and not before a sheriff or judge of an inferior court, the costs shall be taxed on the higher scale.

8. Where, in like actions, the sum indorsed on the summons shall be more than 20*l.*, but the plaintiff fails to recover more than that sum, and the judge does not certify as aforesaid, the plaintiff's costs against the defendant, whether between party and party, or between attorney and client, shall be taxed as upon a writ of trial before a judge of a court of record where attorneys are not allowed to act as advocates, as hereinafter provided for, but the defendant's costs, if any, are to be taxed upon the higher scale; provided, that in cases triable before the sheriff or judge of an inferior court, where the judge shall refuse to make an order for such trial, the judge may, if he shall think fit, direct, at the time of such refusal, on what scale the costs of each party shall be taxed, and in default of such direction the costs of both parties shall be taxed on the higher scale.

9. At the head of every bill of costs taken to the taxing officer to be taxed, it shall be stated whether the sum recovered, accepted, or agreed to be paid exceeds the sum of 20*l.* or not, in the following form:—

"Debt 20*l.* or under."

RULES OF THE COURTS OF QUEEN'S BENCH, COMMON PLEAS, AND EXCHEQUER.

HILARY TERM, 1853.

1. EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, AND RE-ADMISSION OF ATTORNIES.
2. REGULATIONS FOR CONDUCTING THE EXAMINATION.
3. TAKING OUT AND RENEWAL OF ATTORNIES' CERTIFICATES.

1. EXAMINATION, ADMISSION, AND RE-ADMISSION OF ATTORNIES.

WHEREAS, by sect. 15 of stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, it was enacted, "that it shall be lawful for the judges of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, or any one or more of them, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required, before he or they shall issue a fiat for the admission of any person to be an attorney, to examine and inquire, by such ways and means as he or they shall think proper, touching the articles and service, and the fitness and capacity, of such person to act as an attorney; and if the judge or judges as aforesaid shall be satisfied by such examination, or by the certificate of such examiners as hereinafter mentioned, that such person is duly qualified and fit and competent to act as an attorney, then, and not otherwise, the said judge or judges shall, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required to administer, or cause to be administered, to such person the oath hereinafter directed to be taken by attorneys and solicitors, in addition to the oath of allegiance, and, after such oaths taken, to cause him to be admitted an attorney of such court;" and by sect. 16 of the said statute it was further enacted, for the purpose of facilitating the inquiry touching the due service under articles as aforesaid, and the fitness and capacity of any person to act as an attorney, "that it shall be lawful for the judges of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer (or any eight or more of them, of whom the chiefs of the said courts shall be three) from time to time to nominate and appoint such persons to be examiners for the purposes aforesaid, and to make such rules and regulations for conducting such examination, as such judges shall think proper:"

And whereas, in order to carry the said statute more fully into effect, it is expedient annually to appoint examiners, subject to the control of the judges, in manner hereinafter mentioned:

And whereas, pursuant to the said statute, certain rules, orders, and regulations were made by the judges of the said courts in Easter Term, 1846; and other rules, orders, and regulations of the said courts, or one of them, have been from time to time previously made relating to the examination, admission, and re-admission of attorneys and their annual certificates:

And whereas it is expedient to consolidate and amend the said rules, orders, and regulations, in manner hereinafter mentioned:

It is therefore ordered, that from and after the first day of Trinity Term next, all rules, orders, and regulations relating to the examination, admission, and re-admission of attorneys, and the taking out and renewal of their annual certificates, be, and they are hereby annulled: provided that all notices, appointments, and other steps and proceedings duly made, had, or taken, or to be had or taken, under and by virtue of the rules, orders, or regulations, or any of them, hereby to be annulled, shall be valid, and may be carried into effect, anything herein to the contrary notwithstanding; and it is ordered, that the following rules, orders, and regulations shall, from and after the said first day of Trinity Term next, be substituted in lieu of all such former rules, orders, and regulations whatsoever:—

I. The several Masters for the time being for the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer respectively, together with sixteen attorneys or solicitors, to be appointed by a rule of Court in every year to be examiners for one year, any five of whom (one whereof to be one of the said Masters) shall be competent to conduct the examination; and that, subject to such appeal as hereinafter mentioned, no person who shall not have been previously admitted a solicitor of the High Court of Chancery shall be admitted to be sworn an attorney of any of the courts, except on production of a certificate signed by the major part of such examiners actually present at and conducting his examination, testifying his fitness and capacity to act as an attorney, and in the usual business transacted by an attorney—such certificate to be in force only to the end of the term next but one following the date thereof, unless such time shall be specially extended by the order of a judge.

II. The examiners so to be appointed shall conduct the said examinations, under regulations to be first submitted to and approved by the judges.

III. In case any person shall be dissatisfied with the refusal of the examiners to grant such certificate, he shall be at liberty within one month to apply for admission by petition, in writing, to the judges, to be delivered to the clerk of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, upon which no fee or gratuity shall be received, which application shall be heard in Serjeants' Inn Hall by not less than three of the judges.

IV. And whereas the hall or building of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom in Chancery-lane is a fit and convenient place for holding the said examinations, and the said society have consented to allow the same to be used for that purpose:

It is ordered, that until further order such examinations be there held on such days as the said examiners, or any five of them, shall appoint; and that any person not previously admitted an attorney of any of the three courts, and desirous of being admitted, shall give notice to the said examiners, before the commencement of the term next preceding that in which he shall propose to be examined, of his intention to apply for examination, by leaving the same with the secretary of the said society at their said hall, which notice shall also state his place or places of residence or service for the last preceding twelve months; and in case of application to be admitted on a refusal of the certificate, shall give ten days' notice, to be served in like manner, of the day appointed for hearing the same.

V. Three days at the least before the commencement of the term next preceding that in which any person not before admitted shall propose to be admitted an attorney of either of the courts, he shall cause to be delivered at the Master's office a written notice, which shall state his place or places of abode or service for the last preceding twelve months, and the name and place of abode of the attorney or attorneys to whom he was articulated and assigned, (if any such assignment has been made); and the Master shall reduce all such notices as in this rule first mentioned into an alphabetical table or tables, under convenient heads, and affix the same, on the first day of term, in some conspicuous place within or near to and on the outside of each court; and such person shall also, for the space of one full term previous to the term in which he shall apply to be admitted, enter or cause to be entered in two books kept for that purpose, one at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice or Chief Baron of the court in which he applies to be admitted, and the other at the chambers of the other judges or barons of such court, his name and place or places of abode, and also the name or names and place or places of abode of the attorney or attorneys to whom he shall have been article and assigned, (if any such assignment has been made).

VI. Every person so proposing to be admitted an attorney of either of the said courts, who shall have given such notices of his intention to apply for examination and admission as aforesaid, or as authorised by this rule, and who shall not have attended to be examined, or not have passed the examination, or not have been admitted, may, within one week after the end of the term for which such notices were given, renew the notices for examination or admission for the then next ensuing term, and so from time to time as often as he shall think proper; and that all such renewed notices shall be added to the list of notices of admission and re-admission, and placed up, on the first day of the term, in the said courts, chambers, and offices; and the applicants named in such renewed notices may be examined in the ordinary way, in pursuance of such last-mentioned notices, but shall not be admitted until the last day of the term, unless otherwise ordered by one of the said courts, or a judge thereof.

VII. On an application to re-admit an attorney who has been struck off the rolls, the applicant shall, before the commencement of the term next preceding that in which he intends to apply to be re-admitted, give notice thereof, as in the case of an original admission; and the affidavits in support of such application shall be filed at the office of the Master, and a copy thereof left at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench before the term on the last day of which the notice for re-admission is intended to be made, and the rule for such re-admission shall be drawn up, on reading such affidavit, and an affidavit of such copy having been left, and notices given in compliance with this rule.

VIII. A printed copy of the list of the admissions and re-admissions shall be stuck up in the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer offices, and at the judges' hall or chambers of each court in Rolls-gardens.

2. REGULATIONS APPROVED BY THE JUDGES FOR THE EXAMINATION OF PERSONS APPLYING TO BE ADMITTED AS ATTORNEYS OF THE COURTS OF QUEEN'S BENCH, COMMON PLEAS, OR EXCHEQUER.

I. Every person applying to be admitted an attorney of any of the said courts pursuant to the said rules shall, within the first seven days of the term in which he is desirous of being admitted, leave or cause to be left with the secretary of the said Incorporated Law Society his articles of clerkship, duly stamped, and also any assignment which may have been made thereof, together with answers to the several questions hereunto annexed, signed by the applicant, and also by the attorney or attorneys, London agent, barrister, or special pleader, with whom he shall have served his clerkship.

II. In case the applicant shall shew sufficient cause, to the satisfaction of the examiners, why the first regulation cannot be fully complied with, it shall be in the power of the said examiners, upon sufficient proof being given of the same, to dispense with any part of the first regulation that they may think fit and reasonable.

III. Every person applying for admission shall also, if required, sign and leave, or cause to be left, with the secretary of the said society, answers in writing to such other written or printed questions as shall be proposed by the said examiners touching his said service or conduct; and shall also, if required, attend the said examiners personally, for the purpose of giving further explanations touching the same; and shall also, if required, procure the attorney or attorneys with whom he shall have served his clerkship as aforesaid to answer, either personally or in writing, any questions touching such service or conduct, or shall make proof, to the satisfaction of the said examiners, of his inability to procure the same.

IV. Every person so applying shall also attend the said examiners at the hall of the said society, at such time or times as shall be appointed for that purpose, pursuant to the said rule, as the said examiners shall appoint, and shall answer such questions as the said examiners shall then and there put to him, by written or printed papers, touching his fitness and capacity to act as an attorney, and in the usual business transacted by an attorney.

V. Upon compliance with the aforesaid regulations, and if the major part of the said examiners actually present at and conducting the said examination (one of them being one of the said Masters) shall be satisfied as to the fitness and capacity of the person so applying to act as an attorney, the said examiners so present, or the major part of them, shall certify the same under their hands in the following form, namely:—

"In pursuance of the rules made in Hilary Term, 1853, of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer, we, being the major part of the examiners actually present at and conducting the examination of A. B., of &c., do hereby certify that we have examined the said A. B. as required by the said rules, and we do testify that the said A. B. is fit and capable to act as an attorney of the said courts, and in the usual business transacted by attorneys."

Questions as to due Service of Articles of Clerkship, to be answered by the Clerk.

1. What was your age at the date of your articles?
2. Have you served the whole term of your articles at the office where the attorney or attorneys to whom you were article or assigned carried on his or their business; and if not, state the reason?
3. Have you, at any time during the term of your articles, been absent without the permission of the attorney or attorneys to whom you were article or assigned; and if so, state the length and occasions of such absence?
4. Have you, during the period of your articles, been engaged or concerned in any profession, business, or employment, other than your professional employment as clerk to the attorney or attorneys to whom you were article or assigned?
5. Have you, since the expiration of your articles, been engaged or concerned, and for how long time, in any and what profession, trade, business, or employment, other than the profession of an attorney or solicitor?

Questions to be answered by the Attorney, Agent, Barrister, or Special Pleader with whom the Clerk may have served any part of the time under his Articles.

1. Has A. B. served the whole time of his articles at the office where you carry on your business; and if not, state the reason?
2. Has the said A. B., at any time during the term of his articles, been absent without your permission; and if so, state the length and occasions of such absence?
3. Has the said A. B., during the period of his articles, been engaged or concerned in any profession, business, or employment, other than his professional employment as your article clerk?
4. Has the said A. B., during the whole term of his clerkship, with the exceptions above mentioned, been faithfully and diligently employed in your professional business of an attorney or solicitor?

5. Has the said A.B., since the expiration of his articles, been engaged or concerned, and for how long time, in any and what profession, trade, business, or employment, other than the profession of an attorney or solicitor?

"And I do hereby certify that the said A.B. has duly and faithfully served under his articles of clerkship, ('or assignment,' as the case may be), bearing date, &c., for the term therein expressed, and that he is a fit and proper person to be admitted an attorney."

3. TAKING OUT AND RENEWAL OF ATTORNIES' CERTIFICATES.

Whereas, by sect. 25 of stat. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, it was enacted, that if any attorney shall neglect to procure an annual stamped certificate, authorising him to practise as such, within the time by law appointed for that purpose, then and in such case the registrar of attornies and solicitors shall not afterwards grant a certificate to such attorney without the order of one of the Courts of Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, or one of the judges thereof, to issue such certificate:

And whereas it is expedient, that upon the application of an attorney having neglected for the space of one whole year to procure or to renew an annual stamped certificate, the judges should have means of inquiring as to the circumstances under which he has omitted to commence, or has discontinued to practise, and as to his conduct and employment during the term of such omission or discontinuance:

It is ordered, that from and after the last day of Trinity Term next, every person who shall intend to apply on the last day of term, or in vacation, for such order, shall, three days at the least previous to the first day of the term on the last day of which the application is intended to be made, or in case the application is to be made in vacation, shall, previous to the first day of the preceding term, leave at the office of the Masters of the court in which he intends to make the application, a notice in writing, containing his name and place of abode for the last preceding twelve months; and that before the said first day of term he shall enter or cause to be entered a like notice in two books kept for that purpose, one at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice or Chief Baron, and the other at the chambers of the other judges or barons; and shall before the said first day of term cause to be filed the affidavit upon which he seeks to obtain or renew his said certificate at the office of the Masters aforesaid, and a copy thereof to be also left at the chambers of the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench.

II. The Masters shall reduce such notices into alphabetical order, and add the same to the list of admissions and re-admissions; and the order for the granting the certificate shall be drawn up on reading such affidavit of such copy having been left, in compliance with this rule.

III. Upon an application to dispense with the usual notice, and to take out or renew the certificate of an attorney as aforesaid, a summons shall be served on the registrar of attornies, calling on him to shew cause within ten days why such certificate should not be issued; and if no cause be shewn to the satisfaction of the judge, an order may be made for issuing such certificate, if the judge shall think proper.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 5, 1853.

We publish the following communication from an Indian correspondent practising at the bar in one of the Presidencies, partly because some of the information in it may be new and interesting to some of our readers, but more particularly because it shews that the tendency of local courts, and the abridgment of the business of the superior courts, to produce amalgamation of the two branches of the Profession, is not confined to this country or to America, but appears to exist and operate wherever such a constitution of the judicature of the country exists. Our correspondent writes as follows:—

"Sir,—I am desirous of eliciting the opinion of the Profession on the following subject, and shall therefore feel obliged by your inserting this letter in your journal.

"To render myself intelligible to all your readers, it may be desirable to state, that in India there are two descriptions of courts—first, the Queen's Courts; and, secondly, the Courts of the Honourable the East India Company. Of the first, or 'Supreme Courts,' there are three established by Royal charter—one at each of the three Presidencies; and they are presided over by judges selected from the English Bar, and the business is conducted by barristers and attorneys in a manner very similar to that pursued in the Superior Courts at Westminster. Of the latter, or 'Company's Courts,' there are a great number dispersed all over the country, and styled by various denominations; while at each of the three Presidencies, and at Allahabad, there is a Court of Ultimate Appeal, in India called the 'Sudr Udalt.' These Company's Courts are presided over by members of the Honourable Company's civil service of the Presidency in which the court is situated, and the business is conducted by vakeels. Amongst the vakeels there is no distinction of grade corresponding with the English barrister and attorney, or any other similar division of labour. The vakeel communicates direct with the client, and arranges with him the amount of remuneration for which he is willing to conduct the case from beginning to end. He likewise gets up the case, draws, ingrosses, signs, and presents the pleadings. With the native vakeels there is no oral pleading; in fact, the whole spirit of the practice in the Company's Courts is, that the proceedings (even motions) should be in writing, the greatest latitude being allowed; and the vakeel's arguments are usually embodied in his pleadings. In the Up-country or Mofussil Courts the vakeels are natives of the country, and until lately the whole of the vakeels practising in the Sudr Udalt were usually selected from the general body of such native vakeels. A few years since, however, it was determined to admit Europeans to practise as vakeels in the Courts of Sudr Udalt; but in the year 1846 the Legislative Council of India passed the act, No. 1, of 1846, in sects. 4 and 5 whereof it is enacted, 'that the office of pleader or vakeel in the Courts of the East India Company shall be open to all persons, of whatever nation or religion, provided that no person shall be admitted a pleader in any of those Courts unless he have obtained a certificate, in such manner as shall be directed by the Sudr Courts, that he is of good character, and duly qualified for the office, any law or regulation to the contrary notwithstanding; provided nevertheless, and it is hereby enacted, that every barrister of her Majesty's Courts of Justice in India shall be entitled as such to plead in any of the Sudr Courts of the East India Company, subject, however, to all the rules in force in the said Sudr Courts applicable to pleaders, whether relating to the language in which the Court is to be addressed, or to any other matter.'

"In appointing European vakeels, it is believed that the Courts of Sudr Udalut usually selected solicitors of the Supreme Courts, although in some instances gentlemen unconnected with the Profession, viz. merchants, both English and otherwise, have received the Courts' sunnuds.

"It is generally understood, that in framing the act before alluded to, the Legislature contemplated that barristers should merely plead in those Courts under instructions from vakeels or solicitors, and for some time the barristers practising in the Supreme Courts accepted briefs only when delivered by attorneys of the Supreme Courts. That rule was subsequently relaxed in favour of vakeels of the Courts of Sudr Udalut, and lately some of the barristers have relaxed that rule still further, by regularly attending the Courts, (whether briefless or not), and soliciting practice in a manner similar to vakeels of the Courts, keeping up establishments of clerks for that purpose.

"To enable you and your readers to understand the real position of the practitioners, it is necessary to inform you that the up-country vakeels have no regular agents at the presidency towns, as country practitioners have in England. Parties, therefore, who feel themselves aggrieved by the decrees of the Mofussil Courts, and wish to appeal to the Sudr, as also those who are made respondents, commonly proceed to the presidency town in person with their papers: they are usually strangers. Now, for the purpose of getting business, some of the vakeels retain native touters, paying them by a commission on the amount of the fee they can procure for their master.

"I believe that this practice has not been universally adopted by the barrister vakeels, but I know it has been by one of that body.

"So long as this relaxed practice was pursued by the less fortunate members of the Bar, it did not cause much observation—a feeling of regret for their ill-fortune inducing silence; but when gentlemen holding appointments under the Supreme Courts, and realising a handsome income, (even in these hard times), amounting to 2000*l.* a year and upwards, adopted the practice, the subject has assumed a different feeling.

"I am not desirous of mentioning names, or of bringing the individual cases to the especial notice of the several inns of which the gentlemen have the honour of being members; but I should wish to elicit the opinion of the Profession, and more particularly of the members of the English Bar, whether the acting as a vakeel (embracing as it does, in fact, the duties of an attorney) is consistent with the position of a barrister, and whether gentlemen adopting such a course of professional proceeding ought to be allowed to act in her Majesty's Courts with their more scrupulous brethren."

Of the impropriety of the practice to which our correspondent alludes there cannot be a shadow of doubt, if it is the fact—and we have always understood it to be the fact—that counsel practising at the Indian Bar profess to be governed by the same rules that regulate the English Bar. We should have thought that the expression of opinion which fell from Lord St.

Leonard's, and from other eminent law Lords, in the debates, during last session, upon the County Courts Act, ought to have set that question at rest, not only in this country, but wherever there is a body of English counsel regularly called to the Bar, and assuming to practise as an English Bar. Whether the state of India up the country, may be such as to make it desirable that there should be no regular Bar, but that, as in many of our local courts, the business should be conducted by attorneys, who do the proper business both of attorneys and of advocates, we are not enough acquainted with the commercial state of India to know; nor do we mean to say, that if barristers, finding there is not sufficient regular bar business left at the Presidencies, choose to attend the country courts, and practise as barrister-attorneys, to do so is personally disreputable. All that we say is this—that counsel practising in the superior courts in India, commit a clear and gross breach of etiquette, if they act in any manner as attorneys for their clients.

In the recent case of Murray v. Bogue, (before Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., Jan. 13), the question of registering under the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, (the last Copyright Act), had to be considered with reference to new editions, published since the act, of a work, the first edition of which was published before the act.

The question turns on the 2nd, 13th, and 24th sections of the act. The material part of the 2nd is this, "that in the construction of this act the word 'book' shall be construed to mean and include every volume, part or division of a volume, pamphlet, sheet of letter-press," &c.

The 13th makes it lawful for the proprietor of copyright in any book heretofore published, or in any book hereafter to be published, to make entry in the registry book of the Stationers' Company of the title of such book, &c.

The 24th prevents the proprietor of copyright in any book, which shall be first published after the passing of the act, from maintaining any action or suit, unless before commencing it he shall have caused an entry to be made in the registry of the Stationers' Company of such book.

The Court, in Murray v. Bogue, held, that if a work is originally published before the act, subsequent editions, not being mere reprints, but containing substantial and material additions and alterations, quoad those the new materials are new books, and must be registered.

Another question arose in Murray v. Bogue, which did not require decision, the Court having decided on the application before it on other grounds, but which it may not be useless to consider, as it probably will, before long, have to be determined, viz. whether, if, in a work of compilation composed since the 5 & 6 Vict., the compiler receives not merely suggestions or observations, but extensive contributions, from persons not paid for them, he has copyright in those contributions. This turns on the 18th section, which enacts, "that when any publisher or other person shall, before or at the time of the passing of this act, have projected, conducted, and carried on, or shall hereafter project, conduct, and carry on, or be the proprietor of any encyclopædia, review, magazine, periodical work, or work published in a series of books or parts, or any book whatsoever, and shall have employed or shall employ any person to compose the same, or any volumes, parts, essays, articles, or portions thereof, for publication in or as part of the same, and such work, volume, parts, essays, articles, or portions shall have been, or shall hereafter be, composed under such employment, on the terms that the copyright therein shall belong to such proprietor, projector, publisher, or conductor, and paid for by such proprietor, projector, publisher, or conductor; the copyright in every such encyclopædia, review, magazine, periodical work, and work published in a series of books or parts, and in every volume, part, essay, article, and portion so composed and paid for, shall be the property of such proprietor, projector, publisher, or other conductor, who shall enjoy the same rights as if he were the actual author thereof, and shall have such term of copyright therein as is given to the authors of books by this act, except only that in the case of essays, articles, or portions forming part of and first published in reviews, magazines, or other periodical works of a like nature, after the term of twenty-eight years from the first publication thereof respectively, the right of publishing the same in a separate form shall revert to the author for the remainder of the term given by this act. Provided always, that during the term of twenty-eight years the said proprietor, projector, publisher, or conductor shall not publish any such essay, article, or portion, separately or singly, without the consent previously obtained of the author thereof, or his assigns. Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect the right of any person who shall have been or shall be so employed as aforesaid to publish any such his composition in a separate form, who, by any contract, express or implied, may have reserved or may hereafter reserve to himself such right, but every author reserving, retaining, or having such right shall be entitled to the copyright in such composition, when published in a separate form, according to this act, without prejudice to the right of such proprietor, publisher, or conductor as aforesaid."

That in such contributions to a work of compilation, published since the act, the compiler can have no copyright, irrespectively of the act, seems clear, because there is no copyright at common law, and all the old Copyright Acts are repealed by the 5 & 6 Vict. The statute re-enacts copyright, but of course the title is under the act only.

Now, the 18th section of the act, by giving to the compiler, copyright in the contributions of contributors with whom he shall have entered into a contract, and whom he shall have paid, impliedly excludes him from having copyright in them when there has not been such contract and payment.

Whether the copyright remains in the contributor, or is dedicated to the public, may be a question: it may be thought that it remains in the author, since, although the provisos of the 18th section of the act seem to save the right of the author only where he shall by contract have retained the right of publishing, those provisos must, we conceive, have reference to the case where he has, by contract within the act, constituted the compiler the owner to a certain extent; not to the case where he has not passed any copyright to the compiler, but only permitted him to publish. The conclusion that appears to us the most consistent with the act is, that where the author of a contribution to a work, within the 18th section, has gratuitously contributed it for the compiler without any contract, he has granted him a license, which it would of course be inequitable for him to repudiate, as between him and the compiler; but that as between him and a third person, he retains copyright, and could prevent such third person from publishing; while, on the other hand, the compiler has, as against the public, no sort of copyright whatever in the contributions, and could not, in his own right, sue against infringement.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 12, 1853.

THE doctrine of constructive notice is of such frequent application in equity, that some observations upon it may not be inconvenient to our more experienced readers, and will probably be very useful to those who are only commencing their professional career. The broad principle of it is this—that, by employing an agent, a party, keeping himself personally ignorant, might easily avoid rights and claims which would be binding upon him if he had notice of them, and thus derive an undue advantage over other persons, which he could not have obtained had he acted for himself; therefore, equity, considering the knowledge of the agent as affecting the principal, and as common to them both, whether it be so in fact or not, will not allow a person, so dealing, to profit by the knowledge of the agent he employs, without being at the same time affected by the obligations which that knowledge imposes upon those possessing it.

Notice to the solicitor of a person is equivalent to notice to the party himself, and is as binding upon him. (Newstead v. Searles, 1 Atk. 265; Brotherton v. Hutt, 2 Vern. 574; Ashley v. Baillie, 2 Ves. sen. 368; Sheldon v. Cox, Amb. 624; S. C., 2 Eden, 224; Maddox v. Maddox, 1 Ves. sen. 61; Mountford v. Scott, 3 Mad. 34; S. C., Turn. & R. 274; Winter v. Lord Anson, 3 Russ. 483; Hargreaves v. Rothwell, 1 Kee. 154; Tunhall v. Trappes, (Gosling's case), 3 Sim. 301; Kennedy v. Green, 3 My. & K. 699; Fuller v. Bennett, 2 Hare, 394; Gerrard v. O'Reilly, 3 Dru. & W. 414; Marjoribanks v. Howdon, 1 Dru. 11). And where a purchaser or a mortgagee employs the same solicitor as the vendor or mortgagor, he is affected with notice of whatever the solicitor has notice of, in his capacity of solicitor for either party, in the transaction in which he is so employed. (Le Neve v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 646; S. C., 1 Ves. sen. 64, and Suppl. 50; also 1 Amb. 436, and 2 Lead. Cas., by White & Tudor, 21; Toulmin v. Steere, 3 Mer. 210; Dryden v. Frost, 3 My. & C. 670; Fuller v. Bennett, 2 Hare, 394). The notice to the solicitor, which alone will bind the client, must, however, be notice in the transaction in which he is so employed by him; the client will not be bound by notice to the solicitor in a distinct transaction at a different time, as the latter may have forgotten it, (Lowther v. Carlton, 2 Atk. 242; Warwick v. Warrack, 3 Atk. 291; Worsley v. Scarborough, Id. 392; Hiern v. Mill, 13 Ves. 114), unless one transaction is so recent or closely followed by another as to render it impossible to give a man credit for having forgotten it; as where a solicitor, employed by a mortgagor in effecting several incumbrances upon an estate, is also employed by the different incumbrancers in completing their charges upon the property, in which case the Court holds the puisne incumbrancers affected with notice of the prior charge, for having employed the mortgagor's solicitor, who of necessity was affected with such notice, and which notice, though obtained in his character of solicitor for the mortgagor, was binding upon both parties, for whom he acted in the new transaction. (Mountford v. Scott, Turn. & R. 274; Hargreaves v. Rothwell, 1 Kee. 154; Winter v. Lord Anson, 3 Russ. 488; Perkins v. Bradley, 1 Hare, 219; Marjoribanks v. Havendon, 1 Dru. 11; Fuller v. Bennett, 2 Hare, 394).

In Hargreaves v. Rothwell (1 Kee. 154) the mortgagor thrice mortgaged the same property in the course of three years—first to the defendant; then to the plaintiff, with notice of the first charge; and then again to the defendant, without any direct notice of the second charge; but in all these transactions one solicitor was employed for the mortgagor and both the mortgagees; and consequently, upon a bill filed by the plaintiff, claiming priority over the second mortgage to the defendant, on the ground of his having constructive notice, through the common solicitor of all parties, of the plaintiff's charge, Lord Langdale, after expressing a clear opinion that where one transaction was closely followed by and connected with another, or where it was clear, as in the case before the Court, that a previous transaction was present to the mind of the solicitor when engaged in another transaction, there was no ground for the distinction by which the rule that notice to the solicitor is notice to the client had been restricted to the same transaction, held that the plaintiff was entitled to priority in respect to the second mortgage.

Again: in Fuller v. Bennett, (2 Hare, 394), A., the owner of an estate, in February, 1831, commenced a treaty with the defendant B., for sale to him; subsequently, in November, 1831, A. created a charge, by way of equitable mortgage, upon the property, in favour of C., who afterwards assigned his interest to the plaintiffs in the suit; whereupon they gave notice, as well of the equitable mortgage to C. as of its assignment to them, to Messrs. F. & Co., the solicitors of the defendant B. In the following year another party filed a bill against A. and B. and others, claiming to be equitably entitled to the estate in question; but in November, 1835, that bill was dismissed, with costs. Shortly afterwards A. died, and B. purchased the estate of his heiress-at-law and devisee, and, after the completion of the purchase, mortgaged it, with other properties, to the defendant M., who employed F. & Co., the solicitors of the defendant B., in that transaction; and upon a bill filed by the plaintiffs to enforce their security, the late Vice-Chancellor Sir James Wigram held that the defendant B. could not escape the consequences of the notice given by the plaintiffs to his solicitors, and that, as he was bound by it, the defendant M. must be bound by it also, not because, abstractedly, he was to be bound by facts which came to the knowledge of his solicitor in other transactions, but because the solicitor he employed in the business of the mortgage had notice of the plaintiffs' interests, as the solicitor of the mortgagor, in the very transaction in which he, the mortgagee, so employed him.

The two last cases strikingly demonstrate the mischief of persons in the situation of contracting parties employing the same solicitor. In Fuller v. Bennett, had the mortgagee, M., employed another solicitor, instead of the solicitor of the mortgagor, B., he would not, of course, have been affected with the notice Messrs. F. & Co., as the solicitors of B., had of the plaintiffs' interest, and would have been a purchaser of the legal estate for a valuable consideration, without notice of the prior equitable right of the plaintiffs; and, according to the well-established principles of the Court, it would not have interfered against him to deprive him of the benefit of his legal priority honestly obtained. So, in Hargreaves v. Rothwell, if the defendant had acted through an independent solicitor, instead of employing the solicitor of the mortgagor, he would not have been affected with the notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, which the common solicitor of both the plaintiff and defendant had as solicitor of the mortgagor; and so, being a mortgagee advancing a further sum of money, without notice of an intermediate advance, would have been entitled in equity to tack his second charge to his first, and so have excluded the plaintiff's charge until his entire claim on the mortgage property had been satisfied. Indeed, the impropriety of contracting parties acting by one solicitor has been guarded against by one of the General Orders of the Court, (the 77th Order of April, 1828), which provides, that whenever, in any proceeding before a Master, the same solicitor is employed for two or more parties, such Master may, at his discretion, require that any of the said parties shall be represented before him by a distinct solicitor, and may refuse to proceed until such party is so represented.

REGULA GENERALIS.

ORDER OF COURT.—Jan. 31, 1853.

I, the Right Hon. ROBERT MONSEY Lord CRANWORTH, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, do hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say—

That the Registrar, in drawing up any decree or order whereby the Accountant-General shall be directed to pay or transfer any fund, or part of any fund, in respect of which any duty shall be payable to the revenue under the acts relating to legacy duty, shall, unless such decree or order expressly provide for the payment of the duty, direct the Accountant-General to have regard to the circumstance that such duty is payable; and where, by any decree or order, any carrying over to a separate account of any fund in respect of which any such duty may be chargeable shall be directed, the Registrar shall add the words "subject to legacy duty" to the title of the account. And in order the better to provide security against the payment or transfer by the Accountant-General of any fund chargeable with any such duty without the duty being first paid, the Accountant-General is, on receiving notice from the proper officer that the duty is payable, to cause a memorandum to be made in his books in conformity with such notice. And the Accountant-General, before executing any decree or order directing the payment or transfer of any fund, or part of any fund, in respect of which any such duty shall be payable, shall require the production of the official receipt for the duty, or a certificate from the proper officer of the payment of the duty chargeable in respect of any such fund, or any portion thereof, respectively, by any such decree or order directed to be paid or transferred. And I do further order and direct that where, in making any decree or order, express provision for the payment of any such duty shall be intended to be made, such duty shall, by such decree or order, be directed to be paid to the Receiver-General of Inland Revenue for the time being, or his official assistant duly constituted, to be named in the order.

(Signed) CRANWORTH, C.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 19, 1853.

AN excellent illustration of Mr. Willmore's "Confusion worse Confounded, or the Statutes of 1852," (reviewed in our present number), is afforded by the important statute relating to the recovery of small debts in the city of London, (15 Vict. c. lxxvii). We presume that the object of the framers of this act was to assimilate the London Small Debts Act to the general County Court Acts, and accordingly the 1st section repeals the former acts on the subject relating to the city, "for the purpose of extending the provisions thereof to debts, damages, and demands not exceeding the sum of 50*l*." But the general Extension Act (13 & 14 Vict. c. 61) deprives plaintiffs of costs only in cases where they sue in the superior courts, and recover a sum not exceeding 20*l*. in actions of contract, or 5*l*. in actions of tort. (Sect. 11). To the astonishment of the Profession, however, who had taken it for granted that no radical change was introduced for the city, it turns out, that if plaintiffs could have sued in the Sheriff's Court, as the City Court is called, and yet sue on a contract in the superior court, they must recover more than fifty pounds before they will be entitled to costs, unless the judge certify, or the case be within the concurrent jurisdiction clause. (Sect.

119*). But this is not all; the section in question is copied from the 129th section of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, only increasing the amount from 20*l*. to 50*l*., without reference to the alteration introduced by sect. 11 of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61. The effect of this is, that the section in the City Act applies only to a verdict, the words being, "if a verdict shall be found;" but the 11th section of the General Act applies to judgment on demurrer or otherwise, (except judgment by default), the words used being simply, "if the plaintiff shall recover," &c. Again: under this section of the City Act, a suggestion must be entered to deprive the plaintiff of costs, as was decided upon the corresponding section of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95; but no suggestion is necessary under the General Act. This section of the City Act also applies to all cases where a plaintiff might have been entered in the Sheriff's Court, unless the parties dwell more than twenty miles from each other, or an officer of the Sheriff's Court is a party. But the jurisdiction clause of the City Act (sect. 2) does not except actions for malicious prosecutions, which are excepted in the General Act; as such actions, therefore, may be brought in the Sheriff's Court, if they are brought in the Superior Court, and the plaintiff has a verdict for less than 5*l.*, he may be deprived of costs under this 119th section.

The next section, (sect. 120), however, is framed upon the 11th section of the General Act, (13 & 14 Vict. c. 61); and by this, if in any action of contract in a superior court (not being for breach of promise of marriage) the plaintiff shall recover a sum less than 20*l.*, or if in any action in such court, of trespass, trover, or case, (not being an action for malicious prosecution, &c.), the plaintiff recover less than 5*l.*, he shall not have any costs, except as thereafter provided, and except in case of judgment by default; and it shall not be necessary to enter any suggestion to deprive him of costs. This section does not contradict the preceding one, nor can it be said to be altogether superfluous, as it contains some points of difference: thus it applies to judgment, not merely to verdict; it excepts actions for malicious prosecution, and renders a suggestion unnecessary. We apprehend that the 119th section crept in wholly by mistake; but being there, the only way in which we can deal with that and the following one is probably this:—If the plaintiff “recover” less than 20*l.* in an action of contract, where he should have sued in the Sheriff’s Court, he may be deprived of costs without a suggestion, (sect. 120); if he recover, by verdict, 20*l.* or upwards, to the extent of 50*l.*, in an action of contract, he may be deprived of costs by means of a suggestion, (sect. 119); if he recover, by verdict, less than 5*l.* in an action for a malicious prosecution, he may be deprived of costs by means of a suggestion, (sect. 119); and the fact of this action being excepted in the next section will only make this difference, that if he recover in such an action less than 5*l.* by judgment, otherwise than upon a verdict, he will be entitled to his costs. We should observe that Talfourd, J., lately held, at Guildhall, that although the 119th section might have been inserted by mistake, yet he could not act upon that view so as to grant a certificate as a matter of course in all cases where the sum recovered by verdict, in an action of contract, exceeded 20*l.* In all such cases, however, application should be made for the certificate, and the judge will probably be inclined, in the majority of instances, to yield to it. Another point of difference between sect. 120 of the City Act and sect. 11 of the County Court Extension Act is this—under the City Act the sum recovered which is to take away costs is “*less than 20*l.*,” or “*less than 5*l.,” under the County Court Extension Act it is “*not exceeding 20*l.*,” or “*not exceeding 5*l.,””

Comparing the jurisdiction clause (sect. 2) in the City Act with the corresponding clause in the General Act, (sect. 58 of the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95), we find that, as if by way of compensation for omitting actions for “malicious prosecution” from the exceptions, actions in which the title to any title shall be in question are added to the exceptions, although they do not occur in the General Act.

We place the 39th section of the City Act, relating to the issuing of the summons, in a parallel column with sect. 60 of the General Act:—

9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 60.
“Such summons may issue in any district in which the defendant, or one of the defendants, shall dwell or carry on his business at the time of the action brought; or, by leave of the Court for the district in which the defendant, or one of the defendants, shall have dwelt or carried on his business at some time within six calendar months

15 Vict. c. lxxvii, s. 39.
“Such summons may issue, provided the defendant, or one of the defendants, shall dwell or carry on business, or have employment, within the city of London, or the liberties thereof, at the time of the action brought; or provided the defendant, or one of the defendants, shall have dwelt or carried on business, or shall have had next before the time of the action brought, or in which the cause of action arose, such summons may issue in either of such last-mentioned courts.”

employment therein, at some time within six months next before the time of the action brought, or if the cause of action either wholly or in part arise therein.”

Thus, a summons may issue from the Sheriff’s Court without any leave, where the defendant has dwelt or carried on business, &c. within six months before the action. This will often operate unjustly to the plaintiff, for it may happen that the defendant may have dwelt, &c. in London six months before without the knowledge of the plaintiff, and yet, as he could therefore have sued in the Sheriff’s Court, he may be deprived of costs, under sect. 119.

We now come to the concurrent clauses, which are as follows:—

9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128.
“All actions and proceedings which, before the passing of this act, might have been brought in a superior court of record, where the plaintiff dwells more than twenty miles from the defendant, or where the cause of action did not arise wholly, or in some material point, within the jurisdiction of the Court within which the defendant dwells or carries on his business at the time of the action brought, or where any officer of the county court shall be a party,” (except in respect of a claim to goods taken under the process of the court), may still be brought in the superior court.

15 Vict. c. lxxvii, s. 118.
“All actions and proceedings which, before the commencement of this act, might have been brought in a superior court of record, where the plaintiff dwells more than twenty miles from the defendant, or where any officer of the court shall be a party,” (except in respect of a claim to goods taken under the process of the court), may still be brought in the superior court.

It will, therefore, be seen that it is immaterial, as regards costs, whether the cause of action arose within the jurisdiction of the Sheriff’s Court or not; and, perhaps, this is reasonable enough in most cases—as, if the defendant dwells within the city, and the plaintiff lives within twenty miles of it, there will not often be any hardship in requiring the plaintiff to sue the defendant in London.

We have little doubt but that this act must shortly be amended, so as to render it capable of having the meaning which was intended to be given to it by the Legislature. But is it not lamentable to find statutes drawn in this fashion, when so little care was required to frame them properly? It was only necessary to copy the latest statute then in existence upon the subject; but, not satisfied with so easy a task, the framer must introduce into one statute both the law as it was before it was altered, and the law as it is since it has been altered, and thus attempt to give effect to both. Why, we may ask, all these distinctions in statutes which are clearly in pari materia, and statutes which, above all others, should be simple and intelligible? Whatever the cause, the only effect is to puzzle and embarrass, not only the suitor, for whom these acts are specially intended, but also the lawyer, who finds it impossible to keep pace with the perverse ingenuity of law-makers.

Surely it is time to have the Board recommended by Mr. Willmore, if we would rescue our legislation from the obloquy which so justly attaches to it, and if we would confer upon the public the real benefit of our laws.

It was well proved that one of the faults of the old system of equity practice was, that, in references to the Masters in Chancery, questions often arose before them on legal points of considerable difficulty, and which could only be properly decided before a judge in open court. However, the evil was not a desperate one—the remedy was simply a question of expense. In the first place, such questions were argued by counsel before the Master himself very generally, so that, if he decided wrongly, he at least had the same kind of assistance to put him right as a judge in court has. But there was also the security of an appeal by way of exception from the Master's report embodying his decision; or the question might be re-opened on further directions; and thus the point could be again discussed in open court; and this right of appeal was pretty freely taken advantage of. By these means the chance of injustice by a mistake or ignorance of the law was provided against as far as it was possible. The fatal objections of delay, and expense aggravated by delay, rendered this system a flagrant inconvenience, and it is accordingly abolished. Every one now cries out for cheap law, and the problem to solve is, to supply the article at a lower price, and not worse in quality than before. Ask A. B., who is suing all his near relations for some wrong, some undeniable injury, done to him, in withholding or abstracting property which belongs to him of right—Will you have a decision at small expense, speedy and final, but more possibly wrong; or do you rather choose long years of litigation, very expensive, with a conclusion more probably right? If A. B. have sufficient experience to understand the full bearing of the question submitted to him, he will choose the former alternative; because the excessively artificial system which had grown up in so many centuries of litigation enabled the perverse ingenuity of designing men to extend the lingering torture and expensiveness of the old course of equity pleading and practice almost without limit, and, even with the best assistance and advice, a Chancery suit could not be a speedy operation. Nevertheless, admitting the advantages of the change, we watch with fear for indications of the possibility, which is only too natural, that under the new practice a suitor may, in the rapid course of proceedings, occasionally fail to have substantial justice. Ready to take alarm on this subject, we listen with surprise and some apprehension when we hear that the principal test of the capability of a judge is now said to be the rapidity with which he gets through his work, finishes his paper, and clears off his arrears. No doubt by this means the lawyer's remuneration comes in all the more quickly; but let the gentlemen of our Profession place themselves in the position of the suitor, whose anxiety and impatience during the comparatively slow preliminary stages have reached their height when his cause comes on to be heard. Let them imagine his state of mind if he sees the judge chiefly intent on "getting through" his case—interrupting counsel—refusing to hear a particular statement of the evidence—observing upon the "waste of public time"—exhibiting impatience to have done with the matter. Surely there must be some drawback to the pleasure of pocketing fees so earned. For our part, we confess that the anxiety which some of the equity judges have shewn, at the expense of occupying some additional time, to come to a right conclusion, has been to us infinitely more satisfactory; for now that the proceedings of a Chancery suit are conducted by comparison so quickly out of court, it is of less moment that they should occupy a longer time in discussion at the hearing; and it is more than ever necessary that every judgment should be carefully considered, now that the pleadings are a closer condensation of the facts upon which it must proceed.

The public opinion of the Profession is an autocrat over the judges themselves. If its mandate be "sacrifice safety to speed," it will be more or less obeyed. But under the present system of practice there are several reasons why this desire for extreme haste should be held in check. To take only one, though that seems to us to be among the most cogent. Judges in Chancery, by sect. 11 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, are empowered to sit at chambers for the dispatch of such part of the business of the Court as can, without detriment to the public advantage arising from the discussion of questions in open court, be heard in chambers. Sect. 26 specifies some of these matters, adding, "and such other matters as each such judge may from time to time see fit, or as may from time to time be directed by any General Order of the Lord Chancellor." Sect. 27 enables a judge to adjourn from open court to chambers, and vice versa, the consideration of any matter. Now, if, or rather when, a question of law arises for the consideration of a judge in chambers, it rests with him to choose whether he will answer it there, or adjourn it, to be discussed in court.

Supposing the chief duty of a judge be to dispatch his business with the utmost possible rapidity, he of course will seldom delay a matter to seek the assistance of counsel; and out of this may arise a dangerous course of practice, which it is anything but satisfactory for the public to contemplate. As we read the provisions of the statute, the only work which, without detriment to the public advantage, can be transacted by a judge in chambers is that which involves no question of law fairly arguable; and we must consider it a defect in the new system that the judge is the arbiter what is such a question of law. All his convenience, confidence in his own knowledge, dispatch in the conduct of business, prompt him to decide the point of difficulty without the trouble, hesitation, and delay involved and implied by an adjournment from chambers into open court; and if the standard of his capacity is to be his facility in getting through business, we can scarcely believe that in any case, except of extraordinary difficulty, a judge in Chancery will choose to have a question argued in court which may be quietly decided by him in chambers.

It need hardly be said, that the observations here submitted are not affected by the right of moving in court to discharge or vary the certificate within eight days after it is filed, given by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80, s. 34, and the 51st Order of October, 1852. The appeal is only to the same judge in his wig and robes; and, as counsel do not attend in chambers, the right will be infrequently used, and is very dissimilar to the exceptions to a Master's report.

We do not pretend here to suggest a remedy for the defect pointed out. Indeed, with the judges now on the bench, who have been trained in the strictness of the old practice, it may be thought an inconsiderable danger comparatively. But any system of practice is vitally faulty which depends too much upon the administrative talent of those who conduct its operation.

COLONIAL LEGAL APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has made the following appointments for the colony of Victoria, viz. Edward Eyre Williams, Esq., to be Second Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court; William Foster Stawell, Esq., to be her Majesty's Attorney-General; James Croke, Esq., to be her Majesty's Solicitor-General; Henry Field Gurner, Esq., to be Crown Solicitor; Robert Williams Pohlman, Esq., to be Commissioner of the Court of Requests and Chairman of General and Quarter Sessions; Frederick Wilkinson, Esq., to be Master in Equity of the Supreme Court and Chief Commissioner of Insolvent Estates.

Review.

Confusion worse Confounded, or the Statutes at Large in 1852. By GRAHAM WILLMORE, Esq., Q. C., Author of "Is Trial by Jury worth keeping?"

[Longman, 1852.]

UNDER the above title, Mr. Willmore has made a vigorous onslaught against the grim giant yclept "Statutes at Large," and has helped to give him a "fall," which we trust will reduce him considerably, and make him use better language in future.

We are here informed that the monster weighs 221½ lbs. avoirdupois weight. He is, in fact, nothing better than a chaotic and unwieldy mass.

"Radis indigestaque moles

Nec quicquam nisi pondus iners; congestaque eodem
Non bene junctarum discordia semina rerum."

The public statutes alone are 20,000 in number, and will be found in forty quarto volumes of about 40,000 pages. The contradictions, the absurdities, the obscurities, and, to use an expression of King James I., "the divers cross and cuffling statutes" herein, are really a disgrace to our country. Our author truly says, "Many single statutes relate to an infinite number of heterogeneous subjects; many heterogeneous statutes relate to one single subject." As an instance of the former, he refers to the 22 Geo. 2, c. 46, which, according to its title, relates (inter alia) to the distemper among horned cattle, as well as to the regulation of attorneys and the affirmation of Quakers. "Sometimes the body of a statute contains matter of the utmost importance, of which no intimation whatever is given by the title." E.g., the 20 Geo. 2, c. 42, intitled "An Act to enforce an Act for granting Rates and Duties upon Houses, Windows, or Lights," enacts, by sect. 3, "that in all cases where the kingdom of England hath been or shall be mentioned in any act of Parliament, the same shall be taken to include the kingdom of Wales and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed." Another instance which occurs to us is the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 98, intitled "An Act to amend the Laws concerning Prisoners," which enacts, by sect. 31, that the action for an escape shall always be case, and not debt. A notable specimen of law-making is the City of London Small Debts Act, an account whereof will be found in our leading article. We must, however, refer our readers to the pamphlet for a full account of the evils of our present system.

When reviewing Welsby & Beavan's excellent work on Statutes, we pointed out the number of acts which are scattered about on the same subject, and then stated that there were no less than twenty-six statutes on the law of evidence, forty-two on landlord and tenant, thirty-one on executors, and thirteen on bills of exchange. No sane man doubts for a moment that these numerous acts, amounting to 112, could not be easily digested and consolidated into four statutes upon the four subjects to which they relate; but we are so dilatory in adopting simple and obvious measures for the public convenience, that we doubt whether this work will be accomplished during the present generation. We are, however, taking slow steps in the right direction: the Bankruptcy Law Consolidation Act was one step; Lord St. Leonard's proposed consolidation of the criminal law is another very important one; Lord Cranworth advocates a codification of the statutes; and in time we may hope to see the goal reached, especially if Mr. Willmore's suggestions be carried out. While sensible and practical in themselves, they are enlivened by illustrations, which render the work entertaining and readable, without in any degree lessening the weight of its more serious arguments.

"I propose," he says, "that the empire of Great Britain should set apart the sum of 10,000*l.* a year for 'the purpose of improving her laws. Cannot she afford it for a purpose of such stupendous importance? It is about the amount of one man's sinecure, lately much discussed; far less than is sometimes realised to the discoverer of some happy novelty in chemistry or mechanics. We pay one gentleman alone as much for looking after the laws of the Hindoos, and we do well; but surely the laws of the whole British people deserve at least as much care and expense. We have spent much treasure, and alas! the lives of many noble and brave seamen, in discovering a passage which no one believes to exist, and through which no one could pass, even if it did. How much have we paid, and are paying now, for the splendid and uncomfortable palace in which we pen up our sickening legislators? Are we justified in neglecting the weightier matters of the law itself, while we care so much for the mere place where it is manufactured?—in spending nothing upon the kernel, while we are so lavish upon the shell?—in preparing and making clean the outside of the platter, while we allow such shocking messes to be made within? Cannot we afford it? Yet we give 18,000*l.* for Correggios; we put up a railing before the British Museum for 14,000*l.*; we build up, pull down, and build up again our Marble Arch. Who can tell how much that wandering lumpish unsightliness has cost us? Let us admire and cultivate art as it deserves: attribute all that is due to the humanising, as well as materially useful influences of science; yet, in doing these things, this other business left undone, are we much wiser than that naked King of Madagascar, who decorated himself with a cocked hat and knee buckles before he had a shirt to his back?"

Mr. Willmore's plan is briefly this:—A Board of three commissioners is to be formed; their duties will relate to future and to past legislation. As to the first, a copy of every bill relating to public matters, which shall have passed the first reading, shall be laid before the Board, and they are to report upon it to the House within one month, stating their opinion on its purport and probable effect, so far as that opinion can be formed from the fair construction of its words. In this report especial regard is to be had to existing legislation upon the subject, and the Board shall suggest such alterations, &c. as seem necessary for the attainment of the purpose of the bill. After the bill shall have received the approval of both Houses, previous to its becoming law, it shall be again subjected to the inspection of the Board, lest any inaccuracies of language should have crept in. In cases of emergency, the services of the Board are to be dispensed with altogether.

"With regard to past legislation, the Board shall employ the whole of their time, not occupied with future legislation, in preparing bills for the repeal and consolidation of all the existing statute law, neither adding nor altering anything, (such being the province of the Legislature itself). Except in cases where some subject may require immediate attention, the Board shall employ themselves upon the statutes of the earliest reign of which there are any extant, and, taking each statute in succession, shall pursue, through all the subsequent reigns, up to the present time, the thread of legislation upon the subject of that statute, embodying in one bill all the existing statute law upon such subject. The bill, at full length, and also the titles of all the acts proposed to be repealed, shall be published in the Gazette at least six months previous to its introduction into the Legislature. By this course abundant time will be afforded for the deliberation and criticism both of individuals and societies throughout the nation; and the Legislature itself may afterwards adopt any improvements, either in substance or style, which may be thereby elicited: the bill to be brought before the Legislature by the 'Ministry for the time being. I further propose, that when, during the progress of the work, all the known statutes of any preceding reign shall have become wholly consolidated, and re-enacted or repealed, there shall be a declaration of Parliament, which shall reserve the assent of the Crown, that no statute passed in such reign shall have any further force or effect whatever.'

This proposal for the establishment of a permanent Board appears to us far preferable to the plan of Lord Cranworth, which consists in the employment of an overworked Barrister or two, under an overworked Lord Chancellor, who goes out with the Ministry.

LONDON, FEBRUARY 26, 1853.

THE carrying trade of England has become of unparalleled magnitude, and the questions which, in its development, are constantly occurring for the consideration of Courts of law and equity are second to none in interest or importance.

There are, among others, a series of decisions on the law of contract, as between railway companies and landowners, which present in a novel aspect the jurisdiction of Courts of equity in cases of specific performance. According to these, if an incorporated company formally agree, or sanction a previous agreement by their promoters, with a landholder to buy his land for a certain sum, in consideration of his forbearing to oppose the passing of the bill in Parliament which is to authorise the taking of the land for the purpose of making a railway over it, the landholder may enforce specific performance of this agreement, though the line has afterwards been abandoned, and the time within which the company could exercise their powers for obtaining possession has expired. (Simpson v. Lord Howden, 9 Cl. & Fin. 61). This rule imposes upon railway companies an obligation to take land which they cannot use, and to pay for it an extraordinary price, which they agreed to give to prevent opposition to their bill. The hardship which it inflicts upon them is, therefore, very considerable. On the other hand, the landholder has entered into a bona fide contract to sell his land, and, in most cases of this kind, he will probably have somewhat altered his position on the faith of this agreement; and in every instance the non-completion of the contract has been less by his fault than that of the company. It is evident, from even this slight sketch, that to administer a discretionary equity, like that of the jurisdiction to enforce specific performance, in such cases as these, is a task that may try the powers of the ablest judge in the Courts of Chancery. Accordingly, as in all cases where any exercise of discretion is allowable, we find some dissimilarity in the decisions.

In Webb v. The Direct London and Portsmouth Railway Company (9 Hare, 129) the contract was to select eight acres of the plaintiff's land, and for those eight acres, and for consequential damage, to pay him 4500*l*. The consideration for the agreement was, withdrawal of opposition to the company's bill. The bill became an act, but the company abandoned the formation of the line, and allowed the time for the exercise of their powers to expire. It did not appear that the plaintiff had altered his position upon the faith of the contract, but he represented that he had been put to some expense. Sir G. J. Turner, V. C., decided that the expiration of the company's powers did not affect their obligations; and he answered the argument of hardship by saying, that the company had entered into the agreement with their eyes open, and had had the benefit of the landowner's withdrawal of his opposition in Parliament; and that if the decree were refused, on the ground of the subsequent inability of the defendants to complete the railway, it must be refused in all cases in which a purchaser found that he could not effect the purpose for which he entered into the contract.

Lord Cranworth, L. J., however, on appeal, (1 De G., Mac., & G. 521), in reversing this decision, observed that the Court would readily listen to an objection made against a vendor seeking specific performance, because, of necessity, he could get complete relief at law; and in this case the decree, which was appealed from, would or might occasion positive injustice; it would give to the plaintiff 4500*l.* as the purchase money for that which the defendants had not taken, and which, perhaps, they never could now take, whereas damages at law would do complete justice. Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, L. J., thought the agreement too obscure to be enforced; and on the same ground he also refused specific performance in the similar case of Lord James Stuart v. The London and North-western Railway Company, (1 De G., Mac., & G. 721).

Subsequently to these decisions occurred the appeal case of Hawkes v. The Eastern Counties Railway Company, (1 De G., Mac., & G. 737). The agreement there was of a similar kind, for the like consideration of not opposing the company's bill; and the suit was instituted by the landowner after the act of Parliament had been obtained, but just before the company's powers expired. At the date of the judgment, however, these powers were gone. The feature of the case which seems to us to give it a distinguishing peculiarity was, that the plaintiff, on the faith of the contract, had vacated his dwelling-house, which was on the land to be taken, and had therefore considerably altered his position upon the footing of the agreement. The Lord Chancellor (Lord St. Leonard's) decreed specific performance, at the suit of the landowner against the company, and observed, with reference to the previous decisions—"It appears to me that the case of Webb v. The Direct London and Portsmouth Railway Company was reversed upon the uncertainty of the contract; and if it was reversed upon any other ground, I should hesitate before I could acquiesce in that decision." Speaking of the same decision, and of Lord James Stuart's case, the Lord Chancellor also said—"I do not say that either of those decisions was not a proper decision, under the particular circumstances of each case; but I say, if they are to be considered as authorities for refusing specific performance in a case like the present, that I should totally disagree with them. Such would be a new view of the doctrine of this Court." Now, looking at another part of the Lord Chancellor's judgment, we find these words:—"I have not the slightest doubt that a bona fide agreement for the sale of lands, enabling a company to promote its views, and carry them into effect by the aid of an act of Parliament, (whether the company may pay a little more or a little less than the actual value), is perfectly valid. I have no means of measuring the value, but in most of these cases it is of the greatest importance to promoters of railways that they should be enabled to make purchases during the pendency of the bill before Parliament, and thus to get rid of opposition; and, under such circumstances, having obtained what they wanted, though they may have to pay a little more for their purchase, it is clearly not for this Court to inquire too narrowly into that, or on such grounds to refuse specific performance of the agreement." The last sentence in that paragraph is by no means in accordance with the views expressed in the judgments in the previous cases of the present Lord Chancellor. Lord Cranworth, unless we mistake, was of opinion that the magnitude of the price intended to be given, part of it being for consequential damage that could not occur, and injury by severance that would never be made, was a very strong reason for leaving the parties to their remedy at law, where a proper compensation for the breach of contract, with all its attendant circumstances, would be given in the shape of damages, estimated by a jury.

We submit that these decisions are consistent with one another, as Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, L. J., observed in Lord James Stuart's case; and in the remarks which we here make we do not intend to find fault with any of them; but it is undeniable, that in a contest between a wealthy company and a private individual, the national sympathy for the weaker party influences not a little the decisions of the Court of Chancery. A great company has always to struggle against a strong prejudice in the mind of the judge. Neither do we quarrel with that circumstance, except so far as it may interfere with doctrines which are constantly applied to cases of contracts between private individuals. However, we submit that the peculiar nature and circumstances of these companies cannot be entirely disregarded. Notwithstanding the high authority of Lord St. Leonard's, we think good reasons may be given in favour of Lord Cranworth's inclination to leave the parties, in many of these cases, to their remedies at common law. Very frequently railway companies fail to carry out their objects from no fault of the promoters; and it is a severe measure of justice to force them to complete purchases of land, which they cannot use, at prices much beyond the value. The company is not, as it is too often considered, an insensible abstraction, with exhaustless funds, but an aggregation of individuals, far too many of whom are poor clergymen, merchants' clerks, small shopkeepers, and others of the countless class who seek profitable investments for hard-earned savings. The money which the leviathan company can part with so easily comes out of the pockets of these individuals. To them it is a matter of vast importance whether the company shall pay 100,000*l.* for land which they do not require, or only 10,000*l.* by way of damages for breach of contract. These decisions affect not only the greedy speculators, who are most prominent in railway affairs—they are felt more hardly by quiet firesides down in remote corners of England.

On the other hand, we may picture rapacious landholders seeking to bind the company by exorbitant bargains, made in order to buy off at any price unreasonable opposition. We believe this view of the matter to be true, at least as often as the very different idea which is generally entertained; and in such a case who can deny that a Court of equity is justified in exercising its acknowledged discretion, by leaving the landowner to obtain a full compensation, at least disadvantage to the company than would be occasioned by a decree for specific performance?*

Reviews.

1. The Common-law Procedure Act, with numerous Notes, explanatory of its practical Effect; and an Introductory Essay, illustrative of its Tendency to restore the Ancient System of Pleading. By R. MORRIS and W. F. FINLASON, Barristers at Law.
[Stevens & Norton, 1852.]

2. The New System of Common-law Procedure, according to the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852. By J. R. QUAIN, Barrister at Law, and H. HOLROYD, Special Pleader.
[Butterworths, 1852.]

A measure which has wrought so many and such important changes in common-law practice and pleading as the statute above referred to has naturally found numerous expositors, to explain (and, after the manner of commentators, sometimes to make) obscurities, to collect statutes, rules of court, and decisions of the former law applicable to the present system, and, in fact, to put the new cloth unto the old garment. Some content themselves with short annotations to such sections as are deemed worthy of them, briefly pointing out the object, and giving the former law, so far as may be considered practically useful. The edition of Messrs. Quain and Holroyd is after this fashion; it contains neither introduction, stating the changes effected by the statute, nor even a preface, but the act itself is given, followed by a copious and carefully-compiled index, and illustrated by well-written notes, which have evidently been composed with a view to meet the requirements of busy practitioners. They bear signs of acuteness as well as of careful consideration, and may, as far as we are able to judge, be safely relied upon.

The work of Messrs. Morris and Finlason is of a more ambitious character, though of less ambitious title. Here the editors start with an Introduction of 218 pages, which exhibits much learning and laborious research, and which is applied to the new measure in the notes appended to many of the succeeding pages. The learned authors are of opinion that the new act tends to restore the ancient system of pleading before it was corrupted, and the object of the Introduction is to shew how the act may best be construed in connexion with such system. Many of the instances given are curious, and we think it not improbable, as it certainly is desirable, that several of the principles laid down during or before the reign of Edward III, and since allowed to remain in abeyance, will now again be adopted to some extent by our Courts, particularly the two important rules, first, that a party waived that which he had the power to plead, (i. e. that which he would know as well as the other party), and declined to plead, and therefore no objection could be taken to that which did not affect the substantial issue; and, secondly, that pleadings might be as general as possible, until the parties had agreed as to the point in dispute.

At first sight we were disposed to think this Introduction out of place, in an edition of so practical a measure as the Common-law Procedure Act, but we are now satisfied that it is sufficiently pertinent to the matter in hand to justify its position, and that it has been written with so much care and research as amply to repay perusal. At the same time, we think it might be condensed with advantage, and that the results should be summed up at the end of it. The conclusion to which the editors arrive is shewn most briefly and pointedly in note (a) to p. 219. We do not agree with the remarks upon the 49th section of the act, (p. 269, note (a)), and think there can be no possible use in retaining the allegation of losing and finding in trover, and of bailment in detinue; nor do we think a right construction has been put upon that part of the same section which states that "mutual promises to perform agreements shall be omitted." The editors seem to think that this will apply to the omission of a promise, which forms the sole consideration for another promise; but we think that the section excludes only the superfluous averment of mutual promises, after the statement of an agreement between the parties.

There is a mistake at the end of note (a) to p. 229, in stating that sect. 8 does not contain words which were in rule 2 of H. T., 2 Will. 4; it will be seen that the section does contain those words. In note (a) to p. 275, line 7 from the end, the word "not" is omitted by mistake. Very good notes will be found at p. 289, note (a), upon payment into court; p. 293, note (b), upon the new form of joining issue; and p. 315, note (a), upon costs of the day.

LONDON, MARCH 5, 1853.

A CASE has recently been decided in the Rolls Court, in which, as it appears to us, the question of costs, in a suit for specific performance, was dealt with not consistently with the authorities. Collard v. Sampson (the case to which we allude) was a suit by claim against a purchaser, for specific performance of his agreement to purchase certain leasehold property; and the main question was, whether a power to be exercised "by deed or deeds, writing or writings, under hand and seal," was a testamentary power within the 10th section of the Wills Act, so as to be validly exercised by a will not under seal. The exceptions taken by the defendant to the Master's report in favour of the title were attempted to be sustained, on the ground that the Wills Act did not apply to such a power; or, at all events, that the title was not one which should be forced on a purchaser. His Honor overruled the exceptions, in deference to a decision of Sir J. Wigram in Budrell v. Blenkhorn, (5 Hare, 131); but made the decree for specific performance, without costs, on the ground that it appeared that a good title was first shewn in the Master's office. On behalf of the vendors, there was an affidavit stating that the grounds on which the Master proceeded in this finding were, that a certain piece of evidence, which was always producible, but had never been asked for by the purchaser, was not, in fact, produced by the vendors until the parties attended before him upon the reference to inquire into the title. The truth of this representation was confirmed by counsel in the cause, who had argued the matter in the Master's office. Indeed, nobody contradicted it, the well-known facts of the case being, that all the objections taken by the purchaser to the vendors' title were overruled by the Master, but that, owing to the non-production of the last receipt for ground-rent, (which was to be taken as evidence that the covenants in the lease had been observed), he was unable to report that a good title had been shewn prior to the filing of the claim. Under these circumstances it was insisted by the vendors' counsel, on the authority of Long v. Collier (4 Russ. 269) and Holwood v. Bailey, (Id. 271), that inasmuch as the purchaser might have seen this receipt if he had asked for it, but, instead of doing so, had raised other objections, which had been all overruled, the decree for specific performance ought to be with costs. We humbly conceive that such a decree would have been warranted by both principle and authority, and clearly have met the justice of the case. The recognised principle we apprehend to be, that the costs of a suit should be paid by the party who is unsuccessful on the points litigated in the cause. This seems to be the general rule of all Courts, in the absence of misconduct on the other side. "Parties," said Lord Cottenham, (2 Ph. 545), "may have more or less reason for coming here; but the question is, whether those who are right or those who are wrong are to pay the costs of their so doing. The rule I always act upon is, to order costs to be paid by those who are wrong." Now, in Collard v. Sampson, the parties came to the Court to obtain its decision upon certain objections to title, which the purchaser relied on as a defence to a suit for specific performance. Upon these objections, the report of the Master and the decision of the Court were against him. The production of the last receipt for ground-rent was not a point at issue in the cause. Up to the investigation in the Master's office the receipt was never asked for, and then it was immediately produced. If purchasers, after thus failing in all their objections, are to obtain the costs of the suit because some evidence had not been thrust upon them unasked for, it is easy to see that such parties may, by a mere trick, avoid the just consequences of an unsuccessful contest. What says Lord St. Leonard's on this point? After adverting to the rule, that a seller is liable to the costs up to the time that he shewed a good title, he proceeds, "But the Court will not let this rule operate as a trap for the seller, and, if further abstracts are furnished after the bill is filed, will inquire whether they are material. So as to evidence. But as to evidence, much depends upon the fact, whether further evidence was required by the purchaser." And again: "Where the purchaser might, if he pleased, have had the evidence furnished to him before the bill is filed, although the Master reports that the title was not made out until the evidence was produced, the purchaser will have to pay the costs." And in Oxenden v. Lord Exmouth the Court held that the suit became necessary by the improper conduct of the purchaser; and, therefore, the Vice-Chancellor, although he had allowed, as a fact, that the title to a part of the estate was not shewn until after the filing of the bill, yet held, that as the purchaser's misconduct rendered the suit necessary, he must pay all the costs. (3 Sugd. V. & P. 143, 144). Two of the cases cited by Lord St. Leonard's in support of the above propositions were Long v. Collier and Holwood v. Bailey, which, as above stated, were cited in Collard v. Sampson. We submit that they furnished ample authority for what was asked in that case, viz. that the decree for specific performance should have been made against the purchaser, with costs.

In a very recent number of this journal we reviewed the latest cases respecting the duration of annuities given by wills, and took occasion to point out the difficulty of applying certain simple and intelligible rules of construction, which have been adopted by the Courts with a view to facilitate the determination of these questions, to the special circumstances of particular cases. (See 16 Jur., part 2, p. 154). Since then the case of Kerr v. The Middlesex Hospital (17 Jur., part 1, p. 49) has been before the Courts, and, like the majority of cases upon this subject, affords a striking illustration of difference of judicial opinion upon the proper construction of the language in which bequests of annuities are made. In that case the testator bequeathed as follows:—"I leave all my property, of whatever kind it may be, in England or elsewhere, of which I shall die possessed, to A. B., &c., to hold the same in trust for the following purposes:—I leave to my well-beloved daughter-in-law, Frances Lagier, the sum of 3000*l.*, &c. I leave to her sister, Jane Symes, and the Rev. Mr. Lagier, husband of the aforesaid Frances Lagier, the sum of 1000*l.* each. I desire that my executors shall purchase *annuities for each of my two sisters, viz. Mrs. Eliza Burns and Mrs. Helen Fitzpatrick, of 100*l.* a year each the said annuities to be purchased in the British funds.*" He then gave several other annuities and legacies, and his will then proceeded:—"I direct my landed property at Otham to be sold by auction, and the produce to go to the carrying out of the aforesaid annuities and legacies; and should the produce of the said sale not be found sufficient for that purpose, I desire that the remainder shall be made up from my personal property." He then directed all his personal estate to be sold, and continued his will thus:—"After the above annuities and all legacies have been paid and effected I desire the remainder of my personal property shall be laid out in the purchase of an annual income in the 3*l.* per cent. Consols, for the benefit of a cancer ward in the Middlesex Hospital, London." The question in the suit, which had been instituted by the executors for the administration of the estate, was, whether the annuities given by the will were perpetual or life annuities. Sir J. Romilly, M. R., before whom the cause was first heard, expressed a very decided and confident opinion that the annuities were only life annuities. He was of opinion that the words of the will admitted of no doubt or ambiguity, and that this was a clear instance of an annuity being given for life only. It seemed to him, that where the produce of a fund producing a perpetual income is given, the annuity is a permanent annuity; but that where an annuity is given to be secured upon a permanent fund, the annuity is only for a person's life. In the case before the Court the subject of the gift was an annuity simpliciter, which, according to a well-established rule, would be only an annuity for life, followed by a direction that it was "to be purchased in the British funds;" but that was not giving the produce of a sum of money in the British funds belonging to the testator to a person for an indefinite period, which was a different thing; it merely described in what manner this annuity, which was an annuity for life, was to be turned into the produce of a fund which did not exist. If the testator had intended to have given the annuitants so much stock as would produce 100*l.* a year, a very different set of words would have been employed, according to the ordinary acceptance of the words used by persons in ordinary parlance. Was this annuity for life, then, to be enlarged into a permanent annuity because it was to be paid out of a permanent income? The learned judge was of opinion it was not, and said that no case that he was acquainted with, or that had been cited to him, amounted to a decision to that effect.

Eliza Burns, one of the annuitants, appealed against this decision, and her case, on appeal, was argued before the full Court, composed of the Lord Chancellor (Lord St. Leonard's) and the Lords Justices (Sir J. L. Knight Bruce and Lord Cranworth). Of these three learned judges no two could absolutely agree as to the proper construction of the language in which the testator had expressed his intentions respecting the duration of the annuities given by his will. Lord Cranworth said, had there been no direction to purchase in the British funds, it was clear that the annuity would have been for the life of the annuitant only, and the question before the Court was, whether the case was altered by the direction that the annuity was "to be purchased in the British funds." He thought not. It appeared to him that the direction might be satisfied by the purchase of a Government annuity. As to the case of Heron v. Stokes, (12 Cl. & Fin. 161), which had been relied upon for the appellant, Lord Cranworth did not think it governed the present case. That case depended upon the particular language of the will, which the House of Lords held meant, that what was there given was such an amount of property as produced 100*l.* a year: the corpus was given, and not merely an annuity; whereas in the present case there was a direction to purchase an annuity, which would be only a gift of an annuity, as distinguished from the gift of a fund producing the amount of the annuity. He, therefore, thought that the decision of the Master of the Rolls was correct. Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, on the other hand, although he would not "insinuate" how he should have been disposed to deal with the present case if that of Heron v. Stokes had not existed, felt himself bound to say, upon the authority of that case, that the appellant was entitled to a perpetual annuity.

The Lord Chancellor expressed a clear and confident opinion that the appellant was entitled to a perpetual annuity. "It is undisputed," he said, "that if an annuity be directed to be provided out of the proceeds of property, or out of property generally—if an annuity is to be brought into existence by the application of property, and that is given to a party generally, the party would take the property appropriated to purchase the annuity, and therefore would take the annuity in perpetuity if it were purchased." His Lordship then minutely examined the various parts of the testator's will, and concluded from them that "he never meant that there was to be a continued payment of the annuities, but that his intention was that a certain portion of the produce of his property should be applied to the purchase of annuities for these two ladies in the British funds;" and that this was a case in which the testator has given an annuity, to be purchased out of the produce of his estate, and the rest of his estate was to be applied to another object; therefore the produce of his estate was, in this view, altogether cut off from the rest of the property, and dedicated to this particular purpose. "Well," continued the learned judge, "if an annuity be dedicated to a particular purpose out of a man's estate, I hold it to be clear law that that individual would take the absolute interest, because it is, in effect, a dedication of a portion of the corpus of a man's property to produce the particular benefit." And after stating that he could consider the testator, by a latitude of language, as applying the expression "British funds" to a Government annuity, because a Government annuity was payable out of the Consolidated Fund, and the Consolidated Fund was money raised by the authority of Parliament to pay the British funds themselves, the Lord Chancellor said that the expression "British funds" was used in the testator's will in its ordinary and proper sense, as meaning the public funds of Great Britain—British funds, as contradistinguished from a fund or money raised for the purpose of paying those funds; and that, as a life interest in those funds could not be purchased, the particular amount of stock which would produce, for example, 100*l.* a year, must be bought. When that was bought that was a perpetual annuity. That was the subject which was given to these ladies, so that the testator had directed that to be purchased which would endure perpetually, and had given the subject so directed to be purchased for this lady; without confining her to a life interest.

In the result, therefore, it was held, upon the construction of this testator's will, that he intended to give, or rather had given, the appellant a perpetual annuity of 100*l.*—that is, the sum of 3000*l.* in cash, assuming that to be a sufficient sum of money to purchase such an annuity. Now, if he had intended to do that, why did he not do it in the same way as he had, by an earlier part of his will, left "to his well-beloved daughter-in-law, Frances Lagier, the sum of 3000*l.*?" It seems, that where he intended to give one of his relatives a sum of 3000*l.*, he knew perfectly well how to do it, and did not set about effecting his intention in the extraordinary roundabout way in which the Lord

Chancellor held, with respect to the annuity given to the appellant, he had expressed himself. If he had intended to do the same things by leaving one relative the sum of 3000*l.*, and by directing an annuity of 100*l.* a year to be purchased for another relative, why did he express himself in these very different forms of dispositions? Can any satisfactory reason be assigned for his so doing, or is it not rather evident therefrom that he did not intend to do the same things by these different means?

From the conflict of judicial opinion in this case, it is evident that the testamentary riddle contained in this will is most difficult of solution; and whilst we doubt whether the ultimate determination of this case is consistent with the authorities upon this subject, we entertain no doubt whatever that if the testator could interfere, he would reverse the decision of the Court of Appeal, and maintain that of the Master of the Rolls.

Reviews.

Reports of the Decisions of Committees of the House of Commons in the Trial of Controverted Elections during the Fifteenth Parliament of the United Kingdom. By DAVID POWER, Esq., and HUNTER RODWELL, Esq., Barristers at Law; and EDWARD L'ESTRANGE DEW, Esq., one of the Committee Clerks of the House of Commons. [Stevens & Norton, 1853.]

THIS is a useful book, especially in the present season of plenty as regards election petitions. The cases decided by thirty-three election committees, from 1847 to 1852, are clearly and succinctly reported, while the points are well extracted, in the shape of marginal notes. During the period thus embraced, several important questions of election law were determined, amongst which may be mentioned, "the refusal to open the register for a Scotch county, in The Peebles-shire case; the decisions of the Dublin committee upon the Irish franchise; the exact definition of the limits to which a committee will go in opening the English register, as decided in the first Harwich case, 1851; and the effect of the disqualification of a candidate for bribery and treating at a former election upon the votes given in his favour at the ensuing election, on which the Cheltenham and Horeham committees came apparently to conflicting decisions. Many resolutions were also come to with respect to the course of practice to be observed on the trial of election petitions, which form valuable precedents for the guidance of future committees." (Pref.)

The reports are diversified and somewhat enlivened by proceedings incident to the anomalous tribunal called an election committee. Thus we find frequent instances of honourable members being taken into the custody of the serjeant-at-arms for not being present for the purpose of being sworn within an hour of the meeting of the house. We learn that a witness who prevaricated was at once given into custody; and that an application was made (but refused) for a Roman Catholic priest to be ordered out of the room, on the ground that his presence might influence the witnesses*.

In conclusion, it may be observed that there is a very full and well-arranged index to all the points decided. We think, however, that there should have been a table of cases and statutes, and that the different sections of acts of Parliament referred to in argument should have been set out in foot-notes. This has been done in one or two instances, (see p. 73, note (a)), but omitted in others, (see pp. 15, 16, 19, 34, &c.) A further suggestion which we would make is, that references should be inserted in the body of the work to the other parts which refer to the same points. Thus, for instance, in the case of The Borough of Great Yarmouth, it was decided that where a seat is not prayed, recriminatory evidence is inadmissible, unless for the purpose of impeaching the credit of the witness. The same point was discussed in the case of The Borough of Lancaster, (first case), and The Borough of Bolton case; and we think there should be references to and from the different pages, (pp. 3, 43, 51), containing these and other matters, in consimili casu.

LONDON, MARCH 12, 1853.

As this is the time for delivering the gaols throughout the country, we return to a consideration of the recent cases which have been decided with reference to criminal law*.

Several applications have been made to bail prisoners committed upon a charge of murder; the result of them is, that although the Court of Queen's Bench has power in such cases to admit to bail, yet, in its discretion, it will not do so where the evidence against the accused is sufficient to justify the charge. In Ex parte Baronnet and Allain (17 Jur., part 1, p. 184; 1 Pearce's C. C. 51) the application was to admit to bail Etienne Baronnet and Edmond Allain, who had been committed to take their trial, on the coroner's inquisition, for the murder of Monsieur Courmet, caused in a duel near Windsor. It appeared, however, that the accused had acted as seconds, and had confessed their participation in the affair—in other words, confessed that they were guilty of that which the law regards as murder; and therefore the Court would not grant the application. Reg. v. Barthelemy and Morney (17 Jur., part 1, p. 184; 1 Pearce's C. C. 60) was a motion, arising out of the same duel, for the purpose of admitting two of the accused to bail. Here there was no confession by the prisoners, but the Court refused to bail them, on the ground that there was evidence to support the finding of the coroner's jury. In another case (not yet reported) an application to bail a man charged with having committed murder near Stafford was granted, it appearing by the depositions that he was committed only on the accusation of a fellow-prisoner, who had made many contradictory statements with reference to his guilt.

The above cases refer to practice in the criminal law, and under this head we may note Reg. v. Major, (1 Pearce's C. C. 13; 21 L. J., M. C., 221). There a defendant was convicted of perjury, upon an indictment removed by himself, by certiorari, into the Court of Queen's Bench, and the prosecutors were held entitled to costs, under the 5 & 6 Will. & M. c. 11, as "parties grieved or injured," although the false swearing failed in its effect, and although the prosecutors were interested only as executors in the suit in which the perjury was committed. Wightman, J., said, "If the perjury has been completed, and may have caused damage to the prosecutors, I think it sufficient . . . . The false affidavit (the perjury complained of) put an obstruction in their way which they were compelled to remove."

In criminal pleading, the case of Sill v. The Queen, (1 Pearce's C. C. 132; 22 L. J., M. C., 41) deserves attention, as deciding that an indictment for obtaining goods by false pretences must state the ownership of the goods. The judgment was reversed upon error; but the Court intimated an opinion that the defect might have been remedied at the trial, by amendment under Lord Campbell's Act, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 1.

The following cases relate to evidence in criminal law:—Upon an indictment for bigamy, it became necessary to prove a marriage according to the law of Scotland; and a woman, present at the marriage ceremony in Scotland performed in a private house by a minister of a congregation, but whether or not of the kirk she did not know, stated that she herself had been married in the same way; that parties always married in Scotland in private houses; and that the parties, after the ceremony, had lived as man and wife. It was held that her evidence was insufficient to prove the law of marriage in Scotland, or to establish a marriage in fact. (Reg. v. Povey, 17 Jur., part 1, p. 120; 1 Pearce's C. C. 32). The Court were of opinion that some person conversant with the law of Scotland as to marriages should have been called, and also some one to shew that a marriage had taken place according to such law.

The question of confessions made under inducement has again been considered in Reg. v. Moore, (16 Jur., part 1, p. 621; 21 L. J., M. C., 199*). The prisoner was indicted for the murder of her child. Her mistress had told her that "she had better speak the truth." In answer, she said she would tell it to the surgeon: the surgeon then came, and she confessed to him, in the presence of her mistress, that she had strangled the child. The Court of Criminal Appeal, after taking time to consider, held that this confession was admissible in evidence. Parke, B., delivering the judgment of the Court, said, "The cases on this subject have gone quite far enough, and ought not to be extended. . . . If the threat or inducement is held out by a person in authority, it cannot be received, however slight the threat or inducement; and the prosecutor, magistrate, or constable is such a person, and so the master or mistress may be. . . . But on referring to the cases where the master and mistress have been held to be persons in authority, it will be found that it is only when the offence concerns the master or mistress, that their holding out the threat or promise renders the confession inadmissible. . . . In the present case the offence of the prisoner in killing her child was in no way an offence against the mistress of the house."

With regard to the nature of offences, it is larceny to remove the goods of another, for the purpose of inducing him to believe that they belong to a third person, whom he (the true owner) is to pay for them. (Reg. v. Manning and Smith, 17 Jur., part 1, p. 28; 1 Pearce's C. C. 21; 22 L. J., M. C., 21). So, a subsequent felonious appropriation of goods is a larceny, although the first taking was a mere trespass, as the taking of goods by mistake. Thus, where the prisoner, by mistake, drove away with his flock of lambs one of the prosecutor's lambs, and afterwards, on finding out that he had the lamb, immediately sold it as his own, he was held to have been rightly convicted of larceny. (Reg. v. Riley, 17 Jur., part 1, p. 189; 1 Pearce's C. C. 149; 22 L. J., M. C., 48). It would be otherwise where the original taking was rightful. It is a misdemeanour at common law to bring a glandered horse into a public place, to the danger of infecting the Queen's subjects; and it is not necessary that the defendant should have known that the glanders was a disease communicable to man. It is sufficient if he knew that the horse was glandered. (Reg. v. Henson, 1 Pearce's C. C. 24). Counts in an indictment for preserving and keeping in possession obscene prints, with the intent and for the purpose of selling them, and thereby corrupting morals, &c., held insufficient; but other counts, charging that the defendant unlawfully obtained and procured obscene prints with a like intent, were held to be good. (Dugdale v. The Queen, 1 Pearce's C. C. 64). The Court drew the distinction between a mere intent, which does not in our law constitute a crime, and an act done towards the completion of an offence.

Two points have just been decided of great importance to conveyancers, and which have not before, we believe, been the subject of a judicial opinion.

The first may be stated broadly thus:—A judgment, unless re-registered, under the provisions of the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, s. 4, within five years from the date of its first registration under the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, is void as a charge upon the land of the judgment debtor against a subsequent purchaser; so that re-registration after such five years will be of no effect against such a purchaser of the land, although made within five years preceding the purchase, and within twenty years after the entry of the judgment.

The material words of the statute in question are, that all judgments registered under the provisions of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, shall, after the expiration of five years from the date of the entry thereof, be null and void, against lands, tenements, and other hereditaments, as to purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, unless a like memorandum or minute as was required in the first instance is again left with the senior Master of the Court of Common Pleas within five years before the execution of the conveyance, &c. transferring the legal or equitable right or interest to any such purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration, or, as to creditors, within five years before the right of such creditors accrued; and so toties quoties at the expiration of every succeeding five years.

The language of this section is ambiguous: it does not express that the judgment is to be void unless registered every five years after its first registration, but it is to be void at the end of five years from the former registration, as against a purchaser, unless registered within five years before the conveyance of the lands to him. We should have thought, and we believe the opinion of many conveyancers to have been hitherto, that a re-registry, at any time within twenty years after the entry of the judgment, would be sufficient to bind a purchaser within five years from such last registration; for the act 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, was surely never intended to create a new bar to a judgment debt, but only to relieve a purchaser from the necessity of searching the register for more than five years prior to the date of the conveyance to him. Practically, if a purchaser finds a judgment debt registered less than five years ago, he does not inquire whether the registrations have been made every five years since the first; but, according to this view of the statute, such an inquiry might be material; for if any one of the intermediate registrations had been made a day too late, the judgment as against him would be void.

Suppose, for example, a first registration in 1840, a second in 1846, a third in 1849, and a purchase at this time, what conceivable purpose could it answer to make the judgment void against the purchaser because wrongly registered in 1846? He finds the judgment upon the register in 1850: it is not barred by the Statute of Limitations; and we venture to submit that it is an unnecessary hardship upon the judgment creditor to take from him his security as a penalty for what may have been an accidental omission; and that, there being an ambiguity in the statute on this point, it would be more accordant with its spirit to hold that the judgment in such a case was a valid charge against the purchaser of the land.

The other point to which we refer was upon the construction of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, the statute for rendering the assignment of satisfied terms unnecessary. It has been doubted by Lord St. Leonard's (see V. & P. 177; Real Prop. Stat. 288) whether this act gives the protection of a satisfied term, which has been assigned in trust for the vendor, and to attend the inheritance, to a purchaser from him, since the 31st December, 1845. Under the former law, the purchaser, to have the protection of the term, must have taken an assignment or declaration of trust of it in his own favour; or if he did not, the term would be no protection to him against any one claiming a prior interest in the inheritance, and even a subsequent incumbrancer without notice might get in the term, and hold the land during its continuance against a prior mortgagee. Now, the statute, by its title and preamble, declares its object to be to render unnecessary the assignment in future of satisfied terms; and its enactment for this purpose is, that every satisfied term attendant on the 31st December, 1845, shall on that day cease—a provision which, standing alone, not only renders a future assignment unnecessary, but impossible. But there follows a saving, that every such term of years so attendant by express declaration, although it cease, shall afford to every person the same protection as if it had continued to subsist, but had not been assigned or dealt with.

As we have said, the existence of the term, without a fresh assignment, would have been no protection to a purchaser, under the old law, in the case we have supposed; and as the act leaves him expressly in the same position, it would seem to follow, that it affords him no protection; and we fear that the succeeding words of the section, viz. that the term, for the purpose of such protection, is to be considered in every court of law and of equity to be a subsisting term, do not alter this; for the term does not subsist for the purpose of being assigned, and unassigned it can be no protection under the previous provision. However, the same case to which we before alluded (Freer v. Hesse, 17 Jur., part 1, p. 177) has decided, that, under the supposed circumstances, the term will be a protection to the purchaser—a decision which is certainly consistent with justice, and is supported by an argument of Mr. Williams, (p. 396 of his accurate little work on the Law of Real Property), but is, as we humbly conceive, not logically deducible from the language of the act on which we have commented here.

LONDON, MARCH 19, 1853.

THE system of law reporting in this country has long been in a state not in harmony with the wants and wishes of the Profession. The immense quantity of business disposed of has greatly increased the extent of the productions of each reporter; and as regards the Court of Chancery, the increased number of the courts has also increased the number of reports. The very high price, too, which has hitherto been placed upon what are termed the regular reports, has brought into existence publications such as this and the Law Journal, besides a multitude of others of a different class; and the result of the whole is, that the Profession is flooded with reports, the regular reports being too expensive to be accessible to many, and too bulky and numerous to be read by those who can afford to pay for them. Nevertheless, the system would probably have continued unaltered for many years at least, had it not been for a certain prospectus or proclamation lately issued by the principal houses engaged in publishing reports, which has roused into activity all the reforming feelings of the Profession, and produced a state of things in which it becomes necessary that the system of reporting should at once undergo some change. What the change will be is not easy to foresee; what it ought to be, or at least the principles on which it ought to be effected, we propose here very shortly to suggest, for which purpose the causes of the vice pervading the existing system must be considered.

Now, it is very common to impute to the reporters one acknowledged fault of law reports, viz. the accumulation of cases more or less deficient in establishing any great or new principle; in a word, of cases more or less sterile of important information. But the root of this fault lies much deeper; it lies in the habit of English lawyers, judges as well as counsel, relying too much on precise precedent, and not on principle. Judges are glad to be relieved from the difficulty of applying legal principles, by leaning upon a previous decision; hence counsel are afraid to trust to an argument founded on principle, and are perpetually in search of a case in point, which will secure the decision of the judge; and hence reporters are driven to publish cases, not on the principle of rejecting all those that have not a great deal in them, but of adopting all those that have anything in them. This redundancy, then, can only be cured by the adoption of a different rule of argument at the Bar, and of decision on the Bench; for it would be idle, while the Bar are perpetually crying out for cases in point, to expect the reporters, who are the servants, not the mentors of the Bar, to abstain from supplying them with more or less of indiscrimination, because with more or less of doubt whether what they themselves may think unimportant, will be so thought by their readers.

But the great complaint is of the quantity of separate reports, and the great expense of them, separately and collectively. This is a fault imputed usually to the publishers. How far that is so, we shall offer no opinion. Whether the expense, at least, arises from a too luxurious style of publication—whether from an immoderate gain secured to those who publish—we have no means of knowing, or of forming any opinion. If it results from either of those causes, wholly or partially, it is, of course, capable of cure without external aid; but if, as we conceive, it arises partly at least from the loose, unorganised mode in which the reporting body is constituted, and the total abstinence from interference of anybody possessing authority in the law—if, in fact, it arises, to any extent, from the preparation of reports being left entirely to the individual reporter, and their publication being entirely a matter of private speculation, then it can only be cured by the intervention of authority, and the formation of a totally different system.

In our view—and we know that view is shared by many of the Bar—radical reform in reporting will be attainable only by making the business of reporting an official business, and the reporters officers of the court; vesting the appointment of reporter in the head of the law, or in the judges as a body; and causing the publication and sale of reports to take place under the direction of some public officer or committee, so as to insure their sale at merely the cost price, after the manner adopted by the House of Commons in reference to the parliamentary papers. If this were done, most of the faults of reports would, we apprehend, vanish. But such a change is too great, and involves the adoption of too many proceedings, which probably the public would look upon with jealousy, to be expected at present. Nor is there any great probability of its ever being carried into effect, unless the Bar, as a body, take up the question. So long as they remain quiescent, all that can be looked for in the way of improvement is some sort of compromise—as we are a compromising nation in all our transactions—by which some of the imperfections of the present system may be moderated. Certain things, however, it is clear, the Profession is determined upon having, viz. less costly reports, and greater rapidity of publication; and both these points seem to be capable of attainment without the assistance of authority.

REGISTRATION OF JUDGMENTS AND SATISFIED TERMS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—The importance of the questions which were discussed in the case of Freer v. Hesse, (17 Jur., part 1, p. 177), noticed in your last number, will be my excuse for suggesting, first, with deference to the learned judge who decided the case, that the dictum as to the effect of neglecting to register a judgment for five years, under Sir E. Sugden's act, (for the question did not in fact arise, and was not decided), is contrary to the express language of the statute; and, secondly, with deference to yourself, that the point actually decided in the case, namely, that the Attendant Terms Act has left the protection derivable from terms actually appropriated before the 1st January, 1846, in full operation for the benefit of subsequent assigns of the persons then protected, is strictly correct, and in accordance with the express terms of the act.

To take the last-mentioned point first. The 1st section of the stat. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 112, after enacting that satisfied and attendant terms should cease to exist on the 31st December, 1845, adds this exception, that every term then attendant by express declaration though thereby made to cease, shall afford to every person the same protection as it would have afforded him if it had continued to exist, but had not been assigned or dealt with, after that day, and shall, for the purpose of such protection, be considered in every court to be a subsisting term. Now, for the purpose of the question in Freer v. Hesse, the enactment is free from any appearance of difficulty. The term was there wanted merely to keep off a judgment creditor, and it would be a sufficient answer to his elegit that there was an adverse term subsisting in some one or somewhere—no matter whom or where—but not in the judgment creditor. The difficulty which the enactment unquestionably presents is only with reference to the case where, as was said in the Exchequer, the term is wanted, not as a shield, but as a sword; and it is a difficulty of pleading. The person entitled to the protection of the term is out of possession, and seeks to eject one who is in possession under a legal title paramount every other legal title, except that under the term which was subsisting in 1845. The term of 1845 is dead. In whose name is the ejectment to be brought? No assignment of or dealing with the term subsequent to 1845 can be alleged. Now, what was intended was evidently to exclude an assignment or dealing for the purpose of appropriating the term as a protection peculiarly to the person causing the assignment to be made; to prevent, in short, one who purchased from A. in 1847 from seeking to appropriate the term to himself by an assignment which should exclude a possible undisclosed mortgagee of 1846. But making a title by administration or executorship is not a dealing with the term, nor is it, except by a refinement in technicality, an assignment of it; and if the expressly declared intention of the act cannot be carried out in any other way, it necessarily follows that an administrator or executor of the trustee of an attendant term, who died after 1845, is not an assignee within the meaning of the proviso, and may now maintain an ejectment for the benefit of the person entitled to the protection of the term.

As in Freer v. Hesse the term was a sufficient protection against the judgments, assuming them to have been otherwise available, it was unnecessary to consider whether the judgments were effectually registered or not; and the distinction made as to costs between the defendant's resistance to specific performance before the filing of the amended bill, (when the first five years had not elapsed), and the continuance of his resistance after the five years had elapsed, is merely an example of the well-known propensity of the Court of Chancery to "se deraisonner" whenever costs are in question. As the Court held that the plaintiff was right on all the points, he ought to have had all his costs.

But in giving an opinion on the construction of the 4th section of the stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11, the Court had evidently neglected to read the whole of the section; for when the whole of the section is read, it is clear, beyond a doubt, that the act does not require a continuous succession of entries within every successive period of five years. The enactment is, that every judgment, &c. which shall have been registered "shall, after the expiration of five years from the date of the entry, be null and void, against lands, tenements, and hereditaments, as to purchasers, mortgagees, or creditors, unless a like memorandum or minute as was required in the first instance is again left with the senior Master of the said Court of Common Pleas within"—what?—the said period of five years? No. Yet, if the Vice-Chancellor's dictum is correct, that is what would naturally have followed—But within "five years before the execution of the conveyance," &c. to such purchaser; "or, as to creditors, within five years before the right of such creditors accrued." Stopping here, the act plainly says that at the end of five years from the entry of the judgment, it shall be void for certain purposes unless there be another entry within, not those five years, but another period of five years, counted backwards, from an entirely distinct epoch. It proceeds—"and so toties quoties at the expiration of every succeeding five years"—that is to say, that as, at the expiration of five years after the first entry, the judgment is to be void for certain purposes unless it be re-entered within five years before the conveyance, "c.", so, at the expiration of five years after a second or subsequent entry, it shall be void in like manner unless the same condition be fulfilled; "toties" plainly referring to the repetition of the avoidance, and "quoties" to the repetition of the entry. It is true that the whole of the toties quoties clause is unnecessary; but the Vice-Chancellor's construction would require, not only that the re-entry should be made on the very day on which the five years expired, and not either before or after that day, but also that the whole of the elaborate reference to the date of the conveyance, and the accrual of the creditor's right, should be struck out, for it is absolutely inconsistent with that part of the clause.

LONDON, MARCH 26, 1853.

THE suggestions which we ventured to offer on the important dicta in Freer v. Hesse (ante, p. 90; 17 Jur., part 1, p. 177) have been answered by a correspondent in the last number of this journal.

After a careful consideration of the arguments against the view which we took of the question, upon the effect of the act to render the assignment of satisfied terms unnecessary, as we remain unconvinced by them, and as discussion upon a point of so much practical importance may not be unacceptable to the readers of THE JURIST, we take this opportunity of replying.

The dictum (for we believe that the Vice-Chancellor rather decided the other point argued, and expressed an obiter opinion upon this) was, in effect, that a satisfied term of years, which by express declaration was in 1845 attendant upon the inheritance of certain lands, although made to cease on that day, afforded to a subsequent purchaser, with notice of a judgment, the same protection which it afforded to his vendor, a mortgagee with a power of sale, who, without notice of the same judgment, had obtained an assignment of the term to a trustee, upon trust to secure the mortgage debt, and subject thereto, to attend the inheritance. Of course, for the purpose of this question, it is supposed that the judgment was in itself a valid and subsisting charge. Assuming for the moment that the equities of the judgment creditor and the last purchaser were equal, and that one of them had not a better right to call for an assignment of the term in his favour than the other, the objection of The Jurist correspondent, that an outstanding adverse term, existing in some one or somewhere, not in the judgment creditor, would be a sufficient answer to his elegit, appears to us by no means conclusive. To this we may reply by referring to the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 11, which empowers the sheriff, to whom an elegit is directed, to make and deliver execution to the party suing of all such lands as he, or any person in trust for him, should have been seised or possessed at the time of entering up the judgment; and to sect. 13, which gives to a judgment the effect of a charge upon all lands of or to which the judgment debtor should, at the time of entering up the judgment, be seised, possessed, or entitled, for any estate or interest whatever, at law or in equity, whether in possession, reversion, remainder, or expectancy, and gives the judgment creditor certain remedies in equity. If the term were vested, according to the suggestion, in some third person entitled to the chattel interest in the land beneficially, the feudal possession, subject to the term, would still be in the purchaser; he would be seised of an estate of inheritance subject to the term; and this interest, if not legally extendible by the elegit, would, under the 13th section of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, be charged by the judgment, and such charge, if the reversion were of any value, which the proposition that it would be protected assumes, might be enforced by a bill in equity. (See 1 Sim., N. S., 78). Therefore the beneficial interest in the land for the term, to afford any protection to the purchaser of the inheritance, must belong to him, and if it does, cadit questio. But did it in Freer v. Hesse? That is the whole difficulty. We think not. If the term was held upon a beneficial trust for the purchaser, without an express assignment or declaration of trust in his favour, then it would have protected him before the statute concerning satisfied terms; and, by the very words of that statute, such protection is to be continued, notwithstanding the destruction of the term. The question is, therefore, reduced to this—could the purchaser have claimed the benefit of this term independently of the act, without an assignment of it in his favour?

We appeal first to the practice of all conveyancers for an answer. It is beyond dispute that no lawyer would have advised that the purchaser, having notice of the judgment debt, could have had the protection against it which his vendor enjoyed, without an actual transfer of the chattel interest, during which only he could have this immunity—that is, without an assignment or fresh declaration of trust of the term in favour of the purchaser. Nor was this practice adopted simply ex abundanti cautela, though that may be regarded as the sole reason for many things done by conveyancers. Let us look at the principles which should govern this case. When the judgment was first registered, it became a charge upon the land, at law and in equity, and the term, being then attendant by construction of law, was so attendant upon the charge of the judgment creditor in his term, according to his interest in the inheritance. Then the subsequent mortgagee, if he had had notice of the charge, must have taken subject to it. Not having such notice, he was permitted, by a somewhat arbitrary rule, to appropriate for his exclusive benefit the term in which before the judgment creditor had an interest according to his charge. The equity upon which this privilege depended was entirely personal to the mortgagee, resting solely upon the fact, that at the date of his mortgage he had not notice of the judgment debt. The effect of the assignment of the term in trust for him was not to destroy the charge on the inheritance, but only to secure to him a cesset executio on the judgment during the continuance of the term. That benefit he could transmit to a purchaser from himself, even with notice, by an assignment of the term, but in no other way; and when the term expired or ceased, by surrender or otherwise, the protection was gone with it. Suppose, for the sake of illustration, that the judgment had been for a debt equal to the present value of the inheritance. The chattel estate in that case would have been the whole security of the mortgagee, and his sole interest in the lands; and the effect of selling the inheritance, and conveying it alone without the term, thus appears in its strongest light. The sale and conveyance would, in fact, pass as their chief subject—that in which the mortgagees possessed no interest. It can hardly be contended that the benefit of the term would go, even in equity, to the purchaser by implication only, without any actual grant or mention of it.

As no assignment or declaration of trust of the term could be made since the statute, it matters little who had the better right to call for such assignment; for this right of itself, of course, can give no protection, unless the assignment is made accordingly. But it is extremely doubtful, to say the least of it, whether the last purchaser in the supposed case would have had a better right even to call for an assignment of the term than the judgment creditor. This right is entirely equitable, and depends upon the question which we have assumed thus far can be affirmatively answered. Are not the equities of these two parties equal? The last purchaser had notice of an existing charge upon the inheritance, against which his vendor had protected himself by the term. The vendor, being unaffected with notice, had a right to transfer the term, of which privilege, for the vendor's benefit only, the purchaser might have taken advantage before the statute. He did not, on his purchase, take an assignment of that term, and therefore it would seem that nothing could prevent, as between him and the judgment creditor, the application of the rule, qui prior est tempore potior est jure. In this view, the equity of the judgment creditor would be superior to that of the purchaser with notice, which is more than the argument requires. It is enough for our position that these equities should be equal, as there was not, nor could be, any assignment of or dealing with the attendant term for the purchaser's benefit.

But there is another consideration arising from the nature of the trust of the term in the case of Freer v. Hesse, which it may be thought renders much of the preceding argument superfluous. The trust of the term was, it appears, for a limited purpose only—to secure the mortgage debt, and subject thereto, to attend the inheritance. Upon the mortgage debt being satisfied, the protection personal to the mortgagee was exhausted, and the trust of the term would be precisely what it was before the mortgage, when the judgment creditor had an interest in it in proportion to his charge. Therefore the judgment creditor might contend fairly, that even if, in case the mortgagee had been a purchaser, a subsequent purchaser from him, with notice, might have claimed the benefit of the former declaration of trust of the term without a fresh assignment or declaration of trust for himself, yet as the object of the assignment of the term was only to secure the mortgage debt, when that was paid off, the judgment creditor must be restored to his rights in equity against the estate.

The objection to which, as we humbly submit, the decision on this point is open, depends entirely on the language of the statute, which would give to the last purchaser in the supposed case only such protection as he could previously have had without a fresh assignment, or dealing with the term. If the construction be as we here contend, the consequence is, that a purchaser, who before 1845 protected himself by the assignment of a term against prior incumbrances of which he had notice, cannot, since the passing of the act, transmit that protection, with the estate, to a subsequent purchaser from himself. That may have been contrary to the intention of the framers of the statute, and to some may even seem absurd; but it would be more anomalous to continue for long periods of time the protection of terms which have ceased to exist; and in any view of it, we say boldly, that this construction of the act is not a greater absurdity than was the whole fiction of attendant terms, now happily becoming obsolete; for it is notorious, that under the old system it was not an uncommon practice for a purchaser to avoid inquiry respecting prior incumbrances, when there was a possibility of evading them by the dishonest device of having a term assigned in trust for his benefit, and to attend the inheritance.

ON THE EXTINGUISHMENT OF A MORTGAGE IN THE HANDS OF A PURCHASER OF THE EQUITY OF REDEMPTION.

If, where there are two mortgages of the same estate, the first mortgage is paid off by the debtor himself, the charge is extinguished for the benefit of the next incumbrancer, and cannot be set up against him, even though his mortgage was taken expressly subject to the first—the second mortgagee being considered to have stipulated for a security to the full value of the estate, if the prior incumbrance should be removed. And though it be not the mortgagor's duty to pay off the first incumbrance, (as where the mortgage has been made by the trustees of a settlement to raise portions), the second mortgagee's rights are the same; and, a fortiori, will the second mortgagee be deemed to have contracted for a security to the full value of the estate, when the mortgagor was not only not personally liable to pay the first mortgage, but was entitled, as against another person or another estate, to have his own estate exonerated from the mortgage.

In these cases it is usual to say that the charge which has been paid off has been merged in the equity of redemption. But the term "merger" is improperly applied to an extinguishment under such circumstances. Merger is the extinguishment of an estate or interest, by its concurrence in the same person with the estate or interest next in order of right to the enjoyment; and in the cases under consideration, the person next in the order of rights (namely, the second mortgagee) is not the person who acquires the interest which is held to have been extinguished. On the contrary, when the first mortgage is paid off by the second mortgagee, there is no extinguishment. The rule is not founded on any technicality, but on substantial considerations of equity. Therefore it does not extend to the case of a purchase of the equity of redemption by a first mortgagee without notice of the second mortgage, or (which is the same thing) the paying off of the first mortgage by a purchaser of the equity of redemption without notice of the second mortgage; and so the analogy of merger is not followed when a first mortgagee takes a further charge on the same property with notice of the meane incumbrance. (Miles v. Walton, 2 Coll. 364).

The doctrine of equity with respect to the extinguishment of charges was thus clearly expounded by Sir W. Grant in Forbes v. Moffatt, (18 Ves. 390)—"It is very clear, that a person becoming entitled to an estate, subject to a charge for his own benefit, may, if he choose, at once take the estate, and keep up the charge. Upon this subject a Court of equity is not guided by the rules of law. It will sometimes hold a charge extinguished where it would subsist at law, and sometimes preserve it where at law it would be merged.

The question is upon the intention, actual or presumed, of the person in whom the interests are united. In most instances it is, with reference to the party himself, of no sort of use to have a charge on his own estate; and where that is the case it will be held to sink, unless something shall have been done by him to keep it on foot. . . . With regard to presumptive intention, it was evidently most advantageous to John Moffatt that this mortgage should be kept on foot, for otherwise he would have given priority to the other mortgage, and all the debts of his brother. The reasonable presumption therefore is, that he would choose to keep the mortgage on foot. Where no intention is expressed, or the party is incapable of expressing any, I apprehend the Court considers what is most advantageous to him. . . . Upon looking into all the cases in which charges have been held to merge, I find nothing which shews that it was not perfectly indifferent to the party in whom the interests had united whether the charge should or should not subsist." (See Hood v. Phillips, 3 Beav. 513).

The purchaser of an equity of redemption is generally required to enter into an express covenant to indemnify the mortgagor against the charges of which he had notice; and if he does not expressly bind himself to do this, equity fastens the obligation on him; (Waring v. Ward, 7 Ves. 337); and if the mortgagee himself forecloses the equity of redemption, that is a satisfaction of the debt, and he will not be permitted afterwards to sue the mortgagor on his personal obligation, except upon the terms of opening the foreclosure; (Tooke v. Hartley, 2 Bro. C. C. 125; Booth v. Booth, 2 Atk. 344; Dyson v. Morris, 1 Hare, 427); and if, by selling the estate, he has rendered redemption impossible, he will be enjoined from suing the mortgagor. (Perry v. Barker, 8 Ves. 527; see Willes v. Lovatt, 1 De G. & S. 392).

A mortgagee, therefore, purchasing the equity of redemption with express notice of an intermediate mortgage, or a purchaser of the equity of redemption with express notice of the two mortgages, who afterwards pays off the first mortgage, cannot set up the first charge against the second mortgagee, because by so doing he would compel the second mortgagee to sue the mortgagor on his personal obligation, against which suit the purchaser of the equity of redemption is, by express or implied contract, bound to indemnify the mortgagor.

But a purchaser of an equity of redemption, who has not express, but only constructive, notice of a meane incumbrance, is in a different position. So far from being bound to indemnify the mortgagor against such incumbrance, he has a right to be indemnified by the mortgagor. As between him and the mortgagor, the question is not as to notice, but as to intimation, which intimation it was the mortgagor's duty to give. The implication of notice is raised solely for the benefit of the meane incumbrancer. There is none as between the mortgagor and the purchaser.

Constructive notice of the second mortgage to the purchaser of the equity of redemption would, by the settled rule of equity, disable him from setting up the legal estate, whether already in him or subsequently acquired, to defeat the claim of the second mortgagee upon the equity of redemption; but there is no ground of equity for making such notice farther operative to extinguish the prior valid and subsisting first mortgage for the benefit of the second mortgagee. This, however, was done in Toulmin v. Steere, (3 Mer. 210). In that case, Witts mortgaged an estate to H. for 5000*l.*, then granted an annuity to S. charged on the estate expressly subject to the mortgage, and then mortgaged to W. for 3000*l.* W., who was not shewn to have had notice of the annuity, afterwards took a transfer of the first mortgage. Ultimately the estate was purchased, under the authority of the Court of Chancery, by the trustees of a will, under which L. S. S., a son of Witts, was tenant for life, and L. S., a son of L. S. S., was tenant in tail in remainder. Noble, one of the trustees, was a solicitor, who acted in the purchase as agent for both parties, and who had also acted for both parties in the annuity transaction, and through whose hands the annuity had been paid. The mortgages were paid off out of the purchase money, and W. joined in the conveyance to the trustees. The bill sought payment of the annuity in preference to the mortgages. It was understood that the defendants had no actual notice of the annuity, and it was stated that Witts, the vendor, had concealed its existence, but had actually left a sum in Noble's hands to redeem it, which Noble (who soon after absconded) converted to his own use. If that were so, the charge of constructive notice was unfounded; for it is clear, and has been decided, that notice cannot be imputed to the principal of that which his agent, by reason of his own fraud, has an interest to conceal. (Kennedy v. Green, 3 My. & K. 698). But Sir W. Grant, M. R., held that the annuity had become a primary charge on the estate, observing, that, "in effect, Witts had paid off the other incumbrances, for they had been paid out of the purchase money, and he had received so much less for his estate than he would otherwise have done. Then, what equity can the purchasers have, to consider them as still subsisting as against any person claiming under W.? They are in no worse condition than they would have been if they had bought an estate on which there was no mortgage, but which turned out to be incumbered with an annuity—not known to them in fact, but constructively known to them by means of notice to their agent. In that case, would they be permitted to say, 'There was a time when there was a charge upon the estate prior to the annuity, and therefore, as between the annuitant and us, that charge shall be considered as still existing?' The cases of Greswold v. Marsham (2 Ch. Cas. 170) and Mocatta v. Murgatroyd (1 P. Wms. 393) are express authorities to shew that one purchasing an equity of redemption cannot set up a prior mortgage of his, nor consequently a mortgage which he has got in, against subsequent incumbrances, of which he had notice. I do not see how I can make any distinction, in point of legal effect, between personal notice to the party and notice affecting him through the medium of his agent."

LONDON, APRIL 2, 1853.

Of the measures shortly to be brought before Parliament by her Majesty's Ministers, one peculiarly interesting to the legal profession is the promised bill relating to Charitable Trusts.

Certainly, lawyers have, in some respects, the best reason to know how sorely legislation on this subject is required. Every man of common honesty among us must have had occasion to deplore the evils for which the comprehensive mind of Sir Samuel Romilly contrived but an imperfect remedy. No one, who has watched the progress of a litigation concerning charity property, can have failed to have been struck with the inapplicability of equity jurisdiction to the exigencies of these kind of interests. But we doubt whether even the legal profession is fully aware of the magnitude and extent of the abuses to which charities are subject, of the nature of the property and trusts of the majority of the charities themselves, and of many other circumstances relating to them which must carefully be taken into consideration in devising a legislative scheme for the inexpensive remedy of the existing evils affecting charitable trusts, and for securing in future their better administration.

Having paid some attention to the subject, we propose to canvass, when it shall appear, the Ministerial scheme, or at least to lay before our readers some of the material considerations relating to the proposals which may be made, feeling certain that any real improvement will be hailed with acclamation by the intelligence of the Profession, and cordially received without any arrière pensée, on account of the profit to lawyers which the defects of the existing system do certainly occasion.

In anticipation, then, of the announcement to be made in Parliament on Monday next, we offer to the notice of the Profession some of the facts and possibilities which must materially influence the measures of the Government.

There are large sources upon which to draw for information on this subject. Four commissions sat from 1818 to 1837, with only two intervals of seventeen and fourteen months in their labours, to inquire into the condition of public charities. Their Reports fill thirty-eight folio volumes. These concern 28,840 charities, whose aggregate yearly income is 1,209,395*l.*, of which 58,187*l.* is divided among 17,972 charities, each having an income under 10*l.* a year, and their average being 3*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.* per annum, while only 209 charities possess incomes of more than 500*l.* a year. To apply the cumbersome and costly machinery of ordinary Chancery proceedings to solve the numerous nice questions which arise in relation to such minute interests, and to correct their inevitable abuses, must necessarily produce consequences of exaggerated absurdity. In those cases in which suits have been instituted, the costs being payable out of the charity fund, and that fact being present to the knowledge of all parties concerned, of whom some at least had probably little interest in the preservation of the charity, the result has been not seldom the total destruction of the charity, by its funds being swallowed up in costs. The alternative has been often an abuse of the purposes of a small charity, by the misapplication, sometimes to positively injurious and even vicious ends, of the whole of their income, the persons interested feeling their inability to remedy the evil without destroying the subject of it altogether.

In the case of the larger charities, the Reports to which we refer shew that abuses in their administration have been permitted to exist, and continue, simply because it was no one's business in particular to prevent or cure them. Practically the Court of Chancery only takes cognisance of such matters when informed of them by the Attorney-General, at the instance of some third party as a relator, or by the petition of two interested persons, in cases within Sir S. Romilly's Act. But the parties most interested in charities are commonly the last persons in the world to be aware of this right which they have, or, if cognisant of it, to possess the necessary influence, education, knowledge of business, or indeed any quality, to enable them successfully to conduct proceedings in Chancery. Accordingly, when instituted at all, these litigations have generally been, in fact, originated and carried on by persons not especially interested in bringing them to a conclusion, and they have consequently dragged slowly along, accumulating costs by the very delay, to a shameful and ruinous amount. Sometimes the picture is painted in darker colours. There was one notable case which may be mentioned as an illustration. We speak with the highest authority for the truth of the story lying at this moment before us. To the shame of our Profession it is told, that though the worst, it is not the only case of the kind. (See Report 32, pp. 1—4). An attorney, for his own particular advantage, filed informations against a large number of charities in London and elsewhere, and grew fat in this manner upon the spoil pillaged from widows and orphans. These are matters over which, at present, there is no efficient control in the Court of Chancery, or indeed, practically, anywhere else. There is no jurisdiction which suo motu watches for, in order to correct or prevent, the mal-administration or misappropriation of the funds of public charities.

Again: the power of the Court of Chancery is extremely limited in another respect. Wealth's last caprice is seldom more capriciously exercised than in conferring benefits of this kind. We read, without surprise, of a gift in trust to apply the proceeds in giving snuff to six poor women at a certain time every year; or again, to provide each of the inmates of a certain workhouse, above sixty years of age, with a pint of porter. (The Attorney-General v. Vint, 3 De G. & S. 704). Sometimes the object is vague, often pernicious, occasionally impossible. The power of the Court of Chancery to direct a cy près administration of the trust is exceedingly limited, and if a jurisdiction were contrived to which application might more easily and cheaply be made, it would be wise and well to place in some sufficiently responsible hands a much larger discretion in this respect. But the main point is to establish such a jurisdiction, taking into consideration the nature of the evidence required, the difficulty and expense of collecting it, and the propensity of costs to accumulate unnecessarily in public suits concerning property which belongs to no one sufficiently interested to preserve it. These are the first difficulties with which Government has to deal, and the public expect from them a comprehensive measure, which shall grapple fairly with the subject, without fear or favour to any one. To such an effort of legislation ready support will be given by all classes interested in the proper administration of charitable trusts, which is a matter of no small importance in our social economy; and, we repeat it, to such a measure all the intelligence and high principle of the legal Profession will yield a disinterested and hearty assent.

ON THE EXTINGUISHMENT OF A MORTGAGE IN THE HANDS OF A PURCHASER OF THE EQUITY OF REDEMPTION.

It will thus be seen that Toulmin v. Steere was decided on the ground that there was no distinction between actual and constructive notice with reference to the question at issue, and that one purchasing an equity of redemption cannot set up a prior mortgage against subsequent incumbrances of which he has constructive notice. We have already shewn that the distinction between express and constructive notice is vital, and it is now the well-settled practice, sanctioned by judicial dictum, to rely on certain mere forms on the occasion of purchasing an equity of redemption, or of getting in a first mortgage, as sufficient to entitle the purchaser of the equity of redemption to set up the first charge against mesne incumbrances of which he has only constructive notice. Our present object is to shew that those forms (though it is highly expedient to observe them until Toulmin v. Steere is overruled) are not, as they ought not to be in a question of equity, of any importance. Indeed, to allow any efficacy to such forms is to overrule the decision in Toulmin v. Steere, where the Court evidently founded its judgment on the substance of the transaction, and gave no hint that any variation in the form of the conveyance could have improved the position of the purchaser; and if, as Sir W. Grant decided, the principles of equity require that the first mortgagee, taking a conveyance to himself of the equity of redemption with constructive notice of a second mortgage, should not be allowed to set up his own charge against the other, it would be a gross perversion of equity to hold that he may do so if he goes through the form of taking a conveyance of the equity of redemption to a trustee. The trustee is a mere fiction; by the contract, if it is in writing, or by the declaration of trust, the mortgagee becomes in equity the owner of the estate, and there is nothing to leave outstanding in a trustee. Nor can it be necessary to go through such a form for the purpose of negating the presumption of an intention to merge or extinguish the first charge. It was not on that ground that Toulmin v. Steere was decided; and we have already shewn, on the authority of the same judge, that there is no merger in equity where it is for the benefit of the party that there should be none.

Toulmin v. Steere was founded on no authority, and has never been followed, though it must be admitted that it has been cited with respect, and that there is a class of cases which are generally supposed to have been decided on the same principle. We shall shew that the circumstances in all these cases were essentially different. In Gregg v. Arrott, (Lloyd & G., t. Sugd., 251), Sir E. Sugden, C., said of Toulmin v. Steere, "That case went further than any previous authority; and Sir S. Romilly and I thought it at the time wrong, and recommended an appeal, but a relative of the party charged preferred paying the money to encountering any further litigation." And in Watts v. Symes, (1 De G., Mac., & G. 240), Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, L. J., said, "It is plain that a person who borrows money cannot be his own creditor, or set up an incumbrance of his own against his creditor. But Toulmin v. Steere carried the proposition a step further, and applied the same rule to a man who acquired an equity of redemption, as to the original mortgagor. That decision proceeded upon two previous decisions. The language of Sir W. Grant is this—'The cases of Greswold v. Marsham and Mocatta v. Murgatroyd are express authorities to shew that one purchasing an equity of redemption cannot set up a prior mortgage of his own, nor consequently a mortgage which he has got in, against subsequent incumbrances.' With the greatest deference to the authority of that eminent judge, I have always doubted, and still doubt, whether the cases mentioned by him go that length." That they do not support the decision in Toulmin v. Steere is perfectly clear. Greswold v. Marsham is thus reported—"There was due to Marsham 4000*l.* upon a mortgage made to him of lands. The mortgagor, after the mortgage, acknowledged judgments to other persons for other monies due. Two of those persons to whom the judgments were given gave notice to Mr. Marsham of their judgments, and desired him to accept of his money that was due upon the mortgage, which they said they were ready to pay him, and desired him to appoint a time when, and they would pay him his money within a fortnight, to the intent that, his mortgage being out of the way, they might take execution on their judgments; but proved not any money actually tendered. But afterwards Marsham exhibited a bill against the mortgagor, and had a decree to foreclose him of redemption, and afterwards took a further absolute conveyance from the mortgagor for a considerable sum of money. And now the two creditors had a decree against Marsham to pay them their money; but Powel, the third creditor, had no relief, because he gave no notice in time of his judgment." Whether the decree was for payment beyond the value of a moiety of the equity of redemption does not appear. But there is no reason to suppose that the creditors got any further relief than the opportunity of redeeming the mortgage, if the defendant refused to pay them off. As the judgments were a general lien on all the debtor's lands there, he had no equity to be indemnified by Marsham. But it is sufficient to observe that in this case the notice was express.

In Mocatta v. Murgatroyd (1*P.* Wms. 393) the notice was also express. There the owner of a ship made a first mortgage, then a second mortgage, to which the first mortgagee was a witness, without disclosing the first mortgage. No notice of the mortgages was indorsed on the bill of sale, and the second mortgagee afterwards intrusted the bill of sale to the mortgagor, who made several subsequent mortgages of several parts of the ship, which were indorsed on the bill of sale, and the bill of sale was afterwards returned to the second mortgagee, who made no complaint of the indorsement; ultimately the second mortgagee took a release of the equity of redemption. Lord Cowper, C., held, that the first mortgagee, being a witness to the second mortgage, must be postponed, and that the second mortgagee, having intrusted the mortgagor with the bill of sale, and having made no complaint of the indorsements of the subsequent mortgages, must be taken to have assented to them, so as to give them a preference. His Lordship added, that though the second mortgagee took a release of the equity of redemption, yet this did not oblige him to pay the intermediate mortgages, provided he would still waive the release made to him of the equity; from which it is to be inferred that the mortgagor sought to enforce against the second mortgagee the usual right of a vendor of an equity of redemption to indemnity. The reason for depriving him of that right is not apparent. (See Brown v. Stead, 5 Sim. 535).

In Parry v. Wright, (1 Sim. & S. 369; 5 Russ. 148), which is generally cited in connexion with Toulmin v. Steere, the question was wholly different, and it does not appear that the Court expressed any approval of Sir W. Grant's doctrine. There an estate in 1807 was conveyed to Madocks, expressly subject to a mortgage to Mostyn and a second mortgage to the plaintiff. The purchase money was expressed to be 8300*l.*, out of which Madocks was to retain 5010*l.* to pay off the mortgages. The purchaser was thus expressly bound to indemnify the mortgagor against both mortgages; and when, three years afterwards, the first mortgage was paid off, and the legal estate conveyed to a trustee, and by a deed of even date executed by Madocks and the trustee an annuity was granted to Wright, and charged on the estate, it was of course held, that Wright, having, by the deed of 1807, constructive notice of the plaintiff's mortgage, (and of the mortgagor's right to be indemnified against it), could not set up the legal estate so as to defeat that mortgage.

Brown v. Stead (5 Sim. 535) was the simple case of a purchase of the equity of redemption by a second mortgagee, who covenanted to pay off the first and a third mortgage, and who, in a foreclosure suit by the parties entitled to the first and third mortgages, was held not entitled to be paid his debt in priority to the third mortgagee, though he offered to waive the conveyance of the equity of redemption. Smith v. Phillips, (1 Kee. 694); Garnett v. Armstrong, (4 Dru. & W. 182); Farrow v. Roes, (4 Beav. 18); and Medley v. Horton, (14 Sim. 226), were all cases of express notice, and in none of them did the Court rely on, or even recognise, the case of Toulmin v. Steere. In Squire v. Ford, (9 Hare, 60), Toulmin v. Steere was cited with approbation by the Court, but it was not acted upon.

The result appears to be, that the doctrine in Toulmin v. Steere is untenable in principle—has never been acted on in any other case—and that there is at least as much authority for condemning as for approving of it.

NEW LEADING CASES.—On the 1st May next the LAW MAGAZINE will commence the publication of a Series of New Leading Cases.

These Cases will be henceforth divided into two classes.

The first will comprise Cases subsequently decided, but similar in importance to Smith's Leading Cases, and will be discussed as elaborately, and in the same manner, as in that work, and their practical effect will be fully set forth.

The second class will consist of all Cases which evolve any new principle, or a new application of an old one, but which may not require to be so fully treated.

All the new Cases on the Common-law Procedure Act will form a prominent and important feature of this division of the work.

The names of the Counsel who write the Cases will be annexed to each of them.

The Digest will be continued as usual.

Published for the Proprietor by Messrs. Butterworth, 7, Fleet-street, Law Booksellers and Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty.

LONDON, APRIL 9, 1853.

THE question, how far an admission made by a party relating to a record will dispense with its production, has been recently raised in the County Court of Gloucestershire, exercising its jurisdiction in insolvency*; and as it involves an important point in the law of evidence, we purpose to consider it in our present article. The facts of the case which gave rise to the inquiry were briefly these:—An insolvent inserted in his schedule, as an admitted debt, a certain sum for damages recovered in an action for an "alleged" breach of promise of marriage, which (as he stated) he should have defended but for his poverty. The plaintiff in that action opposed the insolvent's discharge, and asked for a remand, under sect. 78 of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, whereby an insolvent may be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, where it shall appear to the Court that damages have been recovered against him in an action "for breach of promise of marriage made by him," &c. No record of the action was produced, it being contended that the admission in the schedule was sufficient without it. The learned judge was of a different opinion, and discharged the insolvent, but afterwards granted a rule nisi for a rehearing, which, however, was ultimately discharged.

Upon the argument on the rule a preliminary objection was taken, that the judge had no jurisdiction to rehear a case under such circumstances, inasmuch as, by sect. 96 of the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, the adjudication is to be final and conclusive, and not to be reviewed, unless it appears to the Court to have been "made on false evidence, or otherwise improperly made or fraudulently obtained;" and the words "otherwise improperly made," it was said, must be construed (especially in a penal clause) as being ejusdem generis with the preceding and following words, and therefore as involving improper conduct on the part of the insolvent or his witnesses, and not a mere error in point of law on the part of the judge. This objection was overruled.

It was then contended that the rehearing should take place in the Insolvent Court in London, to which the proceedings had been transmitted on the adjudication being made. This was also overruled, upon the authority of Ex parte Lewis, (1 Cox & Mac. 100); Ex parte Keane, (Id. 107); and Ex parte Phillips, (21 L. J., Q. B., 379).

Upon the merits of the question, it was contended, in support of the rule, that Slatterie v. Pooley, (6 M. & W. 664), which decided that an admission by a party to a cause relating to the contents of a deed was primary evidence, and dispensed with the production of the deed, applied in principle to a record; that Murray v. Gregory, (19 L. J., Ex., 355), in which an admission that an award had been made was given in evidence without the production of the award, shewed that, although matter of law might be involved in the admission, yet it was primary evidence; and that in 2 Smith's L. C. 437, it was said, that the ordinary evidence was rendered unnecessary by an estoppel, whether the fact admitted was a record or a speciality.

* Ex parte Joseph Wilkins, before J. Francillon, Esq., March 31, 1853.

It was also urged, that the debt might have been inserted as disputed, and that having been inserted as admitted, and then being disputed, the creditor had been thereby induced to alter her position, and so the admission was conclusive evidence.

On the other hand, it was admitted that Slatterie v. Pooley, although much questioned, (Tayl. Ev. 294), and expressly dissented from in Ireland, (Lawless v. Queale, 8 Ir. Law Rep. 382), must yet be considered a binding authority, but that it was distinguishable from the case then before the Court. In Slatterie v. Pooley the admission was of a simple fact, viz. that the debt sued for was mentioned in the schedule annexed to the deed of composition; the fact was contained in a deed—a private writing executed by the defendant himself, and of whose contents he might, therefore, be supposed to be cognisant—and it was received in evidence before a tribunal which was competent to try the question whether the admission was true or not, and whether it could be rebutted. But this admission related to a record—a solemn public document, involving matter of law as well as of fact, and which might be much qualified, if not annulled, upon its production, as the judgment might have been arrested or reversed; and yet this might not be fully understood by a person referring to the record, and stating its effect. Mr. Pitt Taylor, in his work on Evidence, (p. 295), says, "Whether the doctrine propounded in Slatterie v. Pooley would be held to extend to records as well as to deeds and ordinary writings, and whether it would embrace the case of a confessio juris as well as that of a confessio facti, may admit of some doubt." In Phillips on Evidence, (last edition, p. 328), the learned editors, after considering Slatterie v. Pooley, add, "A parol admission will not dispense with the production of a record." Before Lord Denman's Act, abolishing objections to the competency of a witness on the ground of his being infamous, it was necessary to produce the record of conviction and judgment thereon, and an admission was not sufficient, although strict rules of evidence were not, in general, followed upon an examination on the voir dire. (2 Russ. Cr., by Greaves, 974).

In Scott v. Clave (3 Camp. 236) and Summersett v. Adamson (1 Bing. 73) the admission of a party was held not to dispense with the production of a record, on the grounds that the judgment referred to by the admission might be irregular or void, and the party might be mistaken, and that the matter admitted was mixed up of law and fact. These authorities were not cited, much less overruled, in Slatterie v. Pooley.*

It was also argued, that the statement in a schedule was made under a species of compulsion: that the record, if produced, would be conclusive, but not so the admission, which might be rebutted; and yet the Insolvent Court was not a proper tribunal to try the question, whether there had been a breach of promise of marriage or not: that even taking the admission as evidence, yet it was not complete or satisfactory, as on its face it appeared that the insolvent disputed the fact of a promise of marriage having been made.

For these reasons the Court discharged the rule, and we place them before our readers valent quantum, materials towards an elucidation of this question.

THE Lord Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench delivered on Monday, in the House of Lords, a learned argument on the subject of the recent deputation of merchants to Paris, from which it is to be inferred that his Lordship thought the act of the members of the deputation illegal. To say that the noble and learned Lord was making a mountain of a molehill would perhaps, be a breach of privilege, and would, at any rate, not be respectful to the learned Lord himself, as therefore we do not say it; but we do say, with a gravity, that Lord Campbell must have been joking when he spoke of the act of the deputation being a breach of any law whatever.

That it was not treason, is almost too plain to require argument. It was not any overt or covert, an direct or implied, assertion of any authority in the State paramount the Government of it; it was not any direct or indirect incitement to anybody who ever to make or levy war upon, or in the slightest degree to injure, the Government of this country; did not suggest, or lead to, or incite any violence or any injury whatever, to the State; it was simply the personal declaration of certain merchants, that they were, and they believed the other merchants of London and the people of England generally were desirous of peace with France and her Government. We apprehend, that if the Commander-in-Chief were to give out, in general orders, (at this time, the two countries being at peace), precisely the declaration of opinion given by the London merchants, it would not be even a breach of the Articles of War—certainly would not be treason.

The act of the deputation is next said to have been a breach of the law of nations. In what sense was it so? No doubt, by the law of nations, the only mode in which State communicates with State, is through the medium of accredited ambassadors; and if the unfortunate deputation had assumed to be ambassadors to England, perhaps they would have been committing a breach of the law of nations, though probably their act would then have been more properly a contempt of the authority of the Queen, and perhaps, in that sense, some sort of offence against the law of England. However, in fact, they did nothing of the sort. So far from there being any assumption by them of authority, it was distinctly known and understood, both by the Government of this country and the French Sovereign, that they had no political authority whatever, and they did not pretend to any. What, then, did their act amount to? As a political act, a simple nullity; they did not pretend to represent or to bind this Government; they could not be understood by the French Government to do so; all that they did was to express the desire for peace, of themselves, and as they believed, of many other Englishmen—a fact the existence of which they were as perfectly at liberty to declare their belief, as they would have been to do clare to the Emperor their belief that a submarine telegraph was desired by the people of England. Besides, it is almost idle to talk of a breach of the law of nations by individuals as such. The law of nations is the law which regulates the intercourse between State and State, not between the individual subjects of one Government and another Government. An ambassador may be guilty of a breach of the law of nations, because he represents a State; so may a general, because he and his army represent, to a certain extent, his Government; but how can any two or three bankers or merchants, representing, in strictness, nobody—certainly not representing the State at all—incapable of binding anybody, having no authority whatever—how can they break the law of nations? They may break the laws of their own country or of the foreign country. The deputation clearly have not done the former, and we suppose they have not the latter; but if they have, that is the business of the Emperor of the French, and not of the Government of this country.

On the whole, agreeing with many that the escapade of the London merchants was not a wise one, and that it was a course of proceeding which might be inconvenient to their own Government, we are wholly at a loss to see anything in it in the slightest or remotest degree illegal, and never should have suspected that the idea could have been entertained, were it not for the reputation of the very learned judge who has thrown out observations calculated to raise the impression, that the acts of the deputation were some sort of infringement of some law or other.

THE PROTECTION DERIVABLE FROM SATISFIED TERMS, SINCE THE STAT. 8 & 9 VICT. c. 112.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—I should not have ventured, even on a subject so important as the Attendant Terms Act, to continue the discussion which you have permitted me to commence, if the ground had remained unchanged. But as in your last observations on Freer v. Hesse you have raised a new question, entirely different from the point of pleading which in my former communication I treated as the only difficulty presented by the act, I trust I shall be excused for returning to the defence of an enactment which, in my opinion, has perfectly effected the object for which it was designed.

Your objection to the decision or dictum, whichever it was, in Freer v. Hesse, is, that the purchaser (i. e. the defendant) in that case could not, even during the life of the last trustee of the term, use the term as a protection against the judgment without an actual assignment in his own favour, because, if the act had not passed, the term would not have protected him without an actual assignment. And I admit, that if an assignment would have been necessary before the act to protect the purchaser against that specific charge, the protection cannot now be had. The terms of the enactment are express on that point. But I submit that the decision must have been the same in Freer v. Hesse if the Attendant Terms Act had never passed. In that case the material circumstances were, first, the registering of two judgments against the mortgagor in 1843; secondly, a conveyance in fee to the mortgagee, with power of sale, in 1844, and at the same time an assignment to a trustee for the mortgagee of an attendant satisfied term, in trust better to secure the debt and interest, and, subject thereto, in trust to attend the inheritance—no notice of the judgments to the mortgagee; and, thirdly, a sale by the mortgagee under his power. Under such circumstances, if the Attendant Terms Act had not passed, no doubt the purchaser from the mortgagee would have been advised to take a fresh assignment of the term to a trustee for himself; and the object of such assignment would have been, to obtain protection against any possible incumbrance by the mortgagee, and to procure, by the former trustee's covenant, an assurance that he had not joined in any incumbrance. But, as a protection against all incumbrances created by the mortgagor, the term would have been as effectual in the hands of the mortgagee's trustee, and without any fresh declaration of trust, and notwithstanding notice to the purchaser, as if an assignment were taken. Such protection was part of the express trust and object of the assignment—"in trust for the mortgagee, his executors, administrators, and assigns, and, subject thereto, to wait upon and attend the inheritance." The exact words do not appear, nor are they, I submit, material. The object in every case is abundantly apparent—first, to secure to the mortgagee and his personal representatives the benefit of the principal subject-matter of the transaction, the money, and then to protect the inheritance. The inheritance in such a trust always means the inheritance claimed by the person on whose behalf the assignment is made, and those claiming under him; and in the case of a mortgage, though on a redemption the old inheritance of the mortgagee, with all its incumbrances, becomes again the object of the trust, there can, I conceive, be no doubt, that in the meantime, and until redemption, the inheritance claimed by the mortgagee, his heirs and assigns, whether the equity of redemption be subsisting or be barred by foreclosure or sale, is the inheritance protected, and protected against all incumbrances created by the mortgagor of which the mortgagee had no notice. The protection sought by the mortgagee from the term would be of little value if it ceased on foreclosure, or could not be transmitted to a purchaser, even with notice of those incumbrances by which the mortgagee himself was not bound. Indeed, as the mortgagee might be unable to recover his money otherwise than by selling, and as he could not sell if he could not give a clear title, the protection of a purchaser from him is included in the trust for securing the mortgage debt.

The other construction—that the unknown incumbrancers on the mortgagor's estate were entitled to the benefit of the trust of the term, as against purchasers from the mortgagee—would be fatal to the purchaser's title, even with the aid of an actual assignment of the term, if an assignment had been possible; for if, without the assignment, the term was held in trust for the judgment creditors, the purchaser could not defeat that trust by taking an assignment of the trust estate with full notice.

LONDON, APRIL 16, 1853.

OVER all charities, even antecedent to and independently of the 43 Eliz. c. 4, the Crown has a superintendence, as parens patriæ, similar to that which it exercises in the case of infants and lunatics, (Cary v. Bertie, 2 Vern. 342; Eyre v. Shaftesbury, 2 P. Wms. 118, 119), the reason for this supervision being the inability of the persons interested to take the necessary care of themselves or their property. This authority is delegated to the Court of Chancery, and the original mode of exercising it was by the Attorney-General, as the first law officer of the Crown, filing an information upon the instruction of a relator, who need not be a person interested, (Mitf. 23, 24; 1 Russ. 236), nor indeed is he a party to the information, (The Attorney-General v. Wright, 3 Beav. 447), and therefore he has no right to make, of his own authority, any application to the Court. It seems that it is not essential to charity informations that there should be a relator at all; but the chief reason for appointing him is, that as the Crown pays no costs, the relator may answer them if the suit was improperly instituted, or should be conducted improperly. (Mitf. 24). Where the relator has an individual interest, the suit is properly by information and bill, and the relator is then made a party as co-plaintiff. The Attorney-General is, therefore, considered the principal plaintiff in a charity information; and as he can have no personal knowledge of the matters in question, it is sufficient, to induce him to sanction the filing of an information, if the relator can shew a prima facie case requiring the interposition of the Court of Chancery; while the check upon relators, by the punishment of costs, is so seldom, if ever, exercised, that practically it does not operate to restrain the institution of a suit in any case where there is a shadow of reason for it. The effect of this system is, that the control over the administration of charities is left to the philanthropy of some hero, who, for the sake of the charity, will plunge into the gulf of a Chancery suit; and the consequence is, that for this reason, and also from the expensiveness of the remedy, very many charities have been ruined utterly, and more are ill-administered, scarcely any being at the same time well managed and wisely applied.

To continue the history of the jurisdiction. The evils of this system were felt so strongly in the reign of Elizabeth, that an act was then passed, (43 Eliz. c. 4—A.D. 1601), the declared object of which was "to redress the misemployment of lands, goods, and stocks of money heretofore given to charitable uses." For this purpose this statute (sect. 1) empowered the Lord Chancellor (and for lands within the county palatine of Lancaster, the Chancellor of that Duchy) for the time being to award commissions under the Great Seal, or the seal of the county palatine of Lancaster, to the bishop of every diocese and his chancellor, and to other persons, authorising them to inquire, by calling the parties interested before a jury of the county, and by all other good and lawful ways and means, into the abuses of charities, and to make orders, conformable to the will of the founders, for the due employment of charitable property; and also (sect. 6) to make decrees for recompense against any person, his heirs, executors, and administrators, who should have committed a breach of any charitable trust: all such orders to be certified under the seals of the said commissioners, or any four of them. And (sect. 10) a right of appeal to the Lord Chancellor, or the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, was given to any person aggrieved by an order made under the statute, subject to the payment of costs, if exercised without just and sufficient cause.

There is a record of 964 commissions having been issued under this statute; but the practice has gradually become obsolete, the last commission having been issued in 1719. (15 Ves. 305). The reasons for this discontinuance are said to be the abuse of the proceedings, and their insufficiency and injustice, in some cases, to the persons called upon to account for the property of charities; and these evils, no doubt, arose from the improper constitution of the commission, which rendered it by no means independent of local interests or influence.

This statute gave the Lord Chancellor no increased facilities of obtaining information concerning the abuses of charities; but the evil having been ascertained to exist, it provided a less expensive remedy by a local court, thus obviating the costly process of bringing the questions in every case before a central jurisdiction.

The necessity, which was left unprovided for, of some mode of obtaining more easily the requisite knowledge concerning the administration of charities, to enable the Lord Chancellor to judge in what cases a remedy ought to be applied, was now more strongly felt; and besides certain statutes, directing inquiries as to particular charities very liable to abuse, an act was at length passed, the 26 Geo. 3, c. 58, which required the ministers and overseers of every parish in England to return, on oath, an account of all charitable donations which had been given by deed or will for the benefit of poor persons within their respective parishes, distinguishing, as far as they were able, by whom, when, and for what purpose given; likewise whether such respective donations were in land or money, and in whom then vested, and what was the annual produce thereof respectively. On the 6th December, 1787, a committee was appointed by Parliament to examine the returns made under this statute. This was the commencement of a system of inquiry, which has been since continued by the authority of several statutes. The 52 Geo. 3, c. 102, directed that a memorial of the estate, annual income, investment, and objects of all charitable donations in England and Wales then or thereafter to be founded, with the names of the founders or benefactors and the trustees, and deeds or wills of endowment, should be registered in the office of the clerk of the peace, who was to transmit a duplicate to the Court of Chancery.

On the 1st April, 1816, the House of Commons ordered to be printed parochial returns to an inquiry as to the endowments and other institutions for the education of the poor; and this investigation went deeper into the matter in respect to these particular charities; for not only were the means then existing for public education thereby examined, but also the use that was made of them, how many children were being taught, and after what manner, how many clothed or maintained, with other similar information. This commission, which was appointed on the motion of Lord (then Mr.) Brougham, was the step to what followed. Their researches incidentally disclosed the abuses affecting other charities to which their inquiries did not directly extend, and in 1818 their labours were followed by the stat. 58 Geo. 3, c. 91, enabling the King to issue a commission under the Great Seal "to examine into and investigate the amount, nature, and application of all estates and funds, of what nature or kind soever, and the produce thereof, destined or intended to be applied to the purpose of educating the poor in England and Wales . . . and to examine into and investigate all breaches of trust, irregularities, frauds, abuses, or supposed abuses, or misconduct in relation to, and in the management or appropriation, or non-appropriation or misappropriation, of such estates and funds, and to report their proceedings, in writing, in each half-year, to the King and to both Houses of Parliament, and to subjoin such suggestions as might seem expedient for securing such estates and funds against any future misapplication."

By the 59 Geo. 3, c. 81, the powers of the commissioners were extended to gifts for the support of any charity or charities for the benefit of poor people in England and Wales, or held under trust for any charitable uses or trusts in England or Wales; and by cap. 91 of the same session, any five or more of the commissioners were authorised to certify to the Attorney-General such cases as appeared, in their judgment, to require legal interference.

These statutes were continued in force by the 5 Geo. 4, c. 58, and the 10 Geo. 4, c. 57, until the 1st July, 1830; and, after an interval of fifteen months from that date, the inquiry was revived by the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 34, which extended their powers to the case of charities which had special visitors. The commission ended on the 15th August, 1834. They published between thirty and forty reports, and expended in the inquiry altogether about 240,000*l.* By the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 71, a new commission was appointed to carry on the investigation, and a special power given to them to authorise, in certain cases, the minister and churchwardens of the parish interested to act as interim trustees of a charity consisting of a rent-charge or annuity not exceeding 20*l.*, which, by the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 71, was extended to similar charities not exceeding 50*l.* The reports of all these commissions together fill thirty-eight folio volumes, affecting 28,840 charities, which had an aggregate income of 1,209,395*l.*, of which 58,187*l.* represented the income of 17,972 charities whose actual incomes were under 10*l.* a year, their average being 3*l.* 4*s.* 9*d.*

So much for the inquiry. The only important result of all this expensive investigation, and the immense mass of information thereby collected, and the admirable suggestions made by the commissioners, was the passing, at the instance of Sir Samuel Romilly, of stat. 52 Geo. 3, c. 101, "to provide a more summary remedy in case of breaches of trust created for charitable purposes, as well as for the just and upright administration of the same;" in which cases the act authorises any two or more persons to present a petition to the Lord Chancellor or Master of the Rolls, praying such relief as the nature of the case may require; and it empowers the Courts to hear such petition in a summary way upon affidavits, and to make an order thereon, which shall be conclusive, unless appealed from within two years, every such petition to be signed by the petitioner, and attested by their attorney, and submitted to and allowed by the Attorney or Solicitor General, and such allowances to be certified by him before its presentation.

This was followed by the 59 Geo. 3, c. 91, s. 5, which enacted that the trustees of any free school, hospital, or other charitable institution or donation within its provisions, thinking the statutes or regulations thereof insufficient for the secure and due administration of the funds, might, with the consent of five of the commissioners before mentioned, proceed by petition in like manner; and by the same statute a like power was given to the Attorney-General, in cases certified to him by the commissioners in the manner already noticed.

Of the former of these two last-mentioned statutes so great an authority as Lord Redesdale has said, "The loose mode of proceeding authorised by this act was probably intended to save expense in investigating abuses of charities; but, in practice, it unavoidably led to great inconvenience, the Court not having before it any distinct record to which its judgment might be properly applied, and especially with respect to those against whom complaint might be made, or those against whom no such complaint could be made, but whose interests might be affected by the judgment of the Court."

This inconvenience became apparent in a case which was made the subject of appeal to the House of Lords, who finally determined that a jurisdiction so summary, and in which the proceedings were so loose, ought, in just construction of the act, to be confined to the simple case of abuse of a clear trust, not involving any question beyond the question of such abuse, and particularly not involving the interests of persons to whom such abuse of trust could not be imputed. (Mitf. 20; The Corporation of Ludlow v. Greenhouse, 1 Bligh, N.S., 17).

It takes some time for the public mind to digest information so bulky, however interesting or important it may be, and that is probably the chief reason why nothing has yet been done to cure such enormous evils as these affecting charities. However, the ground has been broken by several efforts, which are detailed in a work just published, to which the attention of all those interested in this subject will have been directed.

The book in question is called "Public Education, by Sir James Kay Shuttleworth," (Longmans, 1863), and it contains a chapter on the subject of charities, a large proportion of which have always been devoted to educational purposes. It appears, that in 1841 an effort was made to give to two-thirds of the trustees of any educational charity not amounting in annual value to 300*l.*, and which should be insufficient to answer a useful purpose, power to modify the trusts by a scheme for applying the income in aid of some other school in the neighbourhood, such scheme to be approved by her Majesty in Council; and a like power, in cases where the annual income did not exceed 100*l.*, to modify and extend the nature of the education given, so as to make it more beneficial for the poor, such alteration to be pursuant to the intentions of the founder as nearly as might be. (See Public Education, 176). This bill, from the state of political affairs, failed to become law. In 1843 the Government again directed their attention to this subject, and prepared a bill under the auspices of Lord Cottenham, by which, in the case of educational charities whose annual income did not exceed 200*l.*, and the trusts of which could not be fully attained, the Attorney-General and some other person interested were authorised to lay before her Majesty in Council a scheme for the better application of the trust property, which, if approved, should supersede pro tanto the original trusts. Power was by this bill to be given to the same persons to appoint new trustees of such charities, not having of themselves authority for that purpose, and to keep up the succession of such trustees. In 1844, Lord Lyndhurst introduced a comprehensive bill for securing the due administration of charitable trusts in England, and this, failing to become law, was followed by bills, which had the sanction of Lord Cottenham, in 1847, 1848, 1849, and 1850, of which a description is given in p. 183 of the work on Public Education. Large powers were proposed by the former of these measures to be given to a commission of three, appointed by the Lord Chancellor, with two inspectors of charities. To the commissioners was given, in certain cases, a local jurisdiction. The bill of 1850 gave a summary jurisdiction to Masters in Chancery over charities exceeding 30*l.* and not exceeding 100*l.* a year, and they were to proceed on petition, and to obtain, when necessary, the opinion of the Court of Chancery; but charities under 30*l.* a year were placed under the jurisdiction of county courts, subject to a limited right of appeal. A bill was also prepared by the existing Charity Commission in 1851, of which an abstract is given at p. 198 of "Public Education." This bill authorised a commission to be appointed by the Lord Chancellor, which was to be invested with considerable administrative powers. The bill also proposed to give the summary jurisdiction over charities under 100*l.* a year to Masters in Chancery, and under 30*l.* to county courts, subject to the control of the commission. It gave no additional powers of cy près administration of trusts, and required the sanction of the Court of Chancery to most of the ordinary matters of management. These various attempts have clearly indicated the path to be taken by future legislation on this subject. The necessities of the case require incessant vigilance over the administration of charities to prevent abuses, and a cheap remedy for those which exist, while the cost and comparatively slow action of judicial proceedings render it imperative that large powers of management should be given to some responsible commission, which could exercise them without delay or expense for the smallest interests. The book to which we have referred details a scheme to meet these requirements, which seems, from Lord John Russell's announcement in Parliament on Monday, the 4th inst., to be identical in principle with the Government measure. We shall take a future opportunity to examine the proposals for legislation on this subject.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION.—TRINITY TERM, 1853.

The Council of Legal Education have approved of the following rules for the public examination of the students.

The attention of the students is requested to the following rules of the Inns of Court:—

"As an inducement to students to propose themselves for examination, studentships shall be founded of fifty guineas per annum each, to continue for a period of three years, and one such studentship shall be conferred on the most distinguished student at each public examination; and further, the examiners shall select and certify the names of three other students who shall have passed the next best examinations, and the Inns of Court to which such students belong may, if desired, dispense with any terms, not exceeding two, that may remain to be kept by such students previously to their being called to the Bar. Provided that the examiners shall not be obliged to confer or grant any studentship or certificate unless they shall be of opinion that the examination of the students they select has been such as entitles them thereto."

"At every call to the Bar those students who have passed a public examination, and either obtained a studentship or a certificate of honour, shall take rank in seniority over all other students who shall be called on the same day."

"No student shall be eligible to be called to the Bar who shall not either have attended during one whole year the lectures of two of the Readers, or have satisfactorily passed a public examination."

RULES FOR THE PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR HONOURS, OR CERTIFICATES ENTITLING STUDENTS TO BE CALLED TO THE BAR.

An examination will be held in next Trinity Term, to which a student of any of the Inns of Court, who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship or honours, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name at the treasurer's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs, on or before Friday, the 20th day of May next, and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship or other honourable distinction, or whether he is merely desirous of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar.

The examination will commence on Monday, the 23rd day of May next, and will be continued on the Tuesday and Wednesday following.

Each of the three days of examination will be divided as under:—

From half-past nine A.M. to half-past twelve.

From half-past one P.M. to half-past four.

The examination will be partly oral and partly conducted by means of printed questions, to be delivered to the students when assembled for examination, and to be answered in writing.

The oral examination and printed questions will be founded on the books below mentioned, regard being had, however, to the particular object with a view to which the student presents himself for examination.

In determining the question, whether a student has passed the examination in such a manner as to entitle him to be called to the Bar, the examiners will principally have regard to the general knowledge of law and jurisprudence which he has displayed.

The READER ON CONSTITUTIONAL LAW and LEGAL HISTORY will expect the students to be acquainted with the following books, which will form the ground of his examination:—

Hallam's Constitutional History, last volume; The Reign of William the Third, in Tindal or Belsham; Millar on the English Constitution; The Reign of Queen Anne, in Tindal or Belsham; The Statute Book during the Reigns of Charles the Second, William the Third, and Queen Anne; The State Trials during the same Period; The Parliamentary History during the same Time; Mably Droit Public De L'Europe; The Fragment of Sir James Macintosh; The First and Fourth Volumes of Blackstone's Commentaries.

Those who are candidates only for certificates will be expected to know the last volume of Hallam's Constitutional History, and to answer any general questions on the History of England.

The READER ON EQUITY will examine in the following books:—

1. Mitford on Pleadings in the Court of Chancery; Calvert on Parties to Suits in Equity, chaps. 1 and 2; Smith's Manual of Equity Jurisprudence; the Act for the Improvement of Equity Jurisdiction, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86.

2. Sir James Wigram's Points in the Law of Discovery, "Defence by Plea;" Story's Commentaries on Equity Jurisprudence, vols. 1 and 2; the principal Cases in White & Tudor's Leading Cases, vols. 1 and 2.

Candidates for certificates of fitness to be called to the Bar will be expected to be well acquainted with the books mentioned in the first of the above classes.

Candidates for a studentship or honours will be examined in the books mentioned in the two classes.

The READER ON JURISPRUDENCE and the CIVIL LAW proposes to examine in the following books and subjects:—

1. Justinian—Institutes, book 2, tit. 1 . . . 9.

2. Gaius—Institutes, lib. 2, sect. 1 . . . 96.

3. Story—Conflict of Laws, chaps. 9 and 10.

4. The Jur. Pignoris. The modern authorities consulted may be Warnkönig—Institutes, lib. 1, cap. 5; or Colquhoun—Roman Civil Law, book 3, tit. 17.

5. The Right of Visitation and Search.

Candidates for distinction will be examined in all the foregoing books and subjects. Candidates for a certificate will be examined in (1) and (3).

The READER ON THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY proposes to examine in the following books and subjects:—

Class I.

Williams on Real Property; 1 Steph. Com., book 2; and Butler's Notes to Co. Litt. 191. a., sect. 2, 5; 271. b.

Class II.

Trusts for Accumulation, and the Operation of the 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 93.

Powers of Sale, and the Liability of Purchasers to see to the Application of their Purchase Money.

The Statutory Rules of Construction laid down by the 1 Vict. c. 26.

Candidates for a certificate merely will be examined exclusively in the books comprised in Class I.

Candidates for a studentship or other honourable distinction will be examined in the books and subjects comprised in Classes I. and II.

The EXAMINATION IN COMMON LAW, with a view to a certificate to be called to the Bar, will embrace the following subjects:—

1. The ordinary Steps and Proceedings in an Action at Law.

2. The Elementary Principles of the Law of Contracts.

Candidates for the studentship and for honours will be examined not only on the above topics, but also in the following books and subjects:—

1. The Nature and Requisites of Contracts, (Chit.

jun. on Contracts not under Seal, chaps. 1 and 4; Colins v. Blantern, 1 Smith's L. C. 154; and Mitchell v. Reynolds, Id. 171, with the notes thereto).

2. The Law of Bailments, (so far as treated of in Chit. jun. on Contracts not under Seal, pp. 408—433; and in the note to Coggs v. Bernard, 1 Smith's L. C. 82).

3. The Rules of Evidence of ordinary application.

By order of the Council,

W. P. Wood, Chairman pro tem.

Council Chamber, Lincoln's Inn,

April 11, 1853.

England is the only country where notaries public are to certify translations from languages which they do not understand: in other countries this duty is officially intrusted with examined and qualified sworn translators. This absurdity ought to be laid before the House of Parliament for mutation.

Solicitors—Messrs. Cardale, Illiffe, and Russell, Bedford-row.
Established in the year 1837, for the Purchase of Reversionary Interests, either absolute or contingent, and whether secured upon real or personal estate, life interests or annuities, and policies of assurance on lives.

Forms for submitting Proposals for Sale may be obtained at the Office of the Company, and every facility will be rendered to insure the speedy completion of contracts.

G. A. RENDALL, Secretary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
Established 1834.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.
ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.
The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000*l.*, and the Income exceeds 136,000*l.* per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24*l.* to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5*l.* to 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

LONDON, APRIL 23, 1853.

Two cases (not, we believe, yet reported) have lately been decided by Sir W. P. Wood, V. C., which appear to us to depart from what we have always supposed to be the principles on which Courts of equity proceed. The first was a case in which the learned judge refused an injunction in a case of piracy, or alleged piracy, of trade marks, on the ground of delay in making the application. The second was also a case of piracy of trade marks, in which an injunction was granted, although the plaintiff represented himself to be a patentee long after he had ceased to be so.

In the first case the plaintiff had known of the copying of his trade marks some months before he filed his bill, and the delay was undoubtedly not satisfactorily explained; the injunction, however, was substantially the whole object of the bill, so that, if the cause were brought to a hearing, nothing but a perpetual injunction was wanted, or would be decreed. The motion for an injunction was not ex parte, but on notice. It was not contended that the delay amounted to acquiescence, in the sense of total waiver of the right to relief, but it was simply that species of delay in which, in ordinary cases, where there is a doubtful legal title, equity refuses to interfere by injunction, till the title has been established at law. But in cases of infringement of trade marks, Courts of equity do not proceed on the doctrine of relief being only ancillary to legal title, but on the doctrine of prevention of fraud, quite independently of legal title.

VOL. XVII.

O

There is only one case in equity—Millington v. Fox, (3 My. & C. 338), and the authority of that case has been doubted on that point—in which it has been ever asserted that there is any right of property in a trade mark. In all the other cases, without exception, the principle proceeded upon has been, that equity restrains infringement of trade marks, because it will not suffer a double fraud to be committed—on the public and on the plaintiff: on the public, by inducing them to buy as the plaintiff's that which is the defendant's; and on the plaintiff, by representing to the public, to his injury, that the goods sold have the sanction of the plaintiff's reputation, when in fact they have not. Now, if that be the doctrine, what can any delay, not amounting to actual and permanent waiver of right to relief, have to do with the question? How is the fraud the less cognisable because the plaintiff has been somewhat dilatory in stopping it? It is not like a question of legal title, where the Court says it only aids the legal title, and if the plaintiff has delayed seeking his interlocutory relief, he must dispense with it till he has established his legal title. Here there is no legal title to establish. It may be that no action will lie at all; at any rate, whether it does or does not, it is not in aid of the legal title that the Court of equity interferes, but in the assertion of its own totally independent jurisdiction of restraining fraud; and if the fraud has been committed, and if the restraint of the fraud is the whole substance of the relief asked, to refuse an injunction, on the ground of delay, seems to be doing no more (particularly under the new practice) than postponing to the hearing of the cause the very same question, to be disposed of upon the very same materials, that the Court has to dispose of and has before it on the motion for an injunction. We assume, of course, that in such a case as that under discussion, the delay does not amount to conclusive acquiescence; and we do not understand that the Court so held it in that case.

In the next case the piracy was beyond question; but the plaintiff had been a patentee of the article in respect of which his trade mark was pirated, and he had originally marked upon certain printed labels surrounding the articles, as he had a clear right to do, that he was patentee, and as such had an exclusive right. He, however, continued to hold out this statement to the public for many years after his patent had expired, and the Vice-Chancellor held that this was no fraud upon the public, within Pidding v. Howe (8 Sim. 477) and Perry v. Truefitt, (6 Beav. 66), and did not exclude him from relief—distinguishing, as we understand, the case from those cases, on the ground, that once having had the right to use that representation, it would be too much to say that continuing to use the printed labels, which he had originally a right to use, was a fraud. Now, considering that the principle of Pidding v. Howe and Perry v. Truefitt is, that if a plaintiff, suing for infringement of his trade mark, has himself held out to the public that he is that which he is not, he is not entitled to relief, the decision of Sir W. P. Wood, V. C., seems to us singular.

No one can know better than the patentee himself when his patent right ends; for him, therefore, to continue to tell the public that he is a patentee, when he well knows he is no longer so, is just as gross a falsehood and fraud as for him to say he is, when he never has been, a patentee. Indeed, the fraud is more likely to take effect; for if A., never heard of as a patentee, calls himself so, the public is naturally put upon inquiry; but if A. has been known for years as a reputed patentee, the public is not so apt to watch whether he has been so for precisely fourteen years or not, and his fraud in continuing the representation after the foundation for it has ceased to exist, is much more likely to be successful. But whether it is or is not likely to be more or less successful, it is not the less a gross fraud. If a man had once been a man of capital, and continued to represent himself as such in business long after he had ceased to be so, every man of business deluded into dealing with him would certainly have a right to say he was committing a fraud on those who so dealt with him. It may be said, perhaps, that the case under consideration is like that of a firm continuing the name or style of their predecessors long after those predecessors have died. But that is not so; in that case the successors have acquired the quasi right to the style; they are but holding out the truth, that the business hitherto conducted at such a place under the style of A. & Co. is still there continued. At any rate, the practice is sanctioned by usage, and the public is not, and has not a chance of being, deceived.

No one, for instance, at this day, in his senses, supposes that Mr. Coutts, of whom he heard in his childhood as being then a very old man, is still living, or that Mr. Child, of whom he never heard but as a myth, is a living man; nor does he care whether there is or is not such a person as Coutts or Child; he banks with Coutts & Co. or Child & Co., not on the faith of any persons of the name of Coutts or Child being partners of the firms so called, but on the faith of the firm carrying on business in the Strand or at Temple-bar, having done so with high credit for an immense time; and he is not in the slightest degree deceived if no single member of those firms is called Coutts or Child. But it is far otherwise if A., a former patentee, still holds himself out as such after he has ceased to be so. That representation, in itself a false one, has substantial consequences. If believed—and it is at least not unlikely to be so—it prevents, or tends to prevent, any other trader from attempting that rivalry in trade which he has a right to attempt. Nor can there be a doubt that the false assertion is intended for that purpose; for it cannot be supposed that a patentee forgets when his patent ceases, or that, from mere negligence, he does not for years change his marks. If, from such forgetfulness or negligence, injury, or at any rate no benefit, were to accrue to him, they might be inferred. But when their consequence is obviously the very reverse, viz. to deter rivalry, it would be too great an amount of worldly innocence not to infer the intention of producing that very effect. And if there be an intention to delude the public, then we submit, respectfully, that the case falls within the doctrine of those cited, and that such false representation is a bar to the plaintiff's remedy in equity.

An Address to the Committee of the House of Lords on the Bill for the Registration of Assurances.* By EDWARD WEBSTER, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Lincoln's Inn. 4th Pp. 24.

THE prospects of the Lord Chancellor's bill for the registration of assurances are not bright. It has suffered much from the vigorous and able opposition of Lord St. Leonards, and from the equally damaging advocacy of Lord Campbell; and notwithstanding the frequent discussion which the question has received during the last quarter of a century, it is difficult to meet with even a professional man who has any distinct perception of the difference between a registry of conveyances and a registry of titles, or even of the difference between a registry of conveyances and the mischievous registry of memorials, which is still allowed to disgrace our statute-book, and incumber titles in Yorkshire and Middlesex—not to mention Ireland. Lord St. Leonards himself asserted, in the late debate that it had been found impossible to get a general register that would work well. "It has been tried," said his Lordship, "in Yorkshire, in Middlesex, in Ireland, and, in a different shape, in Scotland. It has been tried also in almost all foreign countries, and the result had been, failure in every single instance." Yet every one who knows what the advocates of a general register of assurances (to say nothing of a register of titles mean by that expression, knows that nothing of the kind has ever been tried in Ireland or in this country, if we except the private experiment that has been carried on in the manor of Sion for upwards of a century, and with perfect success. It is mortifyingly evident to us that our endeavours to enlighten the Profession on this subject have not been so successful as we had hoped. We can only say, that full explanations of the two schemes of registration—that known as Mr. Duval's, and that contrived by Mr. Wilson, between which the Legislature will at no distant period have to choose—may be found in former articles in this journal. (See 9 Jur., part 2, p. 207—Mr. Duval's plan; 11 Jur., part 2, p. 38—Mr. Wilson's plan, further explained in 14 Jur., part 2, p. 306; 14 Jur., part 2, pp. 274, 280, 298, 306—the plan now before Parliament, and Mr. Wilson's plan). In 16 Jur., part 2, p. 250, will be found an abstract of the Registration Bill introduced by Lord John Russell's Government in 1851, in the form in which it left the House of Lords. It is almost identical with Lord Cranworth's bill.

The late pamphlet and the more recent speeches of Lord St. Leonards against the Registration Bill are little more than a repetition of the arguments which first appeared (we believe) in 1834 in the Treatise on Vendors and Purchasers, and were published in a separate form under the title of "Cursory Observations on a General Register." We may fairly assume that they contain every objection of importance that can be urged against the measure. After enlarging on the expense of the establishment, an objection which we propose to consider presently, his Lordship suggests the possibility of loss, by the mistake of a clerk writing "Compton" for "Crompton," (an error which was committed under the existing acts, as we have been told over and over again, so that we may fairly assume that it is the only error which has been discovered). This is a little unfair. The error of which so much use has been made was not followed by any loss, and the chances against loss from such a cause are almost incalculable. The error, or twenty such errors, could not do harm, without the almost impossible coincidence, in the same case, of fraud successful in every other particular—fraud relating to the title to and possession of real estate—a kind of fraud which, as Lord St. Leonards himself insists in another part of his argument, is, of all others, the most rare, and most difficult to practice. His Lordship has assisted in establishing registries of judgments, Crown debts, &c., which are open to precisely the same objection, though in them, as the registries are of incumbrances merely, the chance of mischief is infinitely greater. The chances are infinite against the overlooking of a registered title deed, from a mere error in the index, so intimately connected and interwoven are the threads of the title. But, as the index of general charges is all that a purchaser has to guide him to those incumbrances, an error there may easily be fatal; yet up to this day no such error, resulting in loss, has been pointed out. It is dangerous to travel by railway, yet we are always making and using railways.

"One fatal objection to the deposit of a man's deeds, as well upon large as small purchases, is, that he could no longer indorse any short deed upon a prior one, by which, in thousands of cases, great expense is avoided." When we consider that scarcely a single deed is ever drawn in this country which might not, if the draughtsman pleased, be reduced to half its present length, this objection will hardly be allowed to be fatal. But if the power of indorsing be so important, a perfect equivalent may be obtained by using the following simple form:—"This indenture is to be read as if 'it were indorsed on an indenture, dated the — day of —, and registered in the general registry under the symbol —, and is made on the — day of —, between the within-named &c.'" We need not repeat here what has been so often insisted on as a valuable feature in a general register—the shortening of deeds by rendering long recitals unnecessary, and the abolition of covenants for the production of deeds.

"Men want their deeds, too, to be able to raise money by a deposit of them. The first men in the city have asserted that in moments of panic the want of such a power might be fatal. The machinery substituted by the proposed bill would not adequately supply the want of the deeds." This is mere assertion. Surely the "caveat," which is "a document to be executed by the owner of an estate, preventing registration, within a limited period, from having any effect as against an instrument to be registered within such period by the party in whose favour the caveat is given," with a memorandum of charge, to be registered only in case of necessity, and the power of investigating the title on the register in the course of a few hours, afford greater facilities for raising money on an emergency than at present exist; and by sect. 52 the issuing of a certificate of registration to the actual registered owner for the time being, as a symbol of ownership, is provided expressly for the purposes of deposit securities. Then we have the old and favourite picture of the Englishman, with his sheepskins in his own box, in his own castle, though we believe they are oftener found in the hands of mortgagees. But the indulgence even of this peculiar taste is provided for by the bill, which gives permission to deposit a duplicate, to be exempt from stamp duty; and the assertion, that "constant recourse must be had to the register in order to inspect the original deeds, with a view to stamps, erasures, forgeries," &c., is mere exaggeration. In practice, duplicates or office copies will almost invariably be relied on.

We pass over the suggestion of danger from civil war and invasion, as a mere rhetorical ornament; but we must complain of what follows on the mischievousness of disclosure of titles. It is suggested, though not distinctly asserted, that the proposed registry would expose titles more than they are now disclosed, or rather ought to be disclosed, as between vendor and purchaser, where the vendor is honest. But it is part of the plan that no one shall search the register against a particular estate without the consent of the registered owner.

"It is said that one great object is to prevent insecurity of title. But insecurity of title proceeds from doubtful instruments, disputed heirships, and the like; and none of these difficulties will be cured by a general register, nor will abstracts be shortened, for a title will have just the same root, and be deduced just in the same manner, as at present. . . . I do not remember a single instance of any suppressed incumbrance making its appearance in any of the numerous titles accepted under my advice." The objection to the existing system is, not that it is incapable of affording tolerable security to the purchaser who will go to the expense of employing a Sugden to investigate the title for him, but that it affords such security at far too great expense. Abstracts will be greatly shortened, because they will contain nothing that is not registered against the estate. Many deeds, which are now necessarily abstracted, are of a nature not to require registration; and abstracts of deeds are frequently called for, and furnished, merely to shew that such deeds do not affect the property in question. Under the existing system, a purchaser is not safe if he does not inspect every instrument of which he has notice; and he has in almost every case either to incur a considerable expense for the inspection of deeds in the hands of a third person, or to waive the inspection at his own risk.

We may waive the discussion of the question, whether a purchaser should be bound by express notice of a non-registered deed, it being admitted that he is to be accountable for actual fraud. It seems to be generally understood that it is of little practical importance how the question is decided, so that equity is restrained from running wild in the region of constructive notice. No one contends for more than this—that express notice of an unregistered document shall not bind a purchaser who is innocent of fraud; and the only argument of those who would, in terms, allow effect to express notice, is, that no one can purchase with express notice of an adverse title, which his purchase would defeat without being guilty of fraud. Be it so.

We now come to the weakest point in the present bill—the omission of any provision for maps. The map clauses were struck out of the bill of 1851 in committee; and Lord St. Leonards, while he considers the use of maps to be impracticable, does not fail to observe on the imperfection of the plan without them. The omission of the maps is unquestionably a mistake. We need not here repeat what we have said in answer to the objections which have been made to the use of maps for the accurate description of parcels. (14 Jur., part 2, p. 299). The objection is condemned by the practice of the objectors themselves. Maps are now much more commonly relied on than words for the description of parcels. But even that low degree of accuracy in a plan which in almost every case is sufficient for the perfect identification of the parcels, is not essential to the maps which are required for the purposes of the proposed registry. Maps, in the plan of the present Registration Commission, are proposed as a substitute for Mr. Duval's Index to the Roots of Titles, (the district index of names of grantors in the Lord Chancellor's bill); and if there are a map of each district in the registration office, and a plan in the registered conveyance, each on such a scale, and sufficiently accurate, to lead an inquirer to the place and distinguishing mark on the district map of the property in question, they will be sufficient for all the purposes of search. Accuracy of delineation and identification of boundaries are wholly immaterial; all that is wanted is such a delineation of the property in the conveyance of it, and such a map in the office of the district in which it lies, as to prevent estate L. on the district map from being mistaken for estate M., though the chances of any mischief, or even inconvenience, flowing from even such an error, are infinitely small. Now, it is only a fraction of the country which is not already mapped for the purposes of the tithe commutation, and copies of the maps are sold at an almost nominal price; and the suggestion by Messrs. Humphry and Broderip, that the expense of commencing the registry with a map would probably not be so little as two millions, is a ridiculous exaggeration. But even without a map the plan will be safe and efficient. What is wanted is a means of finding the number or symbol in the general index which is appropriated to a particular estate. In almost every case the person searching will be furnished with this number, for it will be known to his vendor, and it will be marked on the duplicate or copy of the registered document in the vendor's possession. But for the purposes of search, the country will be divided into small districts—as small, if necessary, as small parishes—and an index of grantors' names will be made for each district. Now, the trouble of searching in such a limited index will be slight, and the chance of any error being made in the entry or the search, with any detrimental result, will be absolutely inappreciable. What is Lord St. Leonards own experience? "He had seen thousands of titles of estates in the register counties which had not been registered, and he had never seen one of them in which there had been any suppression of titles." We have already pointed out that a registry is wanted, not so much to make titles more secure than they are, as to make the investigation of titles less troublesome and less expensive.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.
ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.
The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l., and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24½ to 55 per cent. on the Premium paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division of the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increase risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

LONDON, APRIL 30, 1853.

UPON a former occasion we ventured to express our disapprobation of the decision of the Court of Common Pleas in Walker v. Giles, (6 C. B. 662*), and we have not yet heard anything calculated to change our opinion in this respect. That case, it will be remembered, turned upon the effect of a mortgage deed, containing the usual clause, making the mortgagor in possession tenant to the mortgagee, at an annual rent, with power in the mortgagee to distrain. The indenture was between two shareholders and two trustees of a building society, whereby, after reciting that the shareholders were entitled to a certain sum out of the funds in respect of their shares, and that for the security of all the payments, amounting to 840*l.*, to become due in respect of the said shares, they had agreed to execute the assurance thereby made, they conveyed certain premises to the trustees, upon trust to permit the shareholders to retain possession, and to receive the rents, until default in payment of their contributions, with a power to the trustees to appoint a person to receive the rents in case of default, and a power of sale in the like event, &c. The shareholders agreed to become tenants to the trustees of the premises "henceforth" during their will, at the rent of 200*l.*, payable on the usual quarter-days. The Court held that this deed did not operate as a demise, so as to sustain an avowry alleging a tenancy under the trustees, as the general scope of the deed was inconsistent with such a construction. The learned judges said that otherwise the grantors must be deemed to have contracted to pay the contributions, and also the rent of 200*l.* a year, but that such a construction was manifestly contrary to the obvious intention of the parties. "The only object of the deed," said Wilde, C. J.; delivering the judgment of the Court, "was to give a security for the payment of the contributions, and that part of the deed which is contended to operate as a demise was but a mode by which that object was intended to be accomplished; but it is not a mode calculated to effect the purpose intended, but the contrary." The learned reporters add, in a note to page 701, "Similar clauses are, however, frequently used by conveyancers, without any doubt as to their efficacy. In Jarman's Conveyancing, vol. 5, p. 528, it is said—'It is often convenient in mortgages to give a power of distress for the recovery of the interest, particularly where the property is in the occupation of the mortgagor himself, and not of a tenant paying rent. The object is sometimes effected by making a demise at will to the mortgagor, reserving a rent equal to the amount of the interest. (See a form to this effect, Cov.

Prec. Mort. 94). But a power of distress (of the validity of which no doubt can be entertained) is to be preferred, inasmuch as a demise at will is liable to be determined by the death and at the will of either party, and, it is conceived, subjects the deed to a lease stamp.* (See also Jarm. Byth. by Sweet, vol. 5, pp. 514, 515; vol. 4, p. 162; and Smith's L. C. 296 d).

The objection which we formerly urged to Walker v. Giles was, that the Court appeared to us to have confounded the legal with the equitable operation of the security; and we submitted that the mortgagors under the deed, so long as they duly paid the subscriptions, would, under the trust for quiet enjoyment until default, be entitled to receive the rents and profits legally recoverable by the trustees, including the 200*l.*, and thus would pay with one hand, and receive with another; and that, after default, the trustees would, by the express terms of the deed, be entitled to recover both the subscriptions and rent at law, yet liable to account in equity. A mortgagee may have several legal remedies for recovering one debt; and the only restraint upon his ultimately recovering too much is under the 7 Geo. 2, c. 20, or in the Court of Chancery.

Entertaining these views, we are glad to find that the Court of Exchequer have refused, at all events, to extend the doctrine of Walker v. Giles, and have expressed their determination to regard with strictness any further attempt to limit the generally-supposed effect of ordinary securities*. The case before the Court was certainly distinguishable in its facts from the one in the Court of Common Pleas; but the Court of Exchequer seemed to yield but a doubtful assent to the former authority; and Parke, B., said, that to apply it to the case then before the Court would be to shake a great many securities throughout the country. The deed in this case stated a demise by the mortgagor (A.) to the mortgagee (B.) of the term vested in the former, (wanting one day), at a peppercorn rent, subject to a proviso for redemption, if A. paid 10*l.* interest on the 29th January, 1848, and 410*l.* principal and interest, on the 29th July in that year. Until default, A. was to hold the premises without interruption, and he was to hold them as tenant at will to B., at the rent of 150*l.*, payable quarterly, for which rent B. might distrain on the premises, as landlords may for rent reserved on leases for years; but B. might at any time determine the tenancy by leaving notice, and he was to apply the rent, when received, in payment of the rent due from A. to his superior landlord, and in satisfaction of the principal and interest, and to pay the surplus (if any) to A.

Upon this last clause, the Court distinguished the case from Walker v. Giles, and held, that the relation of landlord and tenant at will was created, so as to enable the former to distrain for rent in arrear.

Another point of some importance was also decided in this case—namely, that a tenant at will cannot determine his tenancy by assignment to another, unless and until the landlord has knowledge of such assignment. The same rule had been laid down, with regard to the determination of the tenancy on the part of the landlord, in Doe d. Davies v. Thomas, (6 Exch. 855), where it was held, that if a party creates a tenancy at will, and afterwards becomes insolvent, the vesting order, with knowledge thereof by the tenant, is a determination of the tenancy; and if the tenant, after such information, continues in possession, he may be treated as a trespasser. The rule seems to be, that there must be knowledge, or some notorious act, as feoffment with livery of seisin made on the land, or actual entry by the lessor on the land. (See Yelv. 74; Disdale v. Iles, 2 Lev. 88; Hinchman v. Iles, Vent. 247; Ball v. Cullimore, 2 C., M., & R. 120; Co. Litt. 55. b.; and Com. Dig., "Estates by Grant," H. 6, H. 9).

It may also be mentioned, as was stated by Parke, B., that a tenant at will, holding at a rent payable quarterly, cannot determine the tenancy during the current quarter.

On the Registration of Transfers of Land, and their Assimilation to the Transfer of Stock. A Paper read before the Law Amendment Society, by Mr. W. S. COOKSON, on May 24, 1852. (Law Review, vol. 16, p. 361).

Shall we Simplify our Titles? A Letter to the Lord High Chancellor of England, from a Conveyancing Barrister. Pp. 20. [Wildy & Sons.]

Outline of a Measure for the Transfer of Land through a registered Proprietor of Fee-simple Estates, showing that Land may be sold and transferred on a similar Principle to Stock in the Public Funds, &c. An Address to the Committee of the House of Lords on the Bill for the Registration of Assurances. By EDWARD WEBSTER, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Lincoln's-inn. 4to. Pp. 24.

THE objection to a general registry most relied on is the expense, especially on small transactions. The Freehold Land Societies are up in arms against it. The mercenary and short-sighted among the solicitors are chuckling at it. We need not say much on the question of the expense of the establishment and system as a whole. An accurate calculation made by one of the commissioners (Mr. Frere) shews that three best-class three-windowed houses, of the ordinary depth, would afford accommodation for all the deeds likely to be registered for more than sixty years; and that calculation assumes that deeds will always be as bulky and ill-folded as they now usually are. The annual expense of the office, in salaries to officers and clerks, would not exceed 20,000*l.*, and an average payment of 4*s.* or 5*s.* per deed on registration would amply defray the entire expenses of the establishment. Under the present system, the length of abstracts is increasing in a progressive ratio, but in a very few years after the introduction of a general registry abstracts will be materially shortened, in consequence of the omission from them of numerous unregistered documents, which in the absence of a registry it is necessary to abstract. Covenants for the production of title deeds will be dispensed, and the expenses of investigating titles will be lessened in various ways. The saving, in short, to the owners and purchasers of real property will very soon greatly exceed the entire cost of the establishment. A very slight addition to the ad valorem stamp duties would raise a sufficient fund, and office fees might then be entirely dispensed with.

If the expenses of the establishment were raised by an ad valorem charge, some sum under 6*d.* would represent the cost of registration in small transactions, so far as the office expenses are concerned. But a gentleman, who writes from Bury St. Edmunds to Lord St. Leonards, asserts that the additional solicitor's charges could not, on a conveyance, be less than 5*l.*, and on a mortgage, than 4*l.* 10*s.* If this assertion had not been embalmed in the able speech of the late Lord Chancellor we should not have noticed it. We are not favoured with the details of the calculation, and we can only suppose that it includes every conceivable charge which could possibly enter into a solicitor's bill. By the same process we might shew, that under the present system, a mortgage for 100*l.*, or a purchase to the like amount, would necessarily cost 50*l.*; yet Mr. Green tells us that in his office the costs of conveyances under 500*l.* have been from 2*l.* to 7*l.*, and of mortgages from 1*l.* to 8*l.*, according to the amount, and exclusive of stamps. Now, let us see what the bill of costs of a solicitor on a small purchase consists of, where the abstract is short and everything goes smoothly:—

That this is a very meagre bill of costs may be seen by reference to Dax or any other authority; and it is assumed that no counsel was employed, and that the title was short and free from difficulty.

The additional costs occasioned by the registry will be as follows:—

Parchment .....	0	5	0
Attending to register conveyance .....	0	6	8
Fee on registration .....	0	1	0
	£1	13	8

From this 1*l.* 3*s.* must be deducted for searches rendered unnecessary by the registry, leaving a balance of 10*s.* 8*d.* But we will take the extra costs at 1*l.* 13*s.* 8*d.* Of this amount 8*s.* will have been paid out of pocket, if the most liberal allowance is made for ingrossing and parchment; but on a small transaction the duplicate deed may well be dispensed with, the draft being kept in lieu of it. In that case the amount will be reduced to 8*s.* 8*d.*, and the costs out of pocket to 2*s.* We do not know how Mr. Green obtains his 5*l.*, "exclusive of registrar's fees." Now, if Mr. Green finds it worth his while in small transactions to accept 2*l.* in lieu of 1*l.* 19*s.* 2*d.*, it is fair to presume that he would be satisfied with a further advance of 2*s.* 6*d.* on the above-mentioned extra costs out of pocket; in which case the additional cost to his client would be 10*s.* 6*d.* if he took a duplicate conveyance, or 4*s.* 6*d.* if he did not. But the registrar's fees might be wholly remitted on transactions under 50*l.*

Even Freehold Land Societies, then, may view the registration scheme with little apprehension on the score of expense. In a few years they will find their gain in it.

It is now more than ten years since Mr. R. Wilson's "Plan for adapting the Machinery of the Public Funds to the Transfer of Real Property" was laid before the public. In the interval he has devoted extraordinary pains to the development and improvement of its details, and the result may be seen in the appendix to the first (and still the only) report of the Registration and Conveyancing Commission. We have no doubt that sooner or later the establishment of a perfect system of real property transfer will be the result of Mr. Wilson's able and disinterested labours. In February, 1847, we thus attempted to indicate the principle of Mr. Wilson's plan:—

"We now regard Mr. Wilson's ingenious plan in a light more favourable even than that in which he himself and the committee of the Law Amendment Society have ventured to place it. It is true, that the machinery by which he proposes to work out his principle differs as strikingly from those recon-dite arrangements which are now managed with so much art in Lincoln's-inn, as Liebig's laboratory does from that of Van Helmont; but the principle is one which was invented by the conveyancers themselves, and has long been applied, as a matter of course, in dealing with the principal estates in the country—applied, that is to say, in an imperfect manner, and so as to secure but a small portion of the advantages offered by Mr. Wilson's plan, and to occasion much more risk than it involves. In short, Mr. Wilson's scheme is nothing more than an improvement and amplification of that contrivance which is now universally adopted in well-drawn settlements of real estate—the power to sell and give discharges. The policy of this usual clause in settlements is well understood. No one can say that it may not at some time be advantageous for all the objects of the settlement, that the estate, or a part of it, should be sold; and as the parties beneficially interested may not then be competent to act for themselves, absolute dominion over the estate is conferred on a body of trustees, and provision is made for supplying vacancies among the members of that body. By those powers the estate and the produce of any sale are placed at the absolute mercy of the trustees, and this is daily done without hesitation in settling the largest estates in the country. Mr. Wilson proposes to do no more, or rather not to do so much; for his plan provides checks and safeguards which the present system wants.

"The plan is shortly this—to provide a register for the purposes of alienation only, being the only register to which a purchaser of the fee simple need look, wholly distinct from the register of subordinate or 'equitable interests, (if it should be deemed expedient to have such a register), just as the title derived from the trustees for sale under a settlement is distinct from, and independent of, the titles of the various persons beneficially interested under the settlement. On this register, at its commencement, the estate will be entered as belonging absolutely to a single owner, or to several joint owners; all reference to subordinate interests, except such simple interests as mortgages, leases, &c., being excluded. On the death of one of several owners the title will (for the purposes of the register) vest in the survivors; on the death of a sole owner the title (i. e. the power of disposition) will vest in his executor or administrator. The alienation by the registered owner or owners will confer an indefeasible title, and on the instrument of transfer being presented to the registrar the entry of the title of the alienor will be cancelled, and an entry of the title of the alienee will be substituted. Thus there will at all times be an owner on the register competent to act, and his title will be conclusively manifested by a single entry on the register. By means of apt provisions for caveats, stop-orders, &c., sufficient protection against the abuse of the large disposing power thus intrusted to the parties on the register may be provided." Particulars of the plan, in its improved form, may be found in 14 Jur., part 2, p. 306.

We have never been satisfied with Mr. Wilson's solution of the question—how his register is to be commenced? Neither a judicial investigation of title, nor a shortening of the period of limitation, would be endured. It seems to us that the registry may be set at work without either. The registry is intended to be confined to conveyances of the fee, mortgages, and leases. The first entry on the register of conveyances against a given estate would operate as an absolute conveyance of all the interest the conveying party had, such interest being represented to be an unincumbered legal estate in fee simple. The next entry would operate as an absolute conveyance of the interest which actually passed by the first entry, and would purport to be a conveyance in fee. In almost every case the real and the expressed effect of the entry would be the same, but the title prior to the first entry on the register would be investigated until a sufficient time had elapsed to render the omission of that precaution not imprudent. It occurs at once to say that a lapse of sixty years would in all cases relieve purchasers from looking beyond the register. The analogy of the existing rule could not, however, be safely followed. Mr. Wilson's register would not disclose the occasion of the registered alienation. The first entry might be a conveyance from the heir of a deceased trustee to new trustees, the next a conveyance to new trustees, and so on. They would all appear as absolute conveyances. The lapse of sixty or even one hundred years would, in such case, afford no guarantee of title. Under the existing system the true character of the title would appear. It seems, therefore, that the suitable preparation for the adoption of Mr. Wilson's plan would be the establishment of such a register as is contemplated by the Lord Chancellor's bill. After such a register of deeds had been in operation for a few years, Mr. Wilson's more perfect registry of title might be commenced, with a provision that no title should be entered on the registry of titles that did not previously appear on the registry of assurances.

We need not dwell long on the other pamphlets before us. Mr. Cookson's paper is remarkable as containing no reference to Mr. Wilson, though it was written for the very society which had recently had Mr. Wilson's plan under consideration, and though Mr. Cookson refers to the report of the Registration Commission, in which Mr. Wilson's plan is conspicuously noticed. Mr. Cookson's plan is Mr. Wilson's. The paper is very well written, and places the leading features of the plan, and the arguments for it, in so clear a light, as to make us the more regret the author's want of candour.

In addition to the argument drawn from the usual powers of sale in settlements, Mr. Cookson refers to the powers of sale in mortgagees, who may thus be intrusted, not only with an absolute dominion over the land, but also, as trustees of the mortgage debt, with the money secured upon it; and he refers to the immense sums of money in the funds, and on other securities, which are, without hesitation, placed in the power of trustees. He might have added that the security of a distringas is rarely resorted to. In the pamphlet intitled "Shall we Simplify our Titles?" a further illustration is drawn from the fact, that leasehold property, whenever it is settled, or devolves upon a death, is invariably placed in the absolute power of trustees or personal representatives. But the author's propositions are distinguished by crudeness rather than novelty.

Mr. Webster proposes to have a judicial investigation of existing titles previously to the registration of a claim to absolute ownership, for the purposes of disposition. In other respects his plan bears a close resemblance to Mr. Wilson's; but want of space compels us to omit any more extended notice of it.

GEORGE M. BUTT, Esq., M. P., Q. C., Chairman.

BONUS.—Policies effected (on the Profits' Scale) prior to the 31st December, 1853, will participate in FOUR-FIFTHS of the Profits, to be declared at the close of the year 1855, and appropriated by addition to the Policy, reduction of Premium, or Payment in Cash, as the Assured may desire.

Extensive license to travel and reside abroad.

Appearance before the Board dispensed with.

THE NATIONAL REVERSIONARY INVESTMENT COMPANY.

OFFICE, 63, OLD BROAD STREET, LONDON.

JOHN FARMINGTON HERWOOD, Esq., Chairman.

SOLICITORS—Messrs. Cardale, Iliffe, and Russell, Bedford-row. Established in the year 1837, for the Purchase of Reversionary Interests, either absolute or contingent, and whether secured upon real or personal estate, life interests or annuities, and policies of assurance on lives.

Forms for submitting Proposals for Sale may be obtained at the Office of the Company, and every facility will be rendered to insure the speedy completion of contracts.

G. A. RENDALL, Secretary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000*l.*, and the Income exceeds 136,000*l.* per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,135*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24*l.* to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5*l.* to 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1854; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

[For continuation of the Names of the Cases reported, see Supplement.]

LONDON, MAY 7, 1853.

THERE is no one thing more striking in the history of English law than the constant struggle which has been made to obtain and preserve the right of free and unfettered alienation of property. The acquisition of this privilege is almost coeval with the right of property itself. In the feudal times it followed immediately upon the creation of estates of inheritance in land. Restricted to some extent by the Statute De Donis, the judges, yielding to the pressure from without, by the decision in Taltarum's case, establishing the validity of the strange device of a recovery, virtually repealed the restriction, which no Parliament has ventured to re-enact. From an old date, for the same reason, there has been great jealousy of all gifts in mortmain; and this feeling largely aided the rapacity of Henry VIII and his servile courtiers in contriving the dissolution of the monasteries. In his reign the Statute of Uses was a blow aimed directly at an evasion of the law of mortmain, by declaring uses in favour of religious bodies. Another effect of the same act was to put a check upon the novel limitations of property which were introduced under the form of uses; and this was again evaded by allowing similar limitations of the legal estate under the statute, and by the revival of the old use under the name of a trust. Coming down to more recent times, the same spirit is evinced by the establishment of an arbitrary rule against perpetuities. By the cy-près doctrine, the Fines and Recoveries Act, by an ardent desire for a system of registration, expected to simplify the conveyance of real property by a real simplification of conveyances, substituting a grant for the clumsy form of the lease and release, and, not least significantly, by the vague ignorant murmur against primogeniture and entail laws on the part of those who believe them to be the chief bulwarks of aristocratic immunities, richly undeserved. These are but a few of the symptoms of an irresistible necessity; but the list would be incomplete indeed if it omitted to include the Thellusson Act, 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 98, by which the power of directing accumulations of the income of property was confined within still straiter limits than the period during which the absolute interest in the capital might be settled so as to be inalienable, in direction to accumulate is particularly obnoxious to the principle of free alienation, for during the continuance of the trust for this purpose, the very enjoyment of the property is taken away from all persons. Not only can no one alienate it, but no one can have even the use of it; the whole property, principal and interest, is shut up, and abstracted entirely, for the time, from the general store. No wise government could allow its subjects to possess such a control over their property. It would be a glaring abuse of the right of alienation from which it originated. Absolute power of making any limitations of property whatever cannot co-exist with the freedom of disposition which the law confers upon the individual for the benefit of the community. Accordingly the Thellusson Act restricted the period, during which an accumulation may be directed, to the life of the grantor, or twenty-one years from his death, or the minority of any person, who, if of age, would be entitled to the income so to be accumulated. The statute contained, however, certain exceptions to this rule, one of which was a provision for raising portions in certain cases; and upon this part of it the following case has occurred for decision:—Lord Barrington, on his marriage in 1823, settled certain family estates to the use of trustees for a term of years, upon the usual trusts to raise portions for younger children of the marriage: if one such child only, 20,000*l.*; if two, 30,000*l.*; and if three or more, 40,000*l.* There were more than three children, so that the last-mentioned sum became raiseable. By his will, dated in 1826, the Bishop of Durham, who was Lord Barrington's great uncle, after noticing the trust for raising portions for his nephew's children, bequeathed to his executors named in his will 15,000*l.*, upon trust to invest, and to accumulate all the income of such investment during the life of Lord Barrington; or if Lord Barrington died within twenty years after the testator's death, then to accumulate for such period of twenty years, and to stand possessed of the invested funds and accumulations, upon trust to discharge the portions of Lord Barrington's younger children when payable, "and in exoneration of the hereditaments charged therewith;" if the fund should become sufficient for this purpose within the time directed for accumulation, such accumulation thereupon to cease. And the testator bequeathed one half of his residuary personal property to Lord Barrington, and the other half to his younger children, after the decease of Lord and Lady Barrington. The testator died in 1826. Lord Barrington was still alive; and the question was, whether the accumulation was good beyond twenty-one years from the testator's death, which depended upon whether the case was within the saving as to portions in the 2nd section of the Thellusson Act, to which we have referred. That proviso is in the following words:—"Nothing in this act contained shall extend to any provision for payment of debts of any grantor, settlor, or devisor, or other person or persons, or to any provision for raising portions for any child or children of any grantor, settlor, or devisor, or any child or children of any person taking an interest under any such conveyance, settlement, or devise, or to any direction touching the produce of timber or wood upon any lands or tenements; but all such provisions and directions shall and may be made and given as if this act had not passed." The case was most elaborately argued; and Lord St. Leonards, then Lord Chancellor, decided that this saving applied to the accumulation directed as above mentioned by the will of the Bishop of Durham for the children of his nephew, Lord Barrington, although no benefit in the property directed to be accumulated was given to Lord Barrington himself.

The curious process of reasoning by which Lord St. Leonards arrived at this conclusion seems to have been as follows:—The provision in the statute is vaguely and loosely expressed. The first sentence allows an accumulation for the purpose of paying the debts of yourself, or any "other person or persons," that being a power which no one is likely to abuse. This provision applies to past as well as future debts. Halford v. Staines (16 Sim. 466) decided that the next sentence concerning portions applies to portions previously charged by the person directing the accumulation, and there being no break in this sentence any more than in the previous one. "Whatever a grantor or settlor may do with regard to his own children, he could do with regard to the children of any other person, as regards past portions or future portions, because there is no distinction between them, except that the persons whose children may have portions provided them by a grantor, settlor, or devisor, must be persons who take an interest under 'any such conveyance, settlement, or devise.'" There are no words in the statute to shew an intention that the interest which the father of such children is to take must be in the very property which is directed to be accumulated. It would have been easy to express such intention if it had existed. The Legislature were obliged to give some definition of the parent, or the exception would have applied to the whole world; and the limitation accordingly was, "very sensibly—if you make the father an object of your bounty upon the face of your will, you may by that same will accumulate a fund, within the limit allowed by law, for the children of that party."

We confess it appears to us that the weakness of this argument is of itself alone sufficient to condemn the conclusion. But we prefer to look at the matter from higher ground. It is almost incredible that a great lawyer should ignore the policy of which the former part of this rapid sketch has noticed so many illustrations in the history of English jurisprudence. In construing such a statute as the Thellusson Act it is impossible to put out of sight, unless it be done wilfully, the principle of preserving the power of free alienation of property for the benefit of the community, which was the sole origin of the enactment. Why, then, were accumulations "for raising portions" excepted? Obviously because to provide portions for a man's younger children was a duty which it was right that he should have even extraordinary facilities for performing. This reason only extends to portions given by the grantor, who directs the accumulation. But our law recognises as portions, gifts by a man to another's children, towards whom he may have placed himself in loco parentis, even though their own father may be living. (See Powys v. Mansfield, 3 My. & C. 359). Or, again, where property is given to a stranger for life, and then portions out of it, after his decease, are given to his children. The vis termini itself shews that the property given must be part of what belonged to the parent, or to the donor who was in loco parentis. The framers of the statute, in their wisdom or folly, chose to define what portions were intended to be excepted from its operation. These were, of course, portions for the grantor's children, and further, for the children of any person taking an interest under the grant. Can the meaning be mistaken? Could this latter definition refer to any but the third class of portions we have mentioned as recognised by the law, viz. where the very property to be divided into portions had been given to the father of the children previously? Why, if the same property were not previously given to the father of the children, but were simply directed to be divided among the children, then, quid the grantor, these are not portions. In that case the reason for the exception would not apply, and neither would its language, without an extravagant distortion.

This was the view taken by Sir G. J. Turner, L. J., then Vice-Chancellor, on the original hearing of the case to which we have called attention; and notwithstanding Lord St. Leonards' great fame as a lawyer, we prefer to remain in error upon this point with the most learned and able judge whose decision he reversed. If we wished to find other arguments against his Lordship's judgment, they are readily at hand. Not only were the portions of Lord Barrington's younger children no portions for which the Bishop of Durham was under the slightest obligation to provide, nor any part of property previously enjoyed by their father, but the provision made by the Bishop of Durham was positively no benefit in the world to these younger children. The only person who took any advantage from it was the owner of the estate on which the portions were originally charged, and the bishop's will actually expressed that the purpose of the accumulation was to exonerate these hereditaments so charged!

This is a purpose altogether so foreign to the spirit of the statute, that no lawyer would attempt to find authority for it in any of the provisos or exceptions.

The principle of this decision reduces the act to a nullity. We see nothing now to prevent an accumulation, as extensive as that which Mr. Thellusson directed, in favour of any man who has a father living, to whom, by the same instrument, 5l. or 10l. may be given, to satisfy Lord St. Leonards' construction of this statute.

Vice-Chancellor Stuart has expressed an approval of this decision of Lord St. Leonards; and this learned judge has even gone so far as to intimate some doubt of the policy of passing the Thellusson Act at all; (see Middleton v. Losh, 17 Jur., part 1, p. 177); an opinion which Lord St. Leonards has never, so far as we know, on any occasion, expressed, and in which, we think, few lawyers of eminence will be found to concur.

REGISTRATION OF TITLES.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—As you have honoured my little book, "Shall we simplify our Titles?" by mentioning it in your able article on registration in last week's JURIST, will you pardon my calling your attention more clearly than I have there done to one point which bears strongly on the question of facilitating transfers of land? Take up any old abstract shewing the title to an outstanding term of years, and ten to one you will find that at some period or other it passed to an executor, and from him to another executor, and then to an administrator, and so on, perhaps, for many generations. You will then see that a single page of the abstract shews the title for a hundred years. For all that can be set forth is the date of the different wills or letters of administration, and the names of the executors or administrators. For once the law beat the lawyer, and left him no excuse for abstracting the will, raising doubts as to its effect, and consulting counsel thereon, &c.; and consequently, so far as this principle is concerned, titles are simplicity itself. And how was this done? By the person named executor or administrator taking, virtute officii, full power to transfer the land, of which he could not be deprived by anything contained in the body of the will. We have here direct and positive experience as to how abstracts and conveyances may be shortened and simplified, and I am firmly convinced you will find no other principle effectual for that purpose; for as long as you leave the lawyer a possibility of complicating matters, he will avail himself of it.

This is the principle I meant to advocate, and you will see it is applicable to any system of registration; though I certainly think that, with simplified titles, it would be sufficient to register memorials without taking away the deeds themselves, which, whether reasonably or unreasonably, people strongly object to parting with.

I am, Sir, yours very obediently,

A CONVEYANCING BARRISTER.

Lincoln's Inn, April 26, 1853.

[We did not receive the above communication until after the conclusion of our article had been printed. The illustration is valuable; but the propositions contained in our correspondent's pamphlet are mere sketches of some of the main features of Mr. Wilson's plan. It is part of Mr. Wilson's plan that the absolute dominion over the fee should devolve on the executor or administrator.

In our estimate of the costs of registration under the Lord Chancellor's bill, the ingrossing of the duplicate conveyance was, by mistake, set down at 1l. instead of 13s. 4d., which would be the charge for a deed of twenty folios. The total amount should, therefore, be 1l. 7s. instead of 1l. 13s. 8d.—Ed.]

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—It is not usually within the scope of a journal like yours to enter on the discussions of the budget of a Chancellor of the Exchequer. That, however, of the present year contains a point to which I wish to call the attention of the legal profession and the public—that is, the question of the legacy duty being chargeable on real estate and money in settlement. I am not going into the question of the justice or injustice of this, of which, considering the difference between stamps on the transfer of landed and personal property, there can scarce be a dispute between reasonable men; and it is to be presumed that those stamp duties will be equalised if this measure be carried into effect. But there is a point of much greater importance connected with this subject—at any rate, in the eyes of a Government—and that is, the question of expediency.

I want to know, from some member of the Profession better acquainted with the conveyancing branch of it than myself, what will be the effect of imposing a tax on successions on the titles to landed estates in the course of fifty years? It appears to me, that as it is very often that the legacy duty runs on for a long period, if this is to be a charge on the land overriding mortgages, subsequent settlements, &c., there will be such a confusion of titles, that in fifty years there will not be a good title to be had in the three kingdoms. As to the taxing of personalty in settlement, I deny the possibility of it. Say I am trustee of money in settlement—it stands in my name, and that of a co-trustee; when my cestui que vie dies, I will not pay the Chancellor of the Exchequer one shilling, and I defy him, and all the Chancellors that have existed since the Conquest, to make me. It will not be very easy with funded property, but with personalty in settlement it is absolutely impossible to exact this tax; and if any of it is collected at all, it must be at the cost of enormous litigation. I presume that no one will pay a tax that he can avoid—which is a fair supposition.

I shall, Sir, feel much obliged if you can place this view of the case before the public. We have been doing much to simplify titles, and to decrease litigation. This is a step, made through either ignorance or indifference, to confuse the one and to promote the other.

I remain, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

A BARRISTER.

The Right Hon. Sir John Jervis, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas, has appointed William Machin Ingle, Gent., of Belper, Derbyshire, to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Derby.

Forms for submitting Proposals for Sale may be obtained at the Office of the Company, and every facility will be rendered to insure the speedy completion of contracts.

G. A. RENDALL, Secretary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l., and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 2½ to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

99, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

The usual Commission allowed to Solicitors and Agents.

LONDON, MAY 14, 1853.

We are not in general great grievance-mongers in this journal, but there is a grievance to the removal of which we must lend our aid, viz. the sitting of the Courts of Equity at Westminster during the Spring and Summer Terms. The evidence taken by a Committee of the House of Commons in 1845, on the subject of a concentration of the courts and offices in the neighbourhood of the Inns of Court, is filled with statements made by judges, by King's counsel, by junior counsel, and by solicitors, all tending to one conclusion—that the sitting of any Courts at Westminster produces inconvenience and loss of time; and that as to the Courts of Equity, the loss of time to the solicitors, to the draftsmen, and even to the majority of the King's counsel, is enormous.

Take Lord Cottenham's evidence, (Q. 434 et seq.):—

"Will your Lordship allow the Committee to ask you, has your attention been directed to the convenience or inconvenience of the Courts sitting at Westminster during term?—I have no difficulty in saying that it is extremely inconvenient; inconvenient both to practitioners at the bar and to solicitors.

"Whilst at the bar, your Lordship was in considerable practice as a draftsman?—I was.

"You felt that inconvenience to a great extent?—To a very great extent; many entire days are lost to the junior members of the Bar, who have no great portion of (court) business, by necessarily attending at Westminster while the Court is sitting, for the chance of a case in which they are engaged coming on, and the whole morning is lost.

"They cannot, therefore, prepare their pleadings in proper time?—They are necessarily prevented doing any business during that morning.

"That is very injurious to their clients?—It must be so; it delays the proceedings which would otherwise be going on in the chambers of those gentlemen.

"Will your Lordship have the goodness to inform the Committee whether to practising barristers great inconvenience does not arise from their inability to attend the Master's office during term, in consequence of the sitting of the Courts at Westminster?—It certainly does. In my own practice, when I was in that branch of the Profession, before I had a silk gown, difficulties occurred in attendance before the Master; sometimes one barrister and sometimes the other was unable to attend, by being engaged in court, and consequently the appointment before the Master could not take place."

Again: take Master Farrer's evidence, (Q. 940):—

"Has your attention been directed to the question of the convenience or inconvenience of the present situation of the Courts of Law and Equity at Westminster?—Ever since I was at the bar it has been a subject of conversation and complaint. Undoubtedly, when the Courts are sitting at Westminster, and barristers are at Lincoln's-inn or the Temple, it is attended with great inconvenience."

And we may add, that it was proved by numerous witnesses that the preparation of equity pleadings, and the proceedings on those references to the Masters which require counsel's attendance, are nearly wholly suspended during the sittings of the Courts at Westminster.

All these inconveniences are now doubly felt, because, in addition to a certain number of Masters sitting at Lincoln's-inn, there are now sitting there, during as well as out of term, the judges' chief clerks, and occasionally the judges themselves. It is not many days ago that a cause was decided in the Court of Appeal in the absence of counsel for some of the parties, because that counsel was engaged at Lincoln's-inn before a judge in chambers in the early part of the day. Another inconvenience, we will not say absolutely inseparable from sitting at Westminster, but practically and actually connected with it, is, that from the want of books, cases cannot be as well argued as they can when counsel have the command of their libraries. Another is, the absolute impossibility, to a draftsman at least, of doing any business except court business. There are few junior counsel who have not tried, while waiting for their causes to come on, to read or to settle drafts, and there are few who have not given it up in despair; the incessant interruption, the noise, the running to and fro of suitors, solicitors, and counsel, and last, but not least, the indisposition to quiet and patient thought with which the whole tone of a court impresses the minds of those who are on its floor, all prevent men from doing any effective business except that of the cause they may happen to be in. To all, therefore, except those who are fully engaged in causes all day long—that is, to all except about half a dozen Queen's counsel—there is a vast loss of time.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the waste of time to the solicitors, who must be waiting at Westminster when they ought to be working in judges' chambers at Lincoln's-inn, is quite as great and quite as onerous. Nor is it necessary to point out, that in such matters the loss of the counsel and solicitor is the loss of the suitor. It is obvious, that if drawing pleadings and working out orders in judges' chambers are at a standstill or much delayed during term, the termination of suits is pro tanto delayed. And now that delay is proved to have been the master grievance of Chancery business, we do trust that so fertile a source of it will be abolished. The desired improvement is not, like many others, difficult of attainment; it requires no act of Parliament, no consideration of General Orders—nothing of difficulty attends it at all; it requires but the direction of the Lord Chancellor that the sittings shall be at Lincoln's-inn, and at Lincoln's-inn they would be.

We return again to the subject of the impending legislation concerning charitable trusts. Having obtained a copy of the proposed bill, we present here a summary of its enactments as at present framed, classifying them in the order in which they occur in the bill.

We have already drawn attention (ante, pp. 113, 130) to a book on public education, by Sir James Kay Shuttleworth, which was published about the time of the Government announcement.

This work contains an interesting chapter on the subject of charitable endowments. A large proportion of these were originally destined for educational purposes, and it is contemplated that if there existed an extended power of modifying, at small expense, those other trusts which are at present useless or injurious, they might with the greatest advantage be diverted into this channel. After detailing in a striking manner the numbers of the English charities, their nature, the neglect, waste, and other various evils to which they are subject, with the practical impossibility, in most cases, of finding a remedy in the present state of the jurisdiction, and the ruinous expense of such a remedy under any circumstances; and after pointing out also the abuse of the almost uncontrolled power of litigation which every one now possesses at the expense of charities, and the utter absence of an efficient control over their administration for the prevention of the evils, for which the present system affords no cure; the work to which we allude proceeds to develop a measure for the future administrative and judicial government of charities, which corresponds in its main features with the ministerial scheme.

There are, however, some distinctions between the two plans which deserve consideration.

The chief characteristic of the new measure is the distinction made between the administrative and what may be called the contentious jurisdiction respecting charities; in other words, between those matters which do not so much require legal knowledge for their decision—such, for example, as the expediency of granting leases or opening mines in charity property—and those which can only be determined by a judge, as questions of adverse title, the construction of statutes, deeds, wills, &c.

The Court of Chancery, as we observed in a former paper on this subject, has no means of preventing the occurrence of the evils incident to charities; even if unassisted, its jurisdiction could be so modified as to afford a cheap and ready remedy for them when known to exist. These considerations have obviously suggested the plan of giving into other hands the duty of watching over the administration of charities, and assisting them in all those matters of management which do not require the special knowledge of a lawyer. This can only be done by the creation of some sufficiently responsible central body, having the means of continually inspecting the condition of charities.

It is proposed, then, by the Charities Bill just introduced by the Lord Chancellor, to constitute a Board of Public Charities, to be represented by the Lord President and the Lord Chancellor in the House of Lords, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer and a Secretary of State in the House of Commons, and to have two legal members, and as secretary a barrister of not less than seven years' standing; such board to appoint two or more inspectors, being barristers of not less than seven years' standing; and to have power to frame general minutes for the regulation of their proceedings under the act, which are from time to time to be laid before Parliament. The board are to have authority to inquire into the nature, objects, property, and management of all charities in England and Wales, and to cause examinations concerning these matters to be made by their inspectors, who for this purpose are to have access to all documents, and power to take evidence on oath from all persons, except those claiming property adversely to charities.

The board, on receiving applications for that purpose, may advise trustees and others respecting charities and their management, subject to any subsequent judicial order, and persons acting on such advice are to be indemnified.

Previous notice in writing of any intended suit or other proceeding concerning a charity is to be given to the board by any person except the Attorney-General; and the board may, by their certificate, authorise such suit or proceeding, and impose conditions for the protection or benefit of the charity; but without such certificate no such suit or proceeding is to be instituted.

They are also to be empowered to direct suits to be commenced, where it may appear necessary, on the report of the inspector, without such notice having been previously given by any intended suitor.

By these means it is proposed to establish a control over the administration, and to check the ignorant or unprincipled litigations to which charities are now often subjected.

In certain questions of management the committee are to have absolute authority. Such are, authorising building and other leases not contemplated by the trusts, or in like manner sanctioning the opening and working mines and quarries, altering, rebuilding, or removing houses, and making other similar improvements in charity property. They are also to have power to sanction the compromise of claims on behalf of charities, and advantageous sales or exchanges of charity lands, and the redemption of rent-charges; and trustees following their directions in these cases are to be held harmless.

It is next proposed that this committee should, in certain specified cases, have power to frame and approve schemes modifying the objects of charitable trusts, subject to the check of the necessity of previously inserting advertisements in two successive weeks in a local newspaper, the last to be inserted a month before the committee approve the scheme, in such manner as to give the fullest opportunity to persons interested to consider the proposed new scheme, and to transmit objections to it to the secretary; and subject also to a proviso, which is of great importance, viz. that every such scheme, after being approved by the board and by the majority of the trustees, shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament three months before it is to come into effect, and shall be liable within that time to be suspended by a resolution of either House; but a special act of Parliament is made necessary to authorise any scheme which is not approved by the trustees of the particular charity.

With respect to judicial proceedings, questions of title to real or personal property, claimed adversely to charities, will be left to be decided in the present mode, as matters not proper to be submitted by summary proceedings for adjudication.

The expensiveness of Chancery proceedings, which occasions an absolute denial of justice to charities whose incomes do not exceed 30*l.* a year, has next to be dealt with. Sir James Kay Shuttleworth proposes to appoint judges in charity, who should travel on circuits, and determine locally all questions which arise, aided by the inspectors preparing the necessary evidence of the facts in certain cases. The Government scheme, however, is, to make use of existing machinery; and as to all charities above 30*l.* a year, and all charities whatever in the city of London, to give to the Master of the Rolls or one of the Vice-Chancellors sitting at chambers, without any information, bill, or petition, the same jurisdiction as the Court of Chancery and the Lord Chancellor in lunacy now have, with the power of directing matters to be heard in open court, and the other powers concerning their chamber practice conferred by the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 80. The orders to be made at chambers are not to be subject to appeal in the case of charities whose annual income does not exceed 100*l.* The judge is to have authority to direct a proceeding, by information, &c., where he may see fit.

In the case of charities under 30*l.* a year, a like jurisdiction is given to the county courts, provided that they shall not have authority to vary orders of the Court of Chancery; and where two or more county courts have a concurrent jurisdiction, the board are to direct to which of them the application is to be made. The board, moreover, may direct in any case that the application shall be made to the Court of Chancery instead of the county court. The jurisdiction of the county courts is placed, to a great extent, under the control of the board. No order of a county court for the appointment of new trustees, or approving a scheme, is to be valid if disapproved within a month after the receipt of a copy thereof by the board. Moreover, if dissatisfied with such order, the board may remit the same to the county court for reconsideration, or may direct the matter to be laid before a judge in Chancery, before or after such reconsideration. Any party aggrieved by an order of a county court must give notice in writing of his desire to appeal, to the county court, and also to the board, within a month after the order; and thereupon, if the board permit, the county court may authorise him to appeal, and the board may require him to become bound with sureties to answer costs; but the Attorney-General may appeal at any time within three months, and without notice; the appeal to lie to the Court of Chancery, and to be commenced by petition within three months after the order.

These are the principal heads of the Government measure, so far as they can be detailed in a rapid and concise summary. Due provision is made for the publicity of proposed new schemes. The special rights of religious communities are reserved; and a proposal worthy of particular notice is the appointment of the secretary to be a treasurer of charities, and the constituting him for this purpose a corporation sole, by the name of "The Treasurer of Public Charities," to have perpetual succession, and be impleaded, and to take and transmit real and personal property belonging to charities, in certain cases, as a bare trustee.

It remains only to notice, that the persons authorised to institute proceedings in respect of a charity, with the sanction of the board, are one or more of the trustees or persons administering or interested in the charity, or any two inhabitants of the parish or place within which the charity is applicable, or, of course, the Attorney-General, to whom also is reserved liberty to petition the Court of Chancery, under the 52 Geo. 3, c. 101.

We have only space now for a few remarks upon the main features of this scheme, of which the chief is the authority proposed to be given to the Board of Public Charities. The principle of the constitution of this board, who are to watch over the administration of charities, to prevent and discover abuses, and to exercise the other functions which we have mentioned, cannot fail, we think, to meet with general approbation.

A body so composed is placed at a safe height above the influence of interest or other base motives, and is further secured against aberration by the Argus-like watching of both Houses of Parliament, in either of which its representatives may at any time be called to account for its proceedings. The common objection to centralisation does not at all apply to such a board. In the first place, there is now, and has always been, a central authority empowered to take care of charity matters; and the reason for this supervision has been expressly because no local guardians of these interests exist. So that not only is the establishment of this board no novel offence against a principle of social economy, but there is not in this case any such principle to be offended. The just objection to centralisation is its tendency to occasion a paralysis of local action, and that it is therefore contrary to the spirit of those institutions which have taught the English, before all people in the world, the difficult art of governing themselves. But in the case of charities there is no local energy to be affected. They are seldom or never in the hands of municipal bodies, at the same time interested and able to insure their just and efficient administration. Charities are commonly vested in trustees, who have not the interest which communities have in the well-being of those for whom the benefit is intended, and who have no stronger checks than such as conscience may afford to prevent them from neglecting, perverting, or even embezzling the subject of their trust.

With respect to the actual constitution of the board, there will probably be a difference of opinion. Sir James Kay Shuttleworth's proposal differs in this respect from the scheme of the bill. His book contemplates that the central powers shall be vested in a Committee of the Privy Council, analogous to, and in some degree allied with, the Educational Committee, which has been found to work so efficiently, and which, in fact, follows in its organisation the earlier precedent of the Board of Trade. The Government scheme differs in associating two legal persons not privy councillors, which alters the nature of the committee at once, and, by making it not simply a section of the Privy Council, certainly deprives it of some dignity and authority, and occasions some risk that the representatives of the board in Parliament may not be the persons best informed of the proceedings of the board.

We miss also another proposal of the work on this subject, which seems to us admirably calculated to save expense in judicial proceedings under the new system. We refer to the power which the plan detailed in the book would give to judges, in certain cases, to decide on the facts reported by the charity inspectors.

Carefully guarded, by giving ample authority to the judge in such cases to require additional evidence, and to other persons to tender themselves as viva voce witnesses, this seems a mode of diminishing the expense of charity suits to which no valid objection can be made.

REGULA GENERALIS.

On the 10th February, 1853, copies of the following Rules, Orders, and Regulations were laid before the House of Lords by Lord Campbell, C. J., and before the House of Commons by Sir A. J. E. Cockburn, Attorney-General:—

RULES, ORDERS, AND REGULATIONS AS TO PLEADING, MADE BY THE JUDGES IN PURSUANCE OF THE COMMON-LAW PROCEDURE ACT.

HILARY TERM, 1853.

Whereas, pursuant to the provisions of the statute passed in the session of Parliament held in the third and fourth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William IV, intituled "An Act for the further Amendment of the Law and the better Advancement of Justice," the Judges of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster made certain rules, orders, and regulations as to the mode of pleading, and other matters in the said act mentioned, which said rules, orders, and regulations were duly laid before both Houses of Parliament, as required by that statute, and came into effect and operation respectively on the first day of Easter Term, in the year of our Lord 1834, and the first day of Michaelmas Term, in the year of our Lord 1838:

And whereas it is provided by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, that it should be lawful for the Judges of the Courts of Common Law at Westminster, or any eight or more of them, of whom the chiefs of each of the said courts should be three, from time to time to make all such general rules and orders for the effectual execution of that act, and of the intention and object thereof, and for fixing the costs to be allowed for and in respect of the matters therein contained, and the performance thereof, and for apportioning the costs of issues, and for other purposes mentioned in the said act, as in their judgment should be necessary or proper; and to exercise all the powers and authority given to them by an act of Parliament passed in the session of Parliament held in the thirteenth and fourteenth years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to enable the Judges of the Courts of Common Law at Westminster to alter the Forms of Pleading," with respect to any matter therein contained relative to practice or pleading; and the provisions of the said last-mentioned act, as to the rules, orders, or regulations made in pursuance thereof, should be held applicable to any rules, orders, or regulations which should be made in pursuance of the said Common-law Procedure Act, 1852:

And whereas, by the said act passed in the session of Parliament held in the thirteenth and fourteenth years of the reign of her present Majesty, powers were given to the Judges of the Courts of Common Law at Westminster, by rules and orders, to make alterations in the forms of pleading in the said courts, and respecting other matters in that act mentioned; and it was enacted, that all such rules, orders, or regulations should be laid before both Houses of Parliament, in manner directed by the said act; and that no such rule, order, or regulation should have effect until three months after the same should have been so laid before both Houses of Parliament; and that any rule, order, or regulation so made should from and after such time aforesaid be binding and obligatory on the said courts, and all other Courts of Common Law, and on all Courts of Error, and be of like force and effect as if the provisions contained therein had been expressly enacted by Parliament:

And whereas it is expedient, for the effectual execution of the said Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, that the said rules, orders, and regulations, respectively made in pursuance of the said statute passed in the session of Parliament held in the third and fourth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William IV, should be repealed, and that other rules, orders, and regulations should be framed in lieu thereof:

It is therefore ordered, that from and after the first day of Trinity Term next inclusive, unless Parliament shall in the meantime otherwise enact, the said rules, orders, and regulations, made respectively in pursuance of the said statute passed in the session of Parliament held in the third and fourth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William IV, shall be and are hereby repealed, excepting so far as the same or any of them are necessary or applicable to any pleadings, proceedings, or other matters to which they relate, had or taken previous to the said first day of Trinity Term next; and the following Rules, Orders, and Regulations shall be in force; that is to say—

1. Except as hereinafter provided, several counts on the same cause of action shall not be allowed, and any count or counts used in violation of this rule may, on the application of the party objecting, within a reasonable time, or before an order made for time to plead, be struck out or amended by the court or a judge, on such terms, as to costs or otherwise, as such court or judge may think fit.

2. Several pleas, replications, or subsequent pleadings, or several avowries or cognisances founded on the same ground of answer or defence, shall not be allowed: provided, that on application to the court or a judge to strike out any count, or on an objection taken before the judge on a summons to plead several matters to the allowance of several pleas, replications, or subsequent pleadings, avowries, or cognisances, on the ground of such counts or other pleadings being in violation of this rule, the court or the judge may allow such counts on the same cause of action, or such pleas, replications, or subsequent pleadings, or such avowries or cognisances founded on the same ground of answer or defence, as may appear to such court or judge to be proper for the determining the real question in controversy between the parties on its merits, subject to such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as the court or judge may think fit.

3. When no such rule or order has been made as to costs by the court or judge, and on the trial there is more than one count, plea, replication, or subsequent pleading, avowry, or cognisance on the record, founded on the same cause of action or ground of answer or defence, and the judge or presiding officer before whom the cause is tried shall at the trial certify to that effect on the record, the party so pleading shall be liable to the opposite party for all costs occasioned by such count, plea, or other pleading in respect of which he has failed to establish a distinct cause of action or distinct ground of answer or defence, including those of the evidence as well as those of the pleading.

4. The name of a county shall in all cases be stated in the margin of a declaration, and shall be taken to be the venue intended by the plaintiff, and no venue shall be stated in the body of the declaration, or in any subsequent pleading.

Provided, that in cases where local description is now required, such local description shall be given.

5. In all actions by and against assignees of a bankrupt or insolvent, or executors or administrators, or persons authorised by act of Parliament to sue or be sued as nominal parties, the character in which the plaintiff or defendant is stated on the record to sue or be sued shall not in any case be considered as in issue, unless specially denied.

6. In all actions on simple contract, except as hereinafter excepted, the plea of non assumpsit, or a plea traversing the contract or agreement alleged in the declaration, shall operate only as a denial in fact of the express contract, promise, or agreement alleged, or of the matters of fact from which the contract, promise, or agreement alleged may be implied by law.

Exempli gratia. In an action on a warranty, such pleas will operate as a denial of the fact of the sale and warranty having been given, but not of the breach; and, in an action on a policy of insurance, of the subscription to the alleged policy by the defendant, but not of the interest, of the commencement of the risk, of the loss, or of the alleged compliance with warranties.

In actions against carriers and other bailees for not delivering or not keeping goods safe, or not returning them on request, and in actions against agents for not accounting, such pleas will operate as a denial of any express or implied contract to the effect alleged in the declaration, but not of the breach.

To causes of action to which the plea of "never was indebted" is applicable, as provided in Schedule B. (36) of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, and to those of a like nature, the plea of non assumpsit shall be inadmissible, and the plea of "never was indebted" will operate as a denial of those matters of fact from which the liability of the defendant arises: exempli gratia, in actions for goods bargained and sold, or sold and delivered, the plea will operate as a denial of the bargain and sale, or sale and delivery, in point of fact; in the like action for money had and received it will operate as a denial both of the receipt of money and the existence of those facts which make such receipt by the defendant a receipt to the use of the plaintiff.

7. In all actions upon bills of exchange and promissory notes, the plea of "non assumpsit" and "never indebted" shall be inadmissible. In such actions, therefore, a plea in denial must traverse some matter of fact: exempli gratia, the drawing, or making, or indorsing, or accepting, or presenting, or notice of dishonour of the bill or note.

8. In every species of actions on contract all matters in confession and avoidance, including not only those by way of discharge, but those which shew the transaction to be either void or voidable in point of law, on the ground of fraud or otherwise, shall be specially pleaded: exempli gratia, infancy, coverture, release, payment, performance, illegality of consideration, either by statute or common law, drawing, indorsing, accepting, &c. bills or notes by way of accommodation, set-off, mutual credit, unseaworthiness, misrepresentation, concealment, deviation, and various other defences, must be pleaded.

9. In actions on policies of assurance the interest of the assured may be averred thus:—"That A., B., C., and D., [or some or one of them], were or was interested" &c. And it may also be averred, "that the insurance was made for the use and benefit and on the account of the person or persons so interested."

10. In actions on specialties and covenants, the plea of non est factum shall operate as a denial of the execution of the deed in point of fact only, and all other defences shall be specially pleaded, including matters which make the deed absolutely void, as well as those which make it voidable.

11. The plea of "nil debet" shall not be allowed in any action.

12. All matters in confession and avoidance shall be pleaded specially, as above directed in actions on simple contracts.

13. In any case in which the plaintiff (in order to avoid the expense of the plea of payment or set-off) shall have given credit in the particulars of his demand for any sum or sums of money therein admitted to have been paid to the plaintiff, or which the plaintiff admits the defendant is entitled to set off, it shall not be necessary for the defendant to plead the payment or set-off of such sum or sums of money.

But this rule is not to apply to cases where the plaintiff, after stating the amount of his demand, states that he seeks to recover a certain balance, without giving credit for any particular sum or sums, or to cases of set-off where the plaintiff does not state the particulars of such set-off.

14. Payment shall not in any case be allowed to be given in evidence in reduction of damages or debt, but shall be pleaded in bar.

15. In actions for detaining goods, the plea of non detinet shall operate as a denial of the detention of the goods by the defendant, but not of the plaintiff's property therein; and no other defence than such denial shall be admissible under that plea.

16. In actions for torts, the plea of not guilty shall operate as a denial only of the breach of duty or wrongful act alleged to have been committed by the defendant, and not of the facts stated in the inducement, and no other defence than such denial shall be admissible under that plea; all other pleas in denial shall take issue on some particular matter of fact alleged in the declaration.

Exempli gratia. In an action for a nuisance to the occupation of a house carrying on an offensive trade, the plea of not guilty will operate as a denial only that the defendant carried on the alleged trade in such a way as to be a nuisance to the occupation of the house, and will not operate as a denial to the plaintiff's occupation of the house.

In an action for obstructing a right of way, such plea will operate as a denial of the obstruction only, and not of the plaintiff's right of way.

In an action for slander of the plaintiff in his office, profession, or trade, the plea of not guilty will operate in denial of speaking the words, of speaking them maliciously, and in the defamatory sense imputed, and with reference to the plaintiff's office, profession, or trade, but it will not operate as a denial of the fact of the plaintiff holding the office or being of the profession or trade alleged.

In actions for an escape, it will operate as a denial of the neglect or default of the sheriff or his officers, but not of the debt, judgment, or preliminary proceedings.

In actions against a carrier, the plea of not guilty will operate as a denial of the loss or damage, but not of the receipt of the goods by the defendant as a carrier for hire, or of the purpose for which they were received.

17. All matters in confession and avoidance shall be pleaded specially, as in actions on contract.

18. In actions for trespass to land, the close or place in which &c. must be designated in the declaration by name or abutments or other description, in failure whereof the plaintiff may be ordered to amend, with costs, or give such particulars as the court or judge may think reasonable.

19. In actions for trespass to land, the plea of not guilty shall operate as a denial that the defendant committed the trespass alleged in the place mentioned, but not as a denial of the plaintiff's possession or right of possession of that place, which, if intended to be denied, must be traversed specially.

20. In actions for taking, damaging, or converting the plaintiff's goods, the plea of not guilty shall operate as a denial of the defendant having committed the wrong alleged, by taking, damaging, or converting the goods mentioned, but not of the plaintiff's property therein.

21. In every case in which a defendant shall plead the general issue, intending to give the special matter in evidence, by virtue of an act of Parliament, he shall insert in the margin of the plea the words "by statute," together with the year or years of the reign in which the act or acts of Parliament upon which he relies for that purpose were passed, and also the chapter and section of each of such acts, and shall specify whether such acts are public or otherwise; otherwise such plea shall be taken not to have been pleaded by virtue of any act of Parliament; and such memorandum shall be inserted in the margin of the issue, and of the nisi prius record.

22. A plea containing a defence arising after the commencement of the action may be pleaded together with pleas of defences arising before the commencement of the action, provided that the plaintiff may confess such plea, and thereupon shall be entitled to the costs of the cause up to the time of the pleading of such first-mentioned plea.

23. When a plea is pleaded with an allegation that the matter of defence arose after the last pleading, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to confess such plea, and shall be entitled to the costs of the cause up to the time of pleading such plea: provided that this and the preceding rule shall not apply to the case of such plea pleaded by one or more only out of several defendants.

24. Courts of error may award a repleader, or direct a trial de novo.

25. The costs of proceeding in error shall be taxed and allowed as costs in the cause, and no double costs in error shall be allowed to either party.

26. On error from one of the superior courts such court shall have power to allow interest for such time as execution has been delayed by the proceedings in error, for the delaying thereof; and the Master, on taxing the costs, may compute such interest without any rule of court or order of a judge for that purpose.

27. In no case shall error be brought for any error in a judgment with respect to costs, but the error (if any) in that respect may be amended by the court in which such judgment may have been given, on the application of either party.

28. A person admitted to sue in forma pauperis shall not in any case be entitled to costs from the opposite party, unless by order of the court or a judge.

29. If a plaintiff in ejectment be nonsuited at the trial, the defendant shall be entitled to judgment for his costs of suit.

30. If the plaintiff in ejectment appear at the trial, and the defendant does not appear, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a verdict without producing any evidence, and shall have judgment for his costs of suit, as in other cases.

31. No entry or continuances, by way of imparlance, curia advisari vult, vicecomes non misit breve, or otherwise, shall be made upon any record or roll whatever, or in the pleadings.

32. All judgments, whether interlocutory or final, shall be entered of record of the day of the month and year, whether in term or vacation, when signed, and shall not have relation to any other day: provided that it shall be competent for the court or a judge to order a judgment to be entered nunc pro tunc.

Forms for submitting Proposals for Sale may be obtained at the Office of the Company, and every facility will be rendered to insure the speedy completion of contracts.

G. A. RENDALL, Secretary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l., and its Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 151,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24l. to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

99, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

The usual Commission allowed to Solicitors and Agents.

LAW BOOKS AND OFFICE FURNITURE.

Mr. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Room, 19, Fleet-street, on FRIDAY, May 20, at half-past 12,

VALUABLE LAW BOOKS, the Library of a Barrister retiring from the Profession, among which are—Runnington's Statutes at Large, from Magna Charta to 15 & 16 Vict., 37 vols.; Byrwood's Conveyancing, by Jarman, with Sweet's Index, 11 vols.; Jarman on Wills, 2 vols.; Comyn's Digest, by Hammond, 8 vols.; a collection of Modern Treatises and Books of Practice, and a complete Series of the Modern Reports in the Courts of Queen's Bench, Chancery, Common Pleas, Nisi Prius, and House of Lords, all in excellent condition; a Spanish Mahogany Bookcase, Library Table, Desks, &c.

To be viewed, and catalogues had.

* * Orders for THE JURIST given to any Newsmen, or letter (post-paid) sent to the Office, No. 3, CHANCERY-LANE, or to STEVENS & NORTON, 26 and 39, BELL-YARD, LINCOLN'S-INN, will insure its punctual delivery in London, or its being forwarded on the evening of publication, through the medium of the Post Office, to the Country.

LONDON, MAY 21, 1853.

THE New Pleading Rules (published in our last number) come into force on Monday next; and we therefore propose to consider their effect, and the changes made by them in this "honourable, laudable, and (once) profitable branch of our law."

First, the famous Rules made in pursuance of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, are repealed, except so far as they may be "necessary or applicable to any pleadings, &c. had or taken previous to the first day of Trinity Term."

We will consider these Rules of Hilary Term, 1853, seriatim, marking by italics the principal alterations introduced by them.

Rules 1, 2, and 3 relate to several counts and pleas, which are still prohibited if they are framed on the same cause of action or ground of defence, unless the court or a judge allows them as being proper for the determining the real question in controversy between the parties on its merits. This renders the allowance of several counts and pleas correlative, as it should be, with the existing powers of amendment, which, under sect. 222 of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, extend so far "as may be necessary for the purpose of determining in the existing suit the real question in controversy between the parties." Pleadings must be more careful than ever in their use of counts and pleas, for a power is given to "the judge or presiding officer" at the trial to certify that one of several counts or pleas is founded on the same cause of action or ground of defence, whereupon the party who pleaded it shall be liable to the other party for all costs occasioned thereby, including those of the evidence as well as those of the pleading. From the wording of this Rule, (Rule 3), it may be doubtful whether the power is to be exercised unless the parties have first been before the court or a judge upon the subject, and no rule or order has been made as to costs, or whether it is to be exercised independently of any such application. Formerly no time was fixed by statute or rule of court for applying to strike out counts, but now it is to be "within a reasonable time, or before an order made for time to plead." The objection to pleas is to be made, under the Common-law Procedure Act, (sect. 83), at the time of hearing the summons for leave to plead several matters. A discretion is very properly vested in the court or judge as to costs in striking out counts or pleas, instead of making it, as heretofore, incumbent on them to award costs against the party who had used the superfluous count or plea.

Rules 4 and 5 are mere repetitions of the former Rules as to the venue being stated only in the margin, except where local description is necessary, and as to the representative character of assignees of bankrupts and insolvents, and executors and administrators, &c., not being in issue, unless specially denied.

Rule 6 states the operation of non assumpsit, or a plea traversing the contract or agreement alleged in the declaration. This is substantially the same as before, and we think it necessary to call the attention of our readers only to the part which declares, that "to causes of action to which the plea of 'never was indebted' is applicable, as provided in Schedule (B.), No. 36, of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, and to those of a like nature, the plea of non assumpsit shall be inadmissible." The causes of action here referred to are the declarations numbered 1 to 14 in the forms referred to, and which are the common and general counts in actions of contract.

The pleas of non assumpsit and never indebted are inadmissible in actions on bills of exchange and promissory notes, and in such actions a plea in denial must traverse some matter of fact. (Rule 7).

All matters in confession and avoidance must be pleaded specially. (Rules 8, 12, 17).

In actions on policies of assurance, the interest of the assured may be averred as before. (Rule 9).

The plea of non est factum is to operate as before. (Rule 10).

"The plea of nil debet shall not be allowed in any action." (Rule 11). These are precisely the same words as those which were used in Rule 3 of Reg. Gen., H. T., 4 Will. 4, but they were decided not to have the effect of doing away with the plea of nil debet in penal actions, under the 21 Jac. 1, c. 4. (Jones v. Williams, 4 M. & W. 375). When pleadable, it puts all the facts in issue.

A plea of set-off, as well as of payment, may now be avoided, by giving credit for matters of set-off; but the Rule is not to apply where the plaintiff states that he seeks to recover a balance, without stating the particulars of the set-off. (Rule 13; and see Rule, T., 1 Vict.)

Payment shall not in any case be allowed to be given in evidence in reduction of damages or debt, but shall be pleaded in bar. (Rule 14). This is a repetition of part of Rule, T., 1 Vict. The rule, however, does not prevent a defendant who has pleaded payment, but has proved only a part of it, from having the benefit of the part proved, in reduction of damages. (Lord v. Ferriand, 1 Dowl. & L. 630).

The pleas of not guilty and of non detinet will have the same operation as before. (Rules 15, 16, 19, 20).

When the general issue "by statute" is pleaded, the defendant must now insert on the margin not only the words "by statute," but also the year of the reign in which the act passed, and also the chapter and section and a statement that the act is public or otherwise, (as the case may be). (Rule 21). Formerly, upon an affidavit that the plaintiff could not discover the statute under which the defendant meant to justify, the Court would order the statute to be specified. (Coy v. Lord Forester, 8 M. & W. 312).

A plea, containing a defence arising after the commencement of the action, may be pleaded, together with pleas of defences arising before the commencement of the action, provided that the plaintiff may confess such plea, and thereupon shall be entitled to the costs of the cause up to the time of the pleading of such first-mentioned plea. (Rule 22).

Upon a plea of puis darrein continuance, the plaintiff could always have discontinued without paying or receiving costs. (Wollen v. Smith, 9 Ad. & El. 505; see Thompson v. Jackson, 1 Man. & G. 242).

When a plea is pleaded, with an allegation that the matter of defence arose after the last pleading, the plaintiff shall be at liberty to confess such plea, and shall be entitled to the costs of the cause up to the time of pleading such plea; provided that this and the preceding Rule (Rule 22, as to defences arising after the commencement of the action) shall not apply to the case of such plea pleaded by one or more only out of several defendants. (Rule 23).

Courts of error may award a repleader or direct a trial de novo. (Rule 24). By sect. 157 of the Common-law Procedure Act, Courts of error have power to give such judgment and award such process as the Court below ought to have done. Previously to this enactment, it was decided that a Court of error could not award a repleader, (Gwynne v. Burnell, 7 Cl. & Fin. 572), although it might grant a venire de novo. (Grant v. Astle, 2 Dougl. 722).

The costs of proceedings in error shall be taxed and allowed as costs in the cause; (Rule 25, which is the same as Rule 69 of the New Practice Rules, Hilary Term, 1853); and no double costs in error shall be allowed to either party. (Rule 25). This latter part of the Rule refers to stat. 13 Car. 2, st. 2, c. 2, s. 10, whereby, if a judgment given for the plaintiff after verdict were affirmed in error, the defendant in error was to have double costs.

Interest may be allowed for the delaying of execution by reason of error having been brought; and the Master, on taxing the costs, may compute the interest, without any rule of court or judge's order. (Rule 26). By the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, s. 30, it is incumbent on Courts of error to allow such interest, but it was doubtful whether a rule of court was not necessary for the purpose. (See 1 Chit. Arch. Prac. 509, note (c)). The statute is imperative—the rule of court permissive; but the former is still in force. Under the statute the interest will be calculated at 4l. per cent.; (Loy v. Langridge, 4 M. & W. 337); and by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 17, every judgment debt carries interest at that rate.

Error is not to be brought for any error in a judgment with respect to costs, but such error may be amended. (Rule 27).

A person admitted to sue in forma pauperis shall not in any case be entitled to costs from the opposite party, unless by order of the court or a judge. (Rule 28).

By Rule 21 of the New Practice Rules, Hilary Term, 1853, no fees shall be payable by a pauper to his counsel and attorney, nor at the offices of the Masters or Associates, or at the judges' chambers or elsewhere, by reason of a verdict being found for such pauper exceeding 5l.*

If the plaintiff in ejectment be nonsuited, the defendant shall have judgment for his costs; and if the plaintiff in ejectment appears, but the defendant does not, the plaintiff shall have a verdict, and judgment for his costs, as in other cases. (Rules 29, 30).

The first part of this Rule supplies a deficiency in sect. 183 of the Common-law Procedure Act; and the latter is a repetition of Rule 114 of the New Practice Rules, Hilary Term, 1853.

No entry of continuances is to be made; (Rule 31); and judgments are to be entered of the day and year when signed, unless ordered to be entered nunc pro tunc. (Rule 32).

Several of the former Rules, which have been embodied in the Common-law Procedure Act, are omitted from these Rules. See, for instance, those relating to pleas puis darrein continuance, (Reg. Gen., H. T., 4 Will. 4, r. 2), now provided for by sect. 69 of that statute.

REGULA GENERALIS.

ORDER OF COURT.—May 10, 1853.

The Right Honourable ROBERT MONSEY Lord CRANWORTH, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say—

That in every case in which any person is entitled to, or in any manner interested in, any Old South Sea Annuities, New South Sea Annuities, Bank Annuities, 1728, or 3*l*. per Cent. Annuities, 1751, standing in the name of the Accountant-General of this Court, in trust in any cause or matter, whether such person is so entitled beneficially, or only as executor, administrator, trustee, guardian, committee, or otherwise, such person may apply to the Master of the Rolls, or to any of the Vice-Chancellors in chambers, by summons, in the cause or matter in trust in which such Annuities may be standing, praying that the said Accountant-General may be authorised and directed to receive the capital sums which will, under the provisions of an act passed in the present session of Parliament, intituled "An Act for redeeming or commuting the Annuity payable to the South Sea Company, and certain Annuities of 3*l*. per Cent. per Annum, and for creating New Annuities of 3*l*. 10*s*. per Cent. per Annum and 2*l*. 10*s*. per Cent. per Annum, and issuing Exchequer Bonds," on the 5th January, 1854, and the 5th April, 1854, respectively become payable in respect of such Annuities; or that the said Accountant-General may be directed to signify, on or before the 3rd day of June next, to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or to the South Sea Company, as the case may be, on behalf of all persons interested in such Annuities, his assent to accept and receive, in lieu of such Old South Sea Annuities, New South Sea Annuities, Bank Annuities, 1728, or 3*l*. per Cent. Annuities, 1751, respectively, a competent portion of New 3*l*. 10*s*. Annuities or Exchequer Bonds, according to the provisions of the said act; and the Master of the Rolls or Vice-Chancellors, as the case may be, may, on any such application, and on the attendance of such parties, if any, and on such evidence, if any, as he may think fit and require, authorise and direct the said Accountant-General to receive such capital sums, or to signify such assent, as the case may be, in case the said Master of the Rolls or Vice-Chancellors shall be satisfied that such authority and direction may be given with a due regard to the rights of all persons interested in the said funds.

And it is hereby further ordered, that the Accountant-General, in all cases in which no notice shall, on or before the 31st day of May, 1853, have been given to him of an order made by the Master of Rolls, or one of the Vice-Chancellors, authorising and directing him to receive such capital sums, or to signify such assent as aforesaid, as to any portion of the said Annuities so standing in his name, shall, on or before the 3rd day of June next, signify to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or to the South Sea Company, as the case may be, his assent to accept and receive, in lieu of the Old South Sea Annuities, New South Sea Annuities, Bank Annuities, 1728, and 3*l*. per Cent. Annuities, 1751, standing in his name, or of such part thereof as to which no such notice as aforesaid shall have been given to him, a competent sum of 2*l*. 10*s*. per Cent. Annuities, according to the provisions of the said act. And the Accountant-General shall in such case carry such 2*l*. 10*s*. per Cent. Annuities to the credit of the same causes or matters respectively in respect whereof such assent shall so have been signified by him as aforesaid, and the same shall be held upon the same trusts and shall be subject to the same orders as the Annuities in respect of which the same shall be so received.

(Signed) CRANWORTH, C.

The following Rule (accidentally omitted until now) was read in court on the 16th April:—

REGULA GENERALIS.

It is ordered that there be laid before this Court, on the first Crown Paper day in every term, a list of the several cases in which recognisances have been filed to prosecute writs of error in misdemeanour returnable in this court, together with the names of the several cases in which default hath been made in prosecuting such writs of error, according to the course and practice of this Court.

SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Cardale, Hiffe, and Russell, Bedford-row.
 Established in the year 1837, for the Purchase of Reversionary Interests, either absolute or contingent, and whether secured upon real or personal estate, life interests or annuities, and policies of assurance on lives.

Forms for submitting Proposals for Sale may be obtained at the Office of the Company, and every facility will be rendered to insure the speedy completion of contracts.

G. A. RENDALL, Secretary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1834.
 Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.
ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l., and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 2½ to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profit in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profit over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

LONDON, MAY 28, 1853.

THERE are some points in the Charitable Trusts Bill (of which we gave an analysis in THE JURIST of the 14th inst.) which appear to us objectionable; in particular we allude to the 32nd section, by which jurisdiction is given to county courts over charities whose incomes do not exceed 20*l.* a year. If the Court of Chancery retained now its antique cumbrousness; if, as of yore, accounts could not be taken, except through a decree referring it to the Master, &c.; if a trustee could not be appointed or dismissed without a petition, an inquiry before the Master, a Master's report, and a confirmatory order; if all these things still were, it might be well to call in aid the jurisdiction of county courts when the income of a charity is such that the smallest assistance of the High Court of Chancery would have swallowed up two or three years' income. But as the whole course of modern legislation has been addressed, and successfully addressed, to the removal of these cumbrous qualities from the Court of Chancery, it seems singular, and mischievous, now to deprive the smaller charities of the advantage of being regulated by the judges of the superior courts, when that regulation may be obtained as cheaply and as readily as it can in the county courts.

It is sufficiently obvious, that, except with the smallest and simplest matters in relation to charities, the county courts are not adapted to deal with—that is, they are not well adapted to adjudicate upon—any questions involving difficult points of equity, or, as sometimes happens in charity cases, of conveyancing; first, because those courts have no equitable machinery, and are not at all accustomed to equity business; secondly, because from their very nature, and from the fact of the majority of them being provincial, the agents habitually practising in them are not familiar with equity business, and the assistance of equity or conveyancing counsel will be almost inaccessible.

So that, as we have said, for any contentious business the county courts will not be well fitted; and for business of course, such as the appointment of new trustees, when there is no great contest, the variation of an old or the adoption of a new scheme in simple cases, or the like, a proceeding by summons before a judge in chambers would be as cheap and as expeditious, and we apprehend more satisfactory.

Indeed, so little does the Legislature seem itself to confide in the county courts, that, by the 35th section, it will not even allow them finally to appoint new trustees, or to settle a scheme without the confirmation of the board; so that the only thing that could be of material advantage in sending local charities to the county courts—viz. avoiding the expense of sending papers to London, and employing London agents—will not be avoided.

The great objection, however, to giving to the county courts jurisdiction under this act is not so much that in the particular cases it seems to offer no advantages, as that the giving to the county courts any portion of the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery is mischievous to the principle of recent legislation, and tends to check the improvement of the Court of Chancery. That improvement is essentially based on the notion of simplifying proceedings so as to adapt the Court to dispose of all business matters with the least possible amount of form and delay; that is, with only just so much of form as is necessary to preserve regularity.

The idea that the Court of Chancery is intended only for great disputes about vast amounts has been blown away. The attempt has been made, and, as we have said, to a great extent successfully made, to alter the machinery, so that its principles may be applied to the disputes of small as well as of large proprietors; but if the smaller subjects of equity jurisdiction are removed, little by little, from the Court of Chancery to county courts, the anxiety to improve the Court of Chancery will lose its stimulus, and that Court will probably retrograde, instead of advancing in usefulness. We do therefore deprecate this commencement of giving an equity jurisdiction to the county courts.

It is true that we have often in the pages of THE JURIST advocated giving an equity jurisdiction to county courts; but that was at a time when the Court of Chancery was not improved, and when it seemed hopeless that it would ever be improved. We advocated giving an equitable remedy, in cases where then it was practically unattainable. We urged the employment of smaller equity machines when the principal machine was so cumbrous that for certain work it was useless; but when the principal machine has been improved and polished, for the express purpose of making it take light as well as heavy work, it does not seem very wise to begin taking the light work away from it.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—My attention has only recently been called to a remark which you have appended to a letter of mine in THE JURIST of the 7th inst., in which you say that the propositions in my pamphlet, "Shall we Simplify our Titles?" are mere sketches of some of the main features of Mr. Wilson's plan, part of which is, that the absolute dominion over the fee shall devolve on the executor or administrator. As the charge of plagiarism is a serious one, and as my plan is attracting considerable attention, I am sure you will feel bound to acknowledge that you have misunderstood it, and that, whatever may be its merits or demerits, it differs altogether from Mr. Wilson's.

That gentleman proposes that estates shall be held under certificates granted by Government officials, which will shew that such and such lands are held in fee by A., and when he mortgages to B., the old certificate is to be surrendered, and two new ones granted—one to B., shewing that he is entitled to a mortgage on the lands; and another to C., shewing that, subject to the mortgage, he holds on fee.

This principle is, of course, as readily adapted to sales, leases, &c., as to mortgages; but to meet an obvious difficulty with respect to wills, Mr. Wilson, as you state, proposes that lands shall pass absolutely to executors or administrators, in which suggestion there is no novelty whatever.

My principle is totally different, and is founded on my having observed the simplicity given to titles to leasehold estates and to attendant terms of years by the rule of law which vests such properties, for the purpose of sale or transfer, in executors or administrators virtute officii, so that every one knows what powers they have, without looking into the will further than to ascertain their names. Hence, I propose that in all transfers of property, whether by deed or will, the parties shall name a person or persons to whom alone future purchasers shall look for a title; and in case no such person shall be named, I authorise the registrar to determine, by arrangement with the parties, in whom this power of transfer shall be vested, on similar principles to those which regulate the appointment of administrators by the Ecclesiastical Court. Surely you must in candour admit that these two plans are essentially different.

I am, Sir,
Yours very obediently,
A CONVEYANCING BARRISTER.

May 24, 1853.

In order that such of our readers as may not have met with this pamphlet may fully understand the "Conveyancing Barrister's" plan, we insert the following extract:—

"I will call attention to a principle which has from time immemorial been in operation respecting lands held under leases for terms of years, and which has been found greatly to simplify and cheapen titles thereto. Though every one knows what an enormous amount of property is now held on this tenure, few but professional persons may be aware how limited is the power of a testator over it, and that the very same clauses in his will which tie up his freehold lands so securely as to insure their remaining long in his family, are absolutely ineffectual to prevent his executors or administrators from selling his leasehold estate, if they think fit to do so: for the law vests it absolutely in them, on the assumption that it may be required for payment of debts; but no purchaser is obliged to ascertain whether any debts exist; and even though it may be notorious that none are due, still a sale is good. A power can scarcely be more absolute than this; and it is worthy of remark, that where the person named as executor refuses to act, or where no executor is named in the will, the law gives the same authority to an administrator, appointed, not by the testator, but by the Ecclesiastical Court. The obvious consequence is, that in selling leaseholds for years which have passed under a will, it is not necessary to do more than shew who was the executor or administrator; whereas, in the case of a devise of freehold property, every clause relative thereto must be abstracted and examined into, at great cost both to vendor and purchaser, and to the serious risk of the latter in case mistakes should be made. So far, therefore, the principle has worked well; and extensive as have been the recent changes in the law regarding wills, no one has wished to alter it in this respect. Why, then, should not the same principle be carried still further, and extended to all wills transferring landed property; and if applicable to all such wills, why not to all such deeds? The essence of the following suggestions will be found to lie in the very simple proposition, that as probate of a will is now granted only to administrators approved of by the ecclesiastical authorities, or to executors appointed by the testator, which administrators or executors immediately acquire, virtute officii, great powers over leasehold and other personal property, even though the same may be specifically bequeathed to other parties; so registration of instruments transferring land shall only be granted to persons appointed on similar principles, and in whom similar but much more limited powers shall at once be vested.

"In order, therefore, to shew how this principle can be carried into practical effect, I venture to suggest, that, subject to certain provisions hereafter explained, and intended for the protection of persons now entitled to partial interests in land, the law shall be altered to the following effect:—

"1. Let the registrar your Lordship proposes to appoint recognise no other interests in land than immediate estates in fee simple or for years.

"2. Let power be given to persons, executing transfers of landed property by deed or will, to nominate the parties who are to be registered as transferees, and let the estate vest in such parties by force of this nomination alone, for the limited purposes of registration and facility of future transfer, in the same way as leaseholds for years now vest in him who is nominated executor of a will, even though they may be thereby specifically bequeathed to a totally different person.

"3. When deeds or wills contain no such nomination as above suggested, and also in cases of intestacy, let the registrar have a power similar to that now exercised by the ecclesiastical authorities with respect to wills in which no executor is named, and let him determine who is best entitled to be registered as transferee.

"4. Let a transfer by the person registered as transferee of an instrument be conclusive, except in cases of fraud, against all persons claiming under such instrument, just as a sale of leasehold property by the executors is conclusive against all persons claiming under the will.

"5. When the name of the person who is to be registered as transferee has been ascertained, let it be obligatory on the registrar to enrol a memorial of every transfer which may be presented to him; and let the mere fact of such registration be conclusive evidence, in favour of future purchasers and mortgagees, that the other parties who executed any such transfer passed the whole interest in the land which they had power to convey to the registered transferee, unless the document itself shall only purport to create a lease or sublease for years.

"6. Let it be competent for any person, claiming an interest in the property comprised in any registered deed or will, to enter on the register a caveat referring to such instrument, and having an effect similar to that of a distringas upon stock, in restraining the registered transferee from alienating the land without due notice being given to the person entering such caveat."

We confess we are still so dull as not to see the difference in principle between this plan and Mr. Wilson's. Each proceeds on the notion of creating a nominal owner, in whom the legal title is to vest, and whose transfer is to be conclusive; leaving the equities to the purchase money to be settled without the purchaser having to look into them. The machinery is different, but the principle is in both cases drawn from the same sources.

REGISTRY OF COUNTY COURTS' JUDGMENTS.

In pursuance of the act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, relating to proceedings in the county courts, the Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury (with the view of affording to traders a ready means of ascertaining the solvency of parties, and to enable executors and administrators to discover what judgment debts they are bound to satisfy) have established an office at No. 1, Parliament-street, Westminster, wherein the name, address, and occupation of every party against whom a judgment has been recorded since March, 1847, in any of the county courts throughout England and Wales, for 10l. and upwards, and which remains unsatisfied, has been registered; and wherein also the name, &c. of every party against whom a judgment may hereafter be obtained in the said courts will be immediately registered.

The following Fees are directed to be taken:—

	s.	d.
For each search personally made .....	1	0
For each search obtained by letter addressed to the registrar, (postage stamps may be inclosed), or through the clerk of any county court who will correspond with the office in London .....	2	0
For having the record of any judgment removed from the register, to be paid to the clerk of the court in which the judgment is satisfied .....	1	6

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future Insurers FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, with QUINQUENNIAL DIVISION, or a LOW RATE of PREMIUM without participation of Profits.

The next Division of Profits will be declared in June, 1855, when all Participating Policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1854, will be allowed to share in the Profits.

At the several past Divisions of Profits made by this Company, the Reversionary Bonuses added to the Policies from ONE-HALF the Profits amounted, on an average of the different ages, to about One per Cent. per Annum on the sums insured, and the total Bonuses added at the four Septennial Divisions exceeded 770,000l.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The Extra Premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their Lives at the Tabular Premiums, may have their Lives Insured at extra Premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such Policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under 50l.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written Notices of, received and registered.

HOCK.—THE CABINET CASTLE JOHANNIS

BERGER of H. H. Prince METTERNICH, the most renowned of the Rheingau Wines, authenticated by seal, brand, and label, signed in autograph, can be obtained of Mr. C. ELLIS, Wine Merchant, Richmond, Surrey, and 159, Fenchurch-street, London, the only agent for this country.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l., and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January 1852, the sum of 131,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24j to 55 per cent. on the Premium paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profit on their later assurances.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increase of risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

LONDON, JUNE 4, 1853.

WHETHER general codification of the law of England, on the same principle as the Code Napoleon, would be a practicable, and if a practicable, a beneficial thing, we are not now going to inquire; but that there are some portions of the law as to which it would undoubtedly be both practicable and useful to codify, in the more limited sense of considering the mass of authorities, some more or less conflicting, and extracting from them one or more positive rules; doing, in fact, once and for all, what the judges are obliged to do from time to time, when a case of difficulty comes before them.

Speaking more particularly of the law of property, with which we are most familiar, though we believe our remarks are equally applicable to the common law, there are some portions of it, the uncertainty of which is perfectly disgraceful to an age pretending to call itself civilised.

Take, for instance, the doctrines of vesting or not vesting of estates in remainder; of the execution or non-execution of powers; of the liability of parties, claiming benefits under instruments, to elect between those benefits and their legal rights. These are a few out of numerous subjects in which counsel are every day, and judges every week at least, perplexed; because, from the multitude of decisions, it is difficult to extract any rule sufficiently positive, and sufficiently authoritative, to say they will be governed by it.

In addition to the evil of the uncertainty, there is the opposite evil of certainty in the existence of many distinctions positively absurd; founded on no principle, yet so settled by decision, that the judges are reluctantly compelled to continue to administer injustice upon their authority.

On the doctrine of election, we believe we shall not err in saying that there are some thirty cases which may be termed leading cases—cases, at least, which, in every such question not falling directly within the authority of any particular case, have to be cited and commented upon, to endeavour to extract from them some rule under which the new case can be brought. It is true, that with reference to that doctrine some general principles are established, but they are of comparatively little use, because of the absence of any positive rules for, or examples of, their application. For instance, it is no doubt a general rule that a party cannot take under and against an instrument; that with regard to putting a widow to her election, you must see upon the will a clear intention to exclude her from dower—not merely the absence of intention that she shall have her dower; and the like; or, to quote the propositions in the form in which they are laid down in a recent case, (Gibson v. Gibson, 1 Drew. 42), "a person who is entitled to any benefit under a will or other instrument must, if he claims that benefit, abandon every right or interest, the assertion of which would defeat, even partially, any of the provisions of that will or instrument." And applying this to the doctrine of dower, "if the testator has by his will made such a disposition of the real estate of which he was seised, that the assertion by the widow of her right to dower would prevent that disposition having full effect, as the testator intended, then she must elect either to abandon her dower or the benefit given to her by the will." Next, "that in no case is a person to be put to his election, unless it is clear that the provisions of the instrument under which he is entitled to a benefit would be in some degree defeated by the assertion of his other right;" and therefore that in the particular case of dower "it is not enough to say that the testator did not intend that his widow should have her dower," but the Court must be satisfied "that there is a positive intention to exclude her from dower, either expressed or clearly implied." But when you come to apply these principles, they are too frequently but blind guides, because of the practical questions—What is taking against the particular instrument? What is the expression of a clear intention of exclusion, as distinguished from the absence of intention of inclusion? For a long time, for instance, in the law of election, as applied to dower, it was in doubt whether, if lands were devised to trustees with a power to sell, that would not exclude the widow, on the ground, that as she is entitled to have her dower set out by metes and bounds, the exercise of that right would be inconsistent with the execution of the trust for sale. That has been at length got over thus far, but no farther, that a mere trust for, or power of sale, will not exclude a widow. But then it is absurdly enough settled, by way of distinction, that generally a power to lease will exclude the widow. But there still remains this difficulty, that neither rule is of very certain application, because as they are only rules drawn from and founded upon the mass of conflicting cases, by way of inference, and possess no internal, or, if one may use the term, no imperial authority, you have but to shew some distinction in the particular case, which would, or might, if called to the attention of the judges who decided the former cases, have justified some modification of their decisions; and, lo! the rule vanishes, and the judge is thrown back upon a minute consideration of the whole bundle of authorities.

Again: take the doctrine of the execution of powers. At this day the time of a court of justice may be occupied for days, because there is no positive rule or maxim of conclusive authority on these points—whether a general power to appoint, which may be exercised in several ways, is one power or several powers; and whether, if there is such a general power to appoint with or without power of revocation, and the donee appoints and reserves a power of revocation only, and then revokes and makes a new appointment,—whether the new appointment is strictly a new appointment—that is, by virtue of a power newly arising—or whether it is by virtue of the revival of the old power; and whether it makes any difference if the donee, in appointing at first, reserves to himself a power of new appointment as well as a power of revocation. Now, we do not say that on such a point as whether a general power to appoint, capable of being exercised in several ways, is one power or several distinct powers, there is nothing to be found in the books to guide the judgment: on the contrary, there is much; it has been much considered, and there may be enough to say that it must be decided one way. But we do say that there is not, on such a point, what there ought at this day to be—something so positive and authoritative as to prevent the possibility of its being discussed. The same may be said of the other questions mentioned. It would not be very material whether the rule were, that the exercise of a power shall destroy it in toto, and the power of new appointment reserved shall be treated as a strictly new power; or whether the exercise of a power of appointment shall merely suspend it—put it, as it were, into a state of coma; so that if the deed exercising the power is revoked, the original power may arise out of its magnetic sleep, and revive. But it is material that upon points so much and so long discussed, there should not be a mere rule of inference, which, however often acted upon, is always liable to be attacked and frittered away by ingenious argument, but some positive rule of peremptory authority, to which a judge might appeal as conclusive.

Again: take such a subject as conditions in restraint of marriage: it is a well known, though we submit very absurd, distinction, founded on the result of many cases, that a testator may impose a condition subsequent, on his widow remarrying, so as to make her, if she does so, forfeit a benefit given by his will, but that he cannot impose such a condition on any other woman; but that he may give a benefit to any woman while she remains single. These are well known rules, and perhaps less open to difficulty in their application than many others of what are termed rules in the law. But still it would be better, supposing them to be good rules, if they were expressed by the Legislature in positive terms, so as to possess inherent authority, and to be conclusive.

So, with regard to general rules of construction, it is to be collected from the cases, as a general rule, that if, in a deed, there be repugnant clauses, the first must prevail; but if in a will, the last. But then there is the case of Morrell v. Sutton, (1 Ph. 533), which, if it does not actually shake that rule, at least renders its application more difficult. With the assistance, however, of the preceding cases, and of the law laid down in Morrell v. Sutton, it would not be difficult, at least not insurmountably difficult, to frame rules, which, being made so by the Legislature, would be sufficiently precise to prevent much litigation; while, embarrassed as the rules now are by the fact that their authority rests upon cases more or less varying in circumstances, it would be very difficult in many cases to apply them with any degree of certainty.

Take, again, that fruitful source of difficulty, the doctrine of estates arising by implication. Let any one look through the cases referred to by Mr. Jarman in his chapter on this subject, (1 Jarm. Wills, 460), and he will not fail to find, that though the cases afford some general rules, yet those rules are so intimately relating to and dependent upon the class of cases from which they are inferred, that you never can be even tolerably certain of their application to a new case—they possess no internal authority. It is not that there are no materials for laying down clear rules—there are abundant materials; but the rules have no force except what they derive from the cases. The struggle is, therefore, almost always possible, and is practically of very frequent occurrence, to shew that the authorities, which are the foundation of the rule, differ in their circumstances from the case before the Court, and consequently, cessante ratione cessat lex. It may be said, perhaps, in reference at least to positive rules, as applicable to the construction of wills, that to enact them would be inconsistent with giving due weight to a testator's intention. But, in fact, the law does, so far as it can, already do this; to certain expressions a certain legal construction is given, whether the testator actually did or did not know the effect of his language; and, in real truth, there is no hardship to the individual, and much convenience generally, in affixing a certain meaning to certain language.

For such a limited codification as we suggest, the materials are abundant; the course would not be difficult, and the result would be most beneficial to the public. There is a very considerable number of points in the law of property only, to which we could refer, which are the subject of continual litigation or dispute, and in reference to which a careful consideration of the decided cases would shew precisely what are the difficulties; what the causes of doubt; what are the general principles which should be embodied in general rules; and what are the particular examples, by way of exception, requiring the application of subordinate rules. A series of such rules might be easily framed by any competent lawyer, and, embodied in a special act, would be of great use. There would be, in such a limited and perfectly practicable codification, at any rate, this advantage, that it would operate by way of experiment, and shew, by its working, whether a general codification of the law would be useful.

LIABILITY OF TRUSTEES WHO HAVE AN OPTION TO INVEST ON MORTGAGE OR IN THE FUNDS.

THIS long-disputed question has been settled, so far as any question can be settled without a decision in the court of ultimate appeal, by the case of Robinson v. Robinson, (1 De G., M., & G. 247; 16 Jur. 255). In March v. Hunter, (6 Mad. 296), Sir J. Leach held that trustees who had an option to invest trust money on mortgage or in the funds, and did neither, were not bound to replace the amount of stock which they might have purchased when an investment ought to have been made. In Hockley v. Bantock, (1 Russ. 141), on the other hand, Lord Gifford directed an inquiry as to the price of Consols at the time, with a view to charge the trustees with the value of the stock, if that should exceed the money. Sir J. Leach acted on his original view in Gale v. Pitt, (1 De G., M., & G. 255), and was followed by Sir J. Wigram in Sheppard v. Moule, (4 Hare, 600), and by Sir J. L. Knight Bruce in Rees v. Williams, (1 De G. & S. 314); while the doctrine of Lord Gifford has the solitary support of his successor, Lord Langdale, in Watts v. Girdlestone, (6 Beav. 188), Ames v. Parkinson, (7 Beav. 379), Ouseley v. Anstruther, (10 Beav. 456), and Robinson v. Robinson, (11 Beav. 371). The decision in the latter case was reversed, on appeal, by the Lords Justices, on the ground, that if the trustee had discharged his duty, the trust fund would not necessarily have consisted of more than the original principal sum. The trustee is made answerable for not having made one of two investments at the proper time, but he was never bound to invest in the funds. The right of the cestui que trust is only to make the trustee answerable for not doing what he was bound to do. We submit that this reasoning is fallacious, and that the doctrine in Robinson v. Robinson cannot be safely relied on until it is confirmed by the House of Lords. It is contrary to the policy of the severe but salutary rules by which the Court of Chancery determines the responsibility of trustees; and it is contrary, we submit also, to the established principles of equity. A trustee who is bound to invest money in Consols, and does not do so, is accountable for the value of the stock which he might have bought, and the dividends, and cannot escape by paying the money, with interest. But if the value of the stock and the dividends is less than the money and interest, the trustee must pay the money and interest, even though he should conclusively prove that he never made a penny of interest or profit by the money. In other cases the Court decides according to the facts; in this case it declines any such investigation, except for the purpose of surcharging the trustee, if, in point of fact, he should be found to have made a greater profit than 4l. per cent.; and when the trustee has gained by one improper investment, and lost by another, the Court does not allow him to set off the gain against the loss, even though the balance would be more favourable to the cestui que trust than a proper investment would have been. It does this as a punishment and a warning. It is the duty of a trustee to invest. If the trust is silent as to the security, he must take Consols. If the trust prescribes a single security, he must take that. If it allows him a choice, he may discharge himself of his liability to invest, by selecting any of the allowed investments; but if he neglects his duty, can he allege, as an excuse for not investing in Consols, that he might have done something else which he has not done? The Court recognises Consols as the only proper investment, unless the trust declares others to be proper. Suppose that the trust had authorised investments in Consols or in the shares of the ——— Canal Company: under such a trust Consols and canal shares would have been equally proper investments. Can the trustee discharge himself by replacing canal shares, merely because he might have chosen that investment at the proper time? The trustee says, "You cannot ask more than the original sum; for if I had performed the trust in one way, you would have no more." The conclusive answer is, "You have not performed the trust in any way, and you cannot claim the benefit of an option which you have wrongfully neglected to exercise." Lord Cranworth suggests that the measure of damages should be that which is the least beneficial to the cestui que trust. That is the right rule where the trustee is restricted to unusual investments, of which the least advantageous in the event would have been more beneficial to the cestui que trust than either Consols or the money. But when a trustee is restricted to a particular investment—whether it be a security or a purchase—what is his duty while he is seeking for that investment? It is—if the prospect of finding a proper investment is not immediate—to invest in Consols. His first duty is to seek with all diligence for a proper investment, and in the meantime to invest in Consols. The breach of the one branch of his duty cannot excuse him from performance of the other.

The Right Hon. Sir John Jervis, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas, has appointed William Sykes Ward, Gent., of Leeds, to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the West Riding of the county of York.

Subscribed Capital, a Quarter of a Million.

TRUSTEES.

Mr. COMMISSIONER WEST, Leeds.
The Hon. W. F. CAMPBELL, Stratheden House.
JOHN THOMAS, Esq., Bishop's Stortford.

This Society embraces every advantage of existing Life Offices, viz the Mutual System, without its risks or liabilities; the Proprietary, with its security, simplicity, and economy; the Accumulative System, introduced by this Society, uniting life with the convenience of a deposit bank; Self-protecting Policies, also introduced by this Society, embracing, by one policy and one rate of premium, a Life Assurance, an Endowment, and a Deferred Annuity. "No forfeiture." Loans, with commensurate Assurances.

Bonus recently declared, 20*l.* per cent.
EDW. FRED. LEEKS, Secretary.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000*l.*, and the Income exceeds 136,000*l.* per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24*l.* to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5*l.* to 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

LONDON, JUNE 11, 1853.

It is a little surprising, and not very refreshing, to see how continuous is the stream of aspirants for the degree of barrister, notwithstanding the great decrease for the last few years of the business of the Bar, and the great and apparent probability that the amount of its business will not for many years more, if ever, be restored to its former state. During this term no less than twenty-two men were called to the Bar at the Inner Temple, and a considerable number at the Middle Temple and Lincoln's Inn; altogether the number called has not much fallen short of the calls in the palmy days of the Bar, when not only the Courts of Common-law were full, and Chancery business heavy, but in Parliament the atmosphere of the committee-rooms was surcharged with briefs, and bags could scarcely be large enough to hold the papers clamouring to be thrust into them. All this has long ceased; pleadings are destroyed; as the military phrase runs, the regiment has been literally "cut to pieces." At the Bar, both at Common-law and in Chancery, business has totally changed its character. The class of business that required what used to be called a "safe man" is nearly gone. Forms are so much given up, we do not say at all unwisely, but still in fact they are so much given up, and when still required, the cure of a defect in the framing or conduct of a suit is so comparatively easy and inexpensive, that there is nothing left to be safe about. Then, as to the class of business that required little more than the name or appearance of counsel; motions of course of every kind; applications, which, if not absolutely of course, could rarely be practically the subject of opposition; and, in fact, almost every kind of light business has nearly disappeared from Chancery; and at law, we believe, it is wholly extinguished. The business of the draftsman in Chancery is diminished, at the most moderate calculation, one half. Bills are not half the length they used to be; answers are rare, and when put in at all, are neither long nor intricate; exceptions are things talked of as known to our predecessors. Numberless matters, which in Chancery used to require the advice and drawing of counsel out of court, and their presence in court, are now done in the judges' chambers. In fact, the style of business has altogether changed, and we hesitate not to say that the quantity of work to be done by counsel is diminished by at least one half. We say expressly the work to be done by counsel, because, under the present system, all the business appropriated to counsel must be done by counsel personally. There was, in the old style of business, both at law and in equity, much of a barrister's business which could be and was done by his pupils or by his clerk. There was unquestionably a great deal of routine rubbish which required the penman's finger, not the lawyer's head. There is, happily for the public, none such now. We know scarcely anything now which comes into a barrister's chambers, in doing which anybody can materially assist him; and so far from its being likely that the old state of things will return, the tendency of the age is directly the other way: to simplify and shorten more and more—to expunge from legal procedure everything that is merely technical and subtle—to dispense with every step in a cause which can with any degree of safety be dispensed with—to compel brevity in all written statements—to bring, in fact, the preparation and conduct of a cause, as far as is practicable, to the presentation and discussion of the substantial questions of law and fact, and nothing else.

Now, that these reforms of the law will greatly raise the status of the Bar, we have no manner of doubt; but, on the other hand, neither have we any manner of doubt that a Bar of half the present number will, in a very few years, be sufficient to transact all the business of the country.

Is it, then, a time for young men to be flocking to the Bar, as if the days had returned, or were ever to return, when hundreds could reap considerable incomes by the transaction of purely formal business? We conceive not. Henceforth it should be well understood, by young men who have any inclination to choose the Bar as a profession, that there will be very little demand at the Bar except for thorough men of business. A fair amount of legal learning, a great amount of clear strong common sense, considerable powers of speaking, quickness, readiness, and energy—these, and these alone, will be the qualities that will enable counsel to transact business from this time forward for many long years. There is very little common business now; there will be none in a few years; it will all be special, and not easy. The change is, in fact, this—formerly the character of the business was such that there was much to do for several classes of men; now and henceforward the circle within which can be found the requisite qualifications is very much contracted. The business to be done is less, and will, at least for many years, be less in quantity, but of more difficult execution; consequently, if one may, without affront to the Bar, use a manufacturing expression, fewer and better hands will be wanted.

Again, therefore, we say, this is a time when the prospects of the Bar are not such as to afford any justification for the abundant supply which seems to be pouring into its ranks, or any ground for hope that one half of those who are coming in will ever find anything to do.

A Practical Treatise on the Law of Contracts not under Seal, and upon the usual Defences to Actions thereon.
By JOSEPH CHITTY, Jun., Esq. The Fifth Edition.
By JOHN A. RUSSELL, LL.B., of Gray's Inn, Barrister at Law. [Sweet, 1853.]

THIS is another edition of a work which has been long recognised by the Profession as the most useful treatise upon the important branch of law to which it relates. There is probably no legal book in such constant request; it is a handbook of daily reference—a store of valuable information essential to the advocate and the pleader, both in court and at chambers. Although susceptible of an elementary treatment, the subject is also one which requires to be considered in a practical view, for it involves the rights, liabilities, and remedies which flow from voluntary dealings between man and man. We cannot make any purchase, however simple, or take a house, or freight a vessel, or educate a child at school, or bury a friend, without a contract. Marriage is a contract; society is said to be founded on a contract; and, in short, man may be defined as a contracting animal. Contracts, moral, legal, and equitable, implied and express, executed and executory, absolute and conditional, lawful and unlawful, imposing perfect and imperfect obligations, complying with statutory and common-law requirements, together with their numerous and diversified incidents, form the contents of this volume.

While admitting the merits of Mr. Chitty's work, and that it fulfilled one of the conditions annexed to the subject, namely, its practical treatment, we think that it was yet capable of improvement as a scientific treatise. The present editor, Mr. John A. Russell*, however, has fully supplied any deficiency in this respect, and is warranted in stating, "that whilst he has endeavoured, by an ample reference to cases, to keep up the practical character of the work, he has at the same time endeavoured to state and explain the principles on which the cases referred to were decided, or which are deducible therefrom, and by exhibiting these principles, so far as the nature of the subject would permit, in a connected series of propositions, to shew, more fully than he had previously done, by what rules and maxims that branch of our law of which the book treats is governed."

We are glad to find that so useful a work has met with so able and industrious an editor.

REGULÆ GENERALES.

ORDER OF COURT.—June 2, 1853.

I, the Right Honourable ROBERT MONSEY Lord CRANWORTH, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, do hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say—

That so much of the Order of Court of the 10th day of May, 1853, be revoked as directs that the Accountant-General of this Court, in all cases in which no notice should, on or before the 31st day of May, 1853, have been given to him of an order made by the Master of the Rolls or one of the Vice-Chancellors, authorising and directing him to receive such capital sums as thereinbefore referred to, or to signify such assent as therein aforesaid, as to any portion of the Annuities thereinbefore referred to as standing in his name, should, on or before the 3rd day of June then next, signify to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or to the South Sea Company, as the case might be, his assent to accept and receive, in lieu of the Old South Sea Annuities, New South Sea Annuities, Bank Annuities, 1726, and 3½ per Cent. Annuities, 1751, standing in his name, or of such part thereof as to which no such notice as therein aforesaid should have been given to him, a competent sum of 2l. 10s. per Cent. Annuities, according to the provisions of the act thereinbefore mentioned; and that the Accountant-General should in such case carry such 2l. 10s. per Cent. Annuities to the credit of the same causes or matters respectively in respect whereof such assent should so have been signified by him as therein aforesaid; and that the same should be held upon the same trusts, and should be subject to the same orders, as the Annuities in respect of which the same should so be received.

(Signed) CRANWORTH, C.

ORDER OF COURT.—June 3, 1853.

The Right Honourable ROBERT MONSEY Lord CRANWORTH, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, doth hereby order and direct in manner following, that is to say—

That in all cases in which any Order directing the investment from time to time of any interest or dividends accruing upon any stocks or securities standing in the name of the Accountant-General to the credit of any cause, matter, or account, or upon any stocks or securities, which may be ordered to be transferred into the name of the Accountant-General, or to be carried over with his privity from one account to another, or upon any stocks or securities which may be ordered to be purchased with any cash in court, or with any cash to be paid into court with the like privity, shall be brought to the Accountant-General for the purpose of having such direction for investment carried into effect, the said Accountant-General may, from time to time, until he shall receive notice of an Order to the contrary, without any further request, invest the interest and dividends so directed to be invested, together with all accumulations of interest and dividends thereon, as soon as conveniently may be after they shall accrue due and have been received, in the purchase of the particular description of stock or security named in such Order, and place such stocks or securities, when purchased, to the credit of the cause, matter, or account respectively, as may be directed by such Order.

(Signed) CRANWORTH, C.

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 52, Chancery-lane, London.

At the Seventh Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders, held at the Gray's Inn Coffee-house on Tuesday, the 31st day of May, 1853, William Murray, Esq., in the Chair, it appeared by the Directors' Report, that during the current year 266 Policies had been issued, assuring 93,637l., producing in Annual Premiums 3,058l.

That the number of existing Policies was 1,065, assuring . . . £489,910

Producing in Annual Premiums . . . 16,188

That the Annual Income of the Society was . . . 18,540

That a very careful and minute valuation of the assets and liabilities of the Society on the 31st December last had been made, in which each Policy had been separately valued.

That although the investments had hitherto yielded from 4 to 5 per cent., and might fairly be expected, for many years to come, to produce 4 per cent. at least, the Actuary, in his valuation, had, for the purpose of avoiding exaggeration, assumed the funds of the Society would not be improved at a higher rate of interest than 3 per cent.

That no portion of future profits on existing Policies had been anticipated for this division, although the present value thereof is 41,009l. 15s. 5d.

That the total Assets of the Society on the 31st December last were . . . £252,288 7 0

And the Liabilities of all kinds . . . 212,267 8 8

Showing a balance in favour of the Society of . . . 40,020 18 9

From which deducting Shareholders' paid-up capital of . . . 25,000 0 0

A net surplus of . . . £15,020 18 9 remained to the credit of the General Assurance Fund, and was applicable by way of bonus to the different parties interested. Of this surplus 9,779l. is to be distributed among the Participating Class of Policyholders, and the residue of 5,250l. 18s. 9d. is divisible in equal parts among the Shareholders and those who had introduced assurances to the Society. That the holders of Participating Policies receive no less than 80 per cent. of the profits arising from assurances effected on that scale; and the remaining profits, instead of being, as usual in other companies, appropriated exclusively to the Shareholders, were in this Society divided between the Shareholders and those through whom Policies had been introduced, the Shareholders having by the Deed of Settlement consented to relinquish a moiety of their proportion of the profits, with a view to the extension and prosperity of the Office, and without in any manner prejudicing the interest of the Assured.

That the gross Profits which had arisen would enable the Proprietors to declare a Reversionary Bonus of from 1½ to upwards of 2½ per cent. per annum on the amount assured, and equivalent, in some cases, to upwards of 6l. per cent. on the amount of Premiums paid; to declare a dividend of 2s. 7½d. per Share on the Shares of the Society, being an immediate Cash Bonus of 10½ per cent. on the paid-up Capital, in addition to the interest of 4 per cent. per annum hitherto paid to the Shareholders; and also to declare an extra Commission of 7½ per cent. on the Commissions already paid on the Premiums received for Assurances.

The Report was received, and Resolutions confirming the same unanimously adopted.

The Directors and Auditors going out of office by rotation were unanimously re-elected.

Thanks were voted to the Chairman for his impartial and able conduct in the chair, and the Meeting separated.

CHARLES JOHN GILL, Secretary.

N. B.—The future Divisions will be triennial, and all Policies will be entitled to participate in four-fifths of the Profits after payment of one Premium only, and will be issued free of Stamp Duty to the Assured.

SOCIETY for PROMOTING the AMENDMENT of the LAW.—A PUBLIC MEETING will be held on Wednesday, the 15th June, at the Society's Rooms, when the attendance of all persons who feel interested in the important object of the Amendment of the Law in any of its branches is earnestly requested.

EQUITY and LAW LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, No. 26, Lincoln's-Inn-fields, London.

Policies in this Office are indisputable.
Persons assured the present year will participate in the Profits to be divided at the end of 1854.

LONDON and PROVINCIAL LAW ASSURANCE SOCIETY,

No. 32, NEW BRIDGE-STREET, BLACKFRIARS.

GEORGE M. BUTT, Esq., M. P., Q. C. Chairman.

BONUS.—Policies effected (on the Profits' Scale) prior to the 1st December, 1853, will participate in FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, to be declared at the close of the year 1855, and appropriated by addition to the Policy, reduction of Premium, or Payment in Cash, as the Assured may desire.

Extensive license to travel and reside abroad.
Appearance before the Board dispensed with.
Prospectuses and further information may be had at the Office.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1834.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION of LIMITS of RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK of PARTNERSHIP. The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000*l.*, and the Income exceeds 136,000*l.* per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24*l.* to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5*l.* to 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION in PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION of BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION in PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT of CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

LONDON, JUNE 18, 1853.

THE Second Report of the Common-law Commissioners, which it is said will shortly appear in the form of a statute, is a document of much interest, not only to the legal profession, but also to the public at large. The First Report was comparatively technical, dealing with matters of practice and pleading in the law; but this Report comprehends an examination into trial by jury, the law of evidence, the proceedings after trial, and other subjects of a kindred character. And first, with regard to trial by jury, after stating succinctly and forcibly the arguments which may be, and generally are, advanced pro and con in respect of this tribunal, the learned Commissioners arrive at the following conclusions—that while there are cases in which a jury may be advantageously dispensed with, yet it is an institution which, upon the whole, works well, and enjoys the confidence of the public; that therefore they do not feel warranted, except in cases of mere account, to recommend its being superseded, unless the parties themselves prefer that the case should be tried before a judge. In cases involving merely matter of account they propose a reference to an officer of the court, or in county causes to the judge of the county court, or, if the parties prefer it, to an arbitrator appointed by themselves, upon whose award judgment may be entered as upon a verdict. They very properly append an observation to the effect, that whatever plan may be adopted as to references, it ought to include provisions for securing, as far as practicable, a continuous process to the end of the arbitration, and an abolition of those frequent adjournments which are at present the bane of that mode of proceeding.

The Commissioners do not fail to perceive, that in many instances the jury are so constituted as not to insure such an average amount of intelligence as may be desired; and accordingly they recommend that the standard of qualification of jurymen in the country, which at present is as low as a rating on a value of 20*l.*, should be raised; and further, that on every trial there should be an admixture of jurymen of the class from which the special juries are now taken.

The present rule requiring the jury to be unanimous in their decision is to be maintained, but such unanimity should be, not merely apparent, but real and voluntary; therefore the practice as to shutting them up, without food, fire, or light, is to be abandoned, and during their deliberations they are to be furnished with every fitting accommodation, and with necessary refreshment. The period during which a jury should be kept in deliberation should not exceed twelve hours, at the expiration whereof, unless they desire further time, they should be discharged; in which case either of the litigant parties should be at liberty to summon a fresh jury, and to try the question again. It is also most properly suggested, that cases in which complicated questions arise should not be summed up late in the day, whereby the deliberations of jurors are often prolonged to an hour of the night when the powers are worn out, and the danger of a submission against conscience and conviction becomes the greater.

It is felt that great injustice is often caused by preventing the party who has adduced evidence from replying to the observations and the attacks which are made upon such evidence; and the Commissioners recommend that the party who begins should always have an opportunity of replying at the close of the case, and that the other party should be allowed to address the jury, first, on opening his case, and secondly, at the close of his evidence. We think this will be a great advantage; it will lead to the production of all the evidence in a case, which is now frequently kept back from the fear of a reply; it will also tend to the removal of unfounded imputations upon character; and though, as suggested by the Commissioners, it will undoubtedly increase the length of the trial, yet that is not an evil which is to be regarded in comparison with the evils which will be thus abolished.

A discretionary power is to be exercised by the presiding judge as to the adjournment of the trial, (subject to conditions), so as to prevent surprise or a miscarriage of justice.

The important subject of evidence is next commented upon, and it is truly said that recent improvements, introduced in modern times into this branch of the law, have left comparatively little to suggest in the way of amendment. With regard to the admissibility of husband and wife a recommendation is made, which already forms the subject of a bill in the House of Lords, viz. that husband and wife should be competent and compellable to give evidence for and against one another on matters of fact, as to which either could now be examined as a party in the cause*, but that all communications between them should be held to be privileged.

We shall pursue this subject in another article, so as to place before our readers the important results at which the Commissioners have arrived, referring them to the Report itself for statements of the existing law upon the subjects treated of, and for the arguments which have weighed with the Commissioners in arriving at such results.

Rebuts.

Shall we Register our Deeds? A Letter to the Right Hon. Lord Lyndhurst, &c. &c. By H. BELLENDEN KER, Esq. Sec. Pp. 24. [Stevens & Norton.]

THIS is a complete and satisfactory answer, by an eminent member of the present Registration and Conveyancing Commission, to the late Lord Chancellor's pamphlet bearing the same title. It is peculiarly valuable, because it refutes the objections of Lord St. Leonards (which include all the objections that have ever been urged against a general registry) in a very brief compass, and at the same time in remarkably simple and perspicuous language. We have already said so much on this subject, and agree so entirely with Mr. Ker's sentiments on this important question, that we shall present the following extracts without any comment:—

* Husband and wife are already witnesses for and against each other, under the late statute, when they are jointly parties as plaintiffs or defendants.

"Lord St. Leonards had but few followers, either in his early or in his recent opposition. Mr. Coote, a conveyancer of eminence, was the only one who expressed opposition in print. In favour of this question may be ranged all the members of the Real Property Commission, the late Mr. Bell, and Mr. Butler, all the members of the Registration Commission, all the present law Lords, (except Lord St. Leonards), and the late Lord Cottenham, Sir William Page Wood, the present Master of the Rolls, &c." (P. 6).

"There is nothing in the present bill which will prevent the adoption of maps hereafter, if found advisable; and for at least the first five or six years after the establishment of the registry even the nominal index will not be found seriously inconvenient. I do not here go into the objections to the adoption of maps: on a reference to the views of the commissioners it will be found that there was no necessity for any great precision in the maps; the validity of the conveyance was not to be essentially dependant on a due reference to the map, or even on its precise accuracy; it, in fact, was only to serve as a more perfect and actual index to what was the property to be affected, and the actual extent or nature of it might be established by other evidence. But I must here remark that it was suggested by Mr. Humphrey, that, to obviate much of the objection to Mr. Duval's nominal index, there should be indexes referring to several divisions or districts, much smaller than those proposed by Mr. Duval, and therefore making the search less onerous; and it must be borne in mind, that in no case could this search be very extended, except in a case where there was a long lapse of time before the title came on the registry. This omission of a reference to maps is no objection of principle, but merely one of detail. Now, as regards secrecy, required by Lord St. Leonards, the present system is 'reasonably secret;' no one can search the register respecting my title unless I give him a clue to the account under which my title is registered. I say nothing about the justice of thus requiring secrecy; I do not think it necessary or just, and this was the opinion of the Registration Commissioners." (P. 11).

"It was, I always thought, one of the defects in Mr. Duval's bill, that it entered far too minutely into details, which were to become binding even before their usefulness had been tested by practice. Lord St. Leonards finds fault with the present bill as giving too much latitude to the registrar and the chancellor and judges, who can make orders, rules, and regulations, as the exigencies of the case require. But are these more extensive than the privileges, almost unlimited, which are vested in the judges of the Courts of Common Law and Chancery, to make rules and regulations; and have not these latter been found beneficial, and in nowise trenching on the liberty of the subject or the rights of property? I take the following as an instance of the value of leaving a general power in the registrar to make rules. It has been shewn, that in order to prove that there is nothing on the registry affecting the title to an estate sold prior to the first deed appearing in the registry with which the seller begins his title, it is necessary to search the index of names. Now, if the registrar, on a new account being opened, were himself bound to search the index of names, and to ascertain and certify that there was nothing prior existing in the registry affecting the estate in question, in that case all search anterior to the first entry would be avoided. I can conceive various rules and regulations whereby the facilities of search may in like manner be much increased. Assuming that the preliminary search as to whether there was anything in the registry before the first registered deed appearing or the abstract delivered were done 'away with, all the search necessary would be a search under the accounts A. and B., and if no deeds appeared except those shewn by the purchaser in the abstract delivered, (and this would be the case in 999 cases out of 1000), nothing further need be done as regards the search of the register. If, however, it appeared that the seller had made a mistake, or had attempted a fraud, and there should appear on the account any other instrument than what had been shewn to him, here, then, is the value of the registry; without it the purchaser could never have known of the suppressed or forgotten deed, whilst with it he has the power of seeing the deed itself, and proving how far it is material to his title." (P. 12).

After referring to, and adopting, our estimate of the probable cost of registration in small transactions, (ante, p. 151), Mr. Ker proceeds—

"In the provisions in the bill will be found, I think, an answer to the petitions from building and other societies formed for the purchase of land. It is also probable that in small transactions the parties will be content to deposit the originals in the registry, and rely on a copy, coupled with the certificate of search. But it may be asked of those parties opposed to a general registry, and especially those interested in small transactions—Is it supposed that the reform of real property law is to stop with the establishment of a registry? Did not both the commissions consider that the establishment of a registry was the key-stone of law reform? Will not the establishment of a registry lead to some short mode, by reference to the registry, of conveying property, the title to which is to be found on the registry, either by certificate, by deed, or otherwise? Is it possible to consider any plans for those purposes effectually without having a public registry, as the basis of every safe and complete mode of conveyance? Therefore, if this measure, which has twice passed the House of Lords, is now rejected, I shall consider that all effectual real property law reform is indefinitely postponed. I shall believe the late Sir Robert Peel was right, when, drawing a picture of the future House of Commons under the Reform Bill, and suggesting that it would be too much under the influence of popular prejudices to enter into the consideration of great and well-considered measures of change, against which there might exist some under-current of interest or bigotry, he asked, 'Will your reformed House of Commons pass a Registry Bill?' (P. 18).

"I do not mean to contend that a deed will be registered without payment, or that the register on a purchase will be searched without cost, but I contend that a purchaser in both cases will be a gainer by what he pays for; the party taking a conveyance will for a small sum have registered a duplicate or an attested copy of his deed for safe custody; this will, on a future sale of a part, &c., save him the cost of attested copies, of covenants to produce deeds, &c.; he will be insured against any loss from the destruction of his own deeds, by thus having at the registry either a duplicate original or an attested copy; and this will lead much to the shortening of conveyances, for it will no longer be an object to recite deeds at length, which are always forthcoming at the registry." (P. 15).

"Lord St. Leonards estimates, that owing to the additional cost which will be imposed by registration, the extra charges of solicitors, &c., this measure will add a tax of a million a year on the land. I contend that the saving from improvement and facility as to the evidence of title, the shortening of deeds, the rendering attested copies and covenants to produce deeds, &c., unnecessary, it is probable no tax at all will be imposed; and here I do not stop to reckon the gain to arise from future improvements and simplifications of the law, of which registry must be the basis." (P. 21).

"As regards the objections that the registry will diminish the facility of raising money on deposit of title deeds, it will be seen that this bill provides facilities as to making such deposits which do not now exist; and it is notorious that neither the Yorkshire nor the Middlesex registry in anywise hinders deposit of deeds, though it is very rarely the case that bankers do even now register the memorandums of deposit. But here at least I may bring a greater authority, as regards experience and knowledge, than Lord St. Leonards himself. It is sufficient to refer to the able speech of Lord Overstone on the third reading of the bill; and he stated, from his great experience in such matters, that bankers, far from being averse to this measure, would consider it as a boon and protection, and would in fact throw no difficulties in the way of fair and reasonable dealing with land. No one should come to a conclusion on this point without well studying the observations contained in this speech." (P. 22).

Mr. Ker states that the present pamphlet forms a part of some more general observations on the present state of the law of real property, with proposals for its amendment, which he has prepared at the suggestion of Lord Lyndhurst, and hopes shortly to publish. We shall expect that publication, and also the second report of the commissioners, with some impatience.

EQUITY and LAW LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

No. 26, Lincoln's Inn-fields, London.
Policies in this Office are indisputable.
* * * Persons assured the present year will participate in the Profits to be divided at the end of 1854.

CITY of LONDON LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

2, Royal Exchange Buildings, London.

TRUSTEES.

Mr. COMMISSIONER WEST, Leeds.
The Hon. W. F. CAMPBELL, Stratheden House.
JOHN THOMAS, Esq., Bishop's Stortford.
This Society embraces every advantage of existing Life Offices, viz. the Mutual System, without its risks or liabilities; the Proprietary, with its security, simplicity, and economy; the Accumulative System, introduced by this Society, uniting life with the convenience of a deposit bank; Self-protecting Policies, also introduced by this Society, embracing, by one policy and one rate of premium, a Life Assurance, an Endowment, and a Deferred Annuity. "No forfeiture." Loans, with commensurate Assurances.

Bonus recently declared, 20*l.* per cent.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1824.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.
ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.
The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000*l.*, and the Income exceeds 136,000*l.* per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125*l.* was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 34*l.* to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5*l.* to 12*l.* 10*s.* per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1853; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50*l.* to 10,000*l.*

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

LONDON, JUNE 25, 1853.

WE have long thought that what is termed fusion of law and equity would come to pass, however much it might be opposed, but we did not certainly expect it to take effect so soon as now seems likely; for if the recommendations in the Second Report of the Common-law Commissioners are passed into law—and that they will cannot be doubted—it will be useless to talk any more about the propriety of fusion as a system; the thing will be practically done. For most purposes courts of law will be courts of equity, and as the recent improvements in Chancery only require to be fully and heartily carried out to make courts of equity, for a great many purposes, courts of law, the fusion will be all but complete. Before commenting on those portions of the Commissioners' Report which recommend these changes, we cannot refrain from expressing some degree of satisfaction, as Chancery lawyers, at the tardy justice done to the principles of our system by the common lawyers. Time was, and not very long ago, when no common lawyer would speak of equity but as a highly artificial system of iniquity. Our pleadings were the theme of ridicule; our tardiness was contrasted with the speed of the common law; above all, our principle of compelling a man to give evidence against himself was a mark for a sort of pious forensic horror, so opposed was it to the constitutional notions of the common law—to its beneficent tenderness for the liberty of the subject. But time and reflection, and, above all, the county courts, have induced the common lawyers to look into this mass of nonsense and iniquity called equity, and, upon looking into it, they have seen that it is very good, and that the adoption of a good deal of it will make the common law, "which is the perfection of reason," just a little more perfect. Now, what the Courts of common law propose to borrow from the other side of Westminster Hall is, to state it shortly, this:—Injunctions; specific performance of contracts; preliminary discovery of documents and facts; and inspection by parties and witnesses; and in the details of obtaining discovery they actually propose to adopt the written interrogatories of Chancery!

On discovery, the Commissioners say, "It thus appears that the Courts of law have power to compel inspection of documents, but that these Courts possess no means of compelling a discovery whether the documents sought for are in the possession or power of the opposite party. As to facts within the knowledge of an adverse party, the Courts of law possess no power of compelling discovery, except, indeed, that, by the recent change in the law, each party may be called as a witness by his opponent; but it is obvious that this course will only be resorted to in the most desperate emergency. It cannot reasonably be expected that a party, ignorant of what his adversary may be prepared to swear, shall put so adverse and interested a witness into the box without having had any opportunity of previous interrogation. For the purpose of discovery previous to the trial, whether of facts or of documents, the party desiring it has now no alternative but to resort to a Court of equity. We have no hesitation in saying that this is altogether wrong. We assert, as an indisputable proposition, that every Court ought to possess within itself the means of administering complete justice within the scope of its jurisdiction. The necessity of resorting to a Court of equity for discovery involves fresh process, much delay, and additional expense, the greater part of which might be avoided by causing the necessary proceedings to be had in the court in which the suit is already pending. It is true, the Courts of law do not at present possess any machinery analogous to that of a bill of discovery; but we think it would be an additional advantage to get rid of so cumbrous and expensive a mode of proceeding; and we see no difficulty in devising a simple but efficacious mode of attaining the end desired."

And on the application of interrogatories they say, "We propose that either party in a cause shall be at liberty to deliver to the opposite party, provided such party would be liable to be called as a witness, or his attorney, written questions on the subjects on which discovery is sought; and to require such party, within a time to be fixed, to answer the questions in writing upon oath, sworn and filed in the same manner and under the same sanction, in case of falsehood, as an affidavit; and that the party omitting to answer within the prescribed time shall be subject to the consequences of a contempt of the Court. But we by no means propose to confine the power of interrogating such adverse party to the written questions above referred to. We think that in many cases an opportunity should be afforded for oral examination; at the same time, care must be taken that the power of personal examination be not abused, by being made a means of vexation and oppression, when used against weak or timid persons. We propose, therefore, not to leave it at the option of a party to demand an oral examination, but to give the Court or a Judge discretion, on the application of either party, in case of an insufficient answer to the written questions before referred to, or in any other case in which it may be made to appear essential to justice, to direct an oral examination of the other party before either a Judge or a Master of the court; or, if it shall be deemed expedient, in a country cause, before the judge of any county court, to whom it may be thought most convenient to refer such examination. Each party, when under examination, should be confined to answering the questions propounded by his adversary, with such explanations as are necessary to prevent a categorical answer from being the means of misleading; and it should be optional with the party interrogating to use the answers or not, as he may now do with regard to the answers given on a bill of discovery."

The mode in which it is proposed to carry out specific performance differs a little, but not much, from that practised in Chancery. The Commissioners propose to adapt to it the jurisdiction by mandamus, stripping it of its delays and technical difficulties, applying it to private as well as to public rights, and converting the proceeding, in fact, into a common action, having for its object the recovery of damages or the performance of the contract. They say, "The proceeding thus simplified may be applied to every case in which specific performance of a contract or duty is to be enforced; and, for the reasons which we have already expressed, we think it ought to be so applied, and that Courts of law ought to have power to grant specific performance, and to enforce the specific delivery of goods, in every case in which that relief has hitherto been granted by Courts of equity. This mode of procedure will be the same as in ordinary actions, with the exception that the plaintiff, by his declaration, will pray the specific relief instead of merely a sum of money. There are cases in which a Court of equity, upon peculiar considerations of doubtful justice, grants specific performance, though the legal right be not complete at the commencement of the suit. It may not be advisable to interfere with the jurisdiction of Courts of equity in such cases, but only to give Courts of law the power of enforcing specific performance in the same cases in which compensation in damages only can now be obtained in those courts."

This mode of proceeding will carry the principle more completely into effect than is even done in Chancery, as it will reach directly and simply those cases which at present can only be reached in Chancery by what is termed the "mandatory injunction." We mean cases where what is required is, to order the defendant to execute some specific work, such as to make a bridge or a road, or to build a house, &c. If A. has contracted with B. to construct a bridge of a given character, a Court of equity does not include in its jurisdiction the authority to compel him to make it; all it can do is, to restrain him from making it in any other way, or to restrain him from passing over B.'s land without making it, or the like; and no doubt, in many cases, this mandatory injunction has the desired effect. But cases may be well imagined in which it will not: if, for instance, A. has ceased to want the bridge, or to go over B.'s land, there is nothing for the Court to enjoin, and A. cannot be compelled to perform his contract. This direct power ought also to be given to the Court of Chancery, in order to carry out the principle laid down by the Commissioners, that "in those cases in which at present the combined operation of both Courts, without any satisfactory means of communication between them, is required to make up a complete redress, even as between the same parties and in respect of the same subject-matter, a consolidation of all the elements of a complete remedy in the same court is obviously desirable, not to say imperatively necessary, to the establishment of a consistent and rational system of procedure."

In this principle we most heartily concur.

On the effect which a bill founded on the Commissioners' Report will have on the Bar we have scarcely left ourselves any space to observe. That it will produce an "amalgamation" can hardly be doubted; at first, the new proceedings will be so purely equitable, so new and strange to the common lawyers, that no doubt equity men will be called upon to appear in courts of law; and by degrees, as those who habitually practise in courts of common law become familiarised with equitable doctrines, they in their turn will be consulted indifferently on matters of law and equity; so that the good old times will return when all counsel practised in all courts, and the "other side of Westminster Hall" will become a mere antiquarian expression.

A QUESTION of more than usual interest has just been decided in the case of Re Wynoh's Trusts, a report of which will appear in our next number.

Although the facts of the case occupy some space in statement, the point decided was a short one, and we shall perhaps be excused if we present it here in a popular form. A testator, by will, bequeathed to one Mrs. Mealy an annuity of £600., to commence six months after his death, for her life, and the issue from her body lawfully begotten, on failure of which to revert to the heirs of the testator; and the will then contained a request that certain persons named would act as trustees for Mrs. Mealy, so that the said annuity might be secured for her sole use and benefit. These were the very words of the will, with only the immaterial modifications which the narrative form into which we have put them requires. Mrs. Mealy had children, by a subsequent marriage, born alive. The question—omitting the various subsequent dealings with the annuity, which were disregarded in the judgment—was, what interest in the annuity these words conferred upon Mrs. Mealy. The case was argued strenuously and very ably on either side, and the Vice-Chancellor, after some days' consideration, pronounced a decision which we believe will be read with satisfaction by the Profession, both on account of the conclusion at which the learned judge arrived, and the sound practical reasoning by which he supported his judgment.

The gist of the arguments may be thus shortly stated. On the part of those who contended that Mrs. Mealy took the absolute interest in the annuity, it was urged that a perpetual annuity, thus limited, was an anomalous kind of property, not real nor yet simply personal estate, but properly a personal hereditament, in the limitation of which the word "issue" should receive the same construction as it would if the subject of the gift had been real estate; for where the subject was of an inheritable nature, it was most reasonable, convenient, and simple to apply to it the established rules for construing devises of real hereditaments. But the word "issue," as here used, if the subject had been real estate, would have conferred an estate tail on the donee; and therefore, in the annuity, the will created a fee simple conditional, which was the nature of estates tail before the Statute de Donis, and must be the effect of this limitation, because the annuity did not come under the operation of that statute. This argument was ingeniously supported by reference to the clause of reverter, which applied, it was said, perfectly to a fee simple conditional, as in this kind of estate there would, from its nature, be a chance of reverter to the donor if Mrs. Mealy did not fulfil the condition of its limitation, by having a child born alive; but that this clause of reverter would have no meaning if the gift were construed to confer a life estate on Mrs. Mealy, and then to her issue as purchasers. Then, as Mrs. Mealy had fulfilled the condition, her interest became absolute.

On the other side, those who supported the view that the gift conferred a life interest on Mrs. Mealy, and then an absolute interest upon her issue as purchasers, argued that the annuity was simply personal property, and that the flexible word "issue" in bequests of personalty was not a word of limitation, for the sound reason that its having that effect in devises of real estate was a consequence of the rules of feudal tenure, which could have no application to personalty; and the argument was confirmed by reference to those cases in which, in order to effectuate the intention of testators, exceptions have been made to the rule, that words which would give an estate tail in realty would create an absolute interest in personal property.

The question, so argued, seems to be one of considerable difficulty, but it was in truth very simple, and the doubt was really occasioned by the consummate art with which the counsel for Mrs. Mealy passed sicco pede over the weak part of their case. A little consideration will shew that the argument on that side is based upon a most clear and audacious petitio principii. It would be very difficult indeed to say that the limitations of a personal hereditament should be construed differently from similar limitations of any other hereditament; but this point was inseparably involved in the question—Was this annuity a personal hereditament?—which Mrs. Mealy's counsel from the first quietly assumed. Now, an annuity may be perpetual without being a hereditament at all. It is only a hereditament when so limited as to descend to the heirs of the grantee. Here it could not so descend, unless "issue" were a word of limitation; therefore, to assume that the annuity was a hereditament, was to assume that "issue" was a word of limitation, which was the thing required to be proved.

Of course the Vice-Chancellor notices this in his judgment. The annuity was simply personal property: whether or not it was a hereditament depended upon the effect to be given to the word "issue." His Honor considers the force of this word in gifts of personalty, and both reason and authority lead him to the conclusion, that to construe it a word of purchase, which would cause the property to be divided among the issue as a class, is more consistent with the nature of personal property, according to our law, than an interpretation which would allow all to go to the eldest son in case of the death of the donee without having disposed of the annuity.

We believe that at this day, when our law of the descent of real property is probably only tolerated because descents seldom or never happen, and because the absurd rule, which gives all the father's real estate to one son in exclusion of the other children, is mitigated by the universal practice of dividing property by settlement or will, the public will unanimously assent to the wisdom of a decision which follows the more equitable principle of the distribution of personal property, in construing limitations of a doubtful kind of subject, expressed in words which, in cases of real estate, have received an arbitrary and inflexible meaning.

The Vice-Chancellor considered that his decision derived what seems to us unnecessary support from the direction in the will to secure the annuity for Mrs. Mealy's separate use. His Honor thought that this direction applied only, correctly, to a life estate, and therefore was itself an indication that the intention of the testator was to give her no more than an interest in the annuity for her life. But the argument against this view is very strong, that a trust for the separate use of a married woman is by no means inapplicable or inoperative if applied to an absolute interest, for it confers on her the right during coverture to deal with or assign the whole, which is an important privilege. However, the judgment seems not to have needed the confirmation which the Vice-Chancellor thought this circumstance would afford.

Whenever the question, which was argued but not decided in this case, shall arise—when it shall be necessary to consider whether the limitations of a personal hereditament are to be construed as though the subject were real or personal estate—the question will be more difficult. We do not see any escape from the conclusion to which all considerations of convenience directly lead, that such limitations must be construed according to the known rules commonly applicable to them in the case of real estate. Many of these—such as the rule in Shelley's case, the rule in Wild's case, the cy près doctrine, and others—are incidental to and dependent upon the ordinary law of descent of real property; and this, which is perhaps the most objectionable, being allowed to govern the devolution of a personal hereditament, it would be impossible, without occasioning grievous confusion, to hold that those other rules, which are so closely connected with the law of descent, are not equally applicable.

Reviews.

The Gold Companies and the Cost-book System. By JOSEPH NAPIER HIGGINS, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law, A.B., M.R.I.A. Second Edition*. Pp. 31. [E. Wilson.]

THE 64th section of the stat. 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, ("An Act for the Registration, Incorporation, and Regulation of Joint-stock Companies"), provides, "that nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any partnership formed for the working of mines, minerals, and quarries, of what nature soever, on the principle commonly called 'The Cost-book Principle.'" This exemption from the restrictions of an act which all speculators desire to evade has naturally brought "the cost-book principle" into general notice, and many attempts have been made to acclimatize it beyond the limits of its ancient habitat in Cornwall. We have on a former occasion given some account of the peculiarities of a cost-book association in Cornwall, and have expressed an opinion that a company for working foreign mines on that principle may lawfully be established in this country, so as to be within the exception in the Joint-stock Companies Registration Act. (16 Jur., part 2, p. 23). We did not attempt to discuss the expediency of adopting such a constitution for such purposes. One of the objects of the present pamphlet is to throw a doubt on the possibility of establishing a company on the cost-book principle for operations to be carried on out of the jurisdiction of the Stannaries Court; and the other is to suggest the inexpediency of doing so, if it be possible. Mr. Higgins mentions the following particulars, as being apparently of the essence of the system:—

"A license to dig for minerals or a lease having been granted to one or more of the adventurers, the first step towards the formation of the company is a meeting, at which every adventurer has a right to be present, for the purpose of settling the amount of capital necessary to work the mine, its division into shares, and the allotment thereof. Then follow—the appointment by the whole body of shareholders of an agent or person, whose duties are distinctly defined by usage; the opening of the cost-book, which should contain the names of all the shareholders, and be the register of transfers, as well as be the minute-book and ledger of the company; and finally, authority delegated to the purser, or, in some instances, a managing committee, to make calls, discharge liabilities, summon general meetings, and otherwise to manage the undertaking. The general meetings are usually bi-monthly or monthly, at any one of which it is competent for the majority to dissolve the company, which could be a matter of little difficulty at any time, since the accounts are balanced and the dividends declared at each meeting. It is considered a breach of the customary usage if there has been no general meeting for the settlement of accounts, and declaration of profit or loss, for a period extending beyond two months. Another important feature in the system is the giving notice in writing to the purser of the intended withdrawal of a co-adventurer, which entitles him to the payment of the amount of his share, less his proportion of whatever debts or liabilities the company may have contracted since the time of its last general meeting and dividend. The main and most important feature in the whole system is the total want of power in the purser or committee of management to discharge any function, or do any act on behalf the company, except so far as the whole body of shareholders may have delegated the power to them. The purser has no power in himself to bind his co-adventurers to any extent or in any manner, save as he has authority from those whose agent he assumes to be. It is incompatible with the spirit of the whole system that the management, or indeed power or control of any sort, should be delegated for a lengthened period, though the practice is to continue the same manager or committee of management from month to month, by renewing the appointment at each successive general meeting."

Mr. Higgins then asks how many of these conditions have been observed by the several mining companies recently established in London under the name of cost-book companies, and suggests that in the majority there have not been that preliminary meeting, that opening of a regular cost-book, those frequently recurring general meetings, and that recognition of the right of each individual shareholder to call for an account at any time, in order to obtain repayment of his money, less the debts and liabilities (if any) of the concern, which he considers to be essential to the existence of a true cost-book association.

In defining the cost-book principle, too much importance has been attributed to the cost-book, from which the name has been derived. In the simple proceedings of the Cornish associations, a single book suffices to contain all the records of the concern. At each meeting, all receipts and disbursements, all changes of ownership, and all other matters of common interest requiring to be recorded, are entered in the same book, or, having been entered in the interval from the last meeting, are then reviewed, and, if necessary, corrected or allowed and confirmed. But it can never be held essential that all these entries should be made in the same book. A cost-book company may, if they think fit, without abandoning their principle, use one book solely for entries of proprietorships of shares and assignments of shares, another book for daily expenses, and a third for entering balances and payments of profits, or calls and payments on them. Again: there can be nothing essential in the holding of meetings every two months or oftener, if the partners think fit to dispense with such frequent meetings and to give adequate powers to their purser or committee. The essential incidents of a cost-book association appear to be these—1. A division of the interest in the undertaking into shares. 2. An account of expenses and receipts, open to all the shareholders, and balanced at a general meeting. 3. Power in the majority at a general meeting to make calls. 4. Power in each shareholder to assign his share without the consent of the others. 5. Transfers of shares, made by entry in a book. 6. Power in each shareholder to relinquish his share at any time, and to have his account with the partnership balanced and settled. These incidents, though they are not all peculiar to cost-book associations, appear to be essentially included in the principle of them. But we conceive that the interval from meeting to meeting may be six or twelve months, and that the powers of the purser or committee to manage the concern and order supplies on credit or otherwise may be enlarged without infringing on the principle; and so we conceive that the purser or committee may be authorised to take new leases or new mines in enlargement of the original undertaking.

Mr. Higgins then points out the advantage derived by companies within the jurisdiction of the Stannaries Court, from the summary legal and equitable relief administered to its suitors by the Vice-warden, and suggests that there may be considerable ground for doubting whether the exception contained in sect. 63 of the Joint-stock Companies Registration Act applies to any mining companies out of the jurisdiction of the Stannaries Court. We cannot see any ground for the doubt. If the cost-book principle had involved any customary exceptions from the rules of law or of equity, limited to the locality of the Stannaries, it would have followed, that, without an alteration in the law, no company could be established on the cost-book principle beyond the Stannaries district. But as there is no one right or liability, whether essential or not, of a member of a cost-book association, which is inconsistent with any rule of law or equity, or which is not recognised or cannot readily be enforced by the ordinary courts of this country, it is clear that the mere accident that the cost-book system has for ages been almost peculiar to the Stannaries district, and that the proceedings of the customary courts of that district are peculiarly adapted to the easy and speedy enforcement of those rights and liabilities, cannot afford any ground for restricting the exception in the Joint-stock Companies Registration Act to the Stannaries.

Mr. Higgins has, however, done good service by calling public attention to the characteristics of the cost-book system, and by suggesting the difficulties which associations professedly formed on that system are liable to encounter, from neglecting to act up to the principle of their constitution. We shall conclude our notice with the following extract, which contains a caution by no means uncalled for:—

"It only remains for me to add a few words about another phase in the constitution of certain of the companies under consideration. I allude to such of them as add to their mining operations the business of buying and selling ore, gold, or any other commodity for the purposes of trading. It is clear that they can have no pretence to claim exemption from the Joint-stock Companies Registration Act, since they do not profess to confine themselves to the working of mines, minerals, or quarries, but formed generally for the 'commercial purposes' and 'purposes of profit' pointed out in the 2nd section of that act, and they are therefore clearly subject to all its regulations and provisions."

The Queen has been pleased to confer the honour of Knighthood upon John Stuart, Esq., a Vice-Chancellor; also upon Richard Bethell, Esq., M.P., her Majesty's Solicitor-General.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.—Under the provisions of an act of Parliament, this Company now offers to future Insurers FOUR-FIFTHS of the PROFITS, with QUINQUENNIAL DIVISION, or a LOW RATE OF PREMIUM without participation of Profits.

The next Division of Profits will be declared in June, 1855, when all Participating Policies which shall have subsisted at least one year at Christmas, 1854, will be allowed to share in the Profits.

At the several past Divisions of Profits made by this Company, the Reversionary Bonuses added to the Policies from ONE-HALF the Profits amounted, on an average of the different ages, to about One per Cent. per Annum on the sums insured, and the total Bonuses added at the four Septennial Divisions exceeded 770,000l.

FOREIGN RISKS.—The Extra Premiums required for the East and West Indies, the British Colonies, and the northern parts of the United States of America, have been materially reduced.

INVALID LIVES.—Persons who are not in such sound health as would enable them to insure their Lives at the Tabular Premiums, may have their Lives Insured at extra Premiums.

LOANS granted on Life Policies to the extent of their values, provided such Policies shall have been effected a sufficient time to have attained in each case a value not under 50l.

ASSIGNMENTS OF POLICIES.—Written Notices of, received and registered.

Notice is hereby given.—That Fire Policies which expire at Midsummer must be renewed within fifteen days at this Office, or with Mr. SAMS, No. 1, St. James's-street, (corner of Pall-mall); or with the Company's Agents throughout the Kingdom; otherwise they become void.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.—The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to 850,000l., and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in Janu. 17, 1852, the sum of 131,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 2½ to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud.

Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

LONDON, JULY 2, 1853.

In a cause of Pyrke v. Waddingham (10 Hare, 1) a question arose, in a suit by a vendor against a purchaser for the specific performance of an agreement for the purchase of an estate, whether the plaintiff had such a title as the Court ought to compel the defendant to accept; and in adjudicating upon this point, the learned Vice-Chancellor, Sir G. J. Turner, took occasion to explain the principle and to state the limits of the well-settled rule, that the Court of Chancery will not compel a purchaser to accept a doubtful title. In the case before the Court, the title to the estate, which formed the subject-matter of the contract, was derived under a will dated in 1752—a century ago—by which the testator, after devising the property in question to his wife for life, gave the same to his nephew A. for life; "and if the said A. should die and leave one or more son or sons, the testator gave his said estate to his, A.'s, eldest and every other sons, the eldest to take before the younger, according to their priority of birth;" and if A. should happen to die and leave no son, the testator, after making a provision for his daughters, if any, gave the estate to B., "upon the same terms and conditions as he had given it to A.;" and if B. should die and leave no son, the testator, after making a provision for his daughters, if any, gave the estate "to the first, second, and other sons of C., upon the same conditions as before mentioned as to A. and B.;" and in case all those sons should die without issue male, then he gave the said estate to the eldest and every other son and sons of D. successively, and their heirs for ever. The testator's widow died in 1762. Upon the occasion of A.'s marriage, in 1766, he conveyed the estate to uses in favour of himself for life, with remainder to his intended wife for life, with divers remainders over. By a feoffment and fine levied in 1798, a conveyance of the estate was made to the use of A. in fee, and a recovery suffered in the same year in which the eldest son, who was afterwards the heir-at-law of A., was vouchee, was declared to enure to the use of A. in fee. A. died in 1803, having devised the estate to his wife for life, with remainder to his eldest son in fee. He left five younger sons. In 1806 a recovery suffered of the estate was declared to enure, in the first place, to confirm the life estate of A.'s widow, and, subject thereto, to the use of his eldest son in fee. By a deed executed in the same year, the younger sons of A. released to his eldest son all remainders and other estates, interests, or claims under the will of the original testator. A.'s widow died in 1835, and his eldest son in 1851, having by his will devised the estate to his son (the vendor) in fee. For the plaintiff it was contended that any construction which gave to A. or to any of his sons an estate of inheritance, whether in fee or in tail, or any construction which led to an intestacy, by which the estate would be undisposed of at the plaintiff's death, would give the plaintiff a good title. The defendant submitted that the original testator's will gave an estate for life to A., with remainder to his sons in succession for life, and vested remainders. The Vice-Chancellor expressed his opinion much in favour of the title, more especially upon the point as to the remainders being contingent, and added—"But I find myself unable to base that opinion upon any general rule of law, or upon any reasoning so conclusive as fully to satisfy my mind that other competent persons may not entertain a different opinion, or that the purchaser, if compelled to take the title, might not be exposed to substantial and not merely idle litigation, or even that he would be free from all possible hazard. Upon these grounds, therefore, I am of opinion that a specific performance ought not in this case to be decreed."

The value of the decision in this case, as a precedent, is considerably increased by the importance of the general observation which the learned judge made upon the principle and limit of the rule, that the Court of Chancery would not force a doubtful title upon a purchaser; to which we now invite the attention of the Profession, and from which it would appear that the principle of the rule is founded upon the right of a purchaser to a marketable title—that is, as the learned judge said, "a title which, as far as its antecedents are concerned, may at all times, and under all circumstances, be forced upon an unwilling purchaser." Having thus stated the principle of the rule, and defined what is a marketable title, the learned judge discussed the question whether the rule under consideration applied only to those cases in which the Court itself entertained doubts upon the title, or whether it extended further to cases in which, although the Court itself might entertain an opinion in favour of the title, it was satisfied that that opinion might fairly and reasonably be questioned by other competent persons; and arrived at the conclusion, upon the authority of several cases which were cited in the judgment, that the rule applied to both classes of cases, and not to the first-mentioned class exclusively—a conclusion which seems to be at once consistent with existing authorities upon the subject, and the soundest principles of justice and reason.

Reviews.

Registration of Assurances Bill: its peculiar System and practical Consequences considered. By JOSEPH THOMAS HUMPHREY, Esq., Barrister at Law. 8vo. pp. 32.

[Stevens & Norton.]

THIS is the first adverse criticism on the Government registration scheme that has been written in a proper spirit. It is perhaps the first that has been written with a clear notion of what the scheme is, and it is certainly the first that has been written fairly and candidly, and not in the spirit of a partisan. Instead of dealing in vague and exaggerated anticipations of expense, trouble, exposure, and mistakes, Mr. Humphrey goes at once into detail, and considers the probable working of the plan in certain special cases, which, in his opinion, would involve consequences that can hardly have been intended or foreseen. We think that Mr. Humphrey has neither given sufficient credit to the foresight of the very able conveyancers, both dead and living, who have been concerned in devising and perfecting the plan, nor estimated at its true value the power proposed to be given to the registrar and judges, of regulating the indexes, and correcting errors and supplying omissions in entries. This power is greatly preferable to minute details in the bill itself.

Objections to the details of the bill must, of course, be directed to the system of indexing, which is its peculiar feature, and is borrowed from Mr. Duval's plan. The principle of the index is shortly this—an assurance by a grantor who does not derive title either mediately or derivatively under an assurance which has been previously indexed is to be entered in the index of titles under a new head; but an assurance by a grantor who derives title under an assurance which has been previously indexed is to be entered in the index of titles under the same head as such given assurance, or under some other head there referred to. After the registry has been in operation for a very long period, every abstract of title will commence with some registered assurance, but in the meantime it will constantly happen that the abstract commences by shewing in some person a title not under a registered assurance, and the question will then be, under what head in the index to search for possible assurances by such person and those claiming under him, up to the time of the registration of the first registered assurance (if any) disclosed by the abstract. A map index affords the most obvious and perfect solution of this question, and was recommended by the majority of the Registration Commissioners; but a map is not at present to be had, and the substitute in the present bill is an index of the names of grantors in each district into which the country is to be divided for the purposes of registration. In that index the first entry relating to each title is to be made under the name of the grantor in the registered assurance, with a reference to the head in the index of titles under which such assurance and the subsequent dealings with the estate are entered. Then, supposing that the registry is started on the 1st January, 1855, and in 1870 an abstract of title shews that on the 1st January, 1855, John Evans alone had power to make a title, and that in 1868 he conveyed to Thomas Jones by a registered assurance, the index of names of grantors will be searched in the name of John Evans from the commencement to 1868; and if there has been no suppression of any registered document, the only relevant entry found there will be a reference to the head in the index of titles under which the assurance to Jones is entered, and under which all subsequent assurances material to a purchaser are entered. If any registered document has been suppressed, the index of names of grantors will disclose it. If, instead of a clear fee simple in one person, the abstract shews that at the starting of the registry there were several persons, each having some particular estate or interest in or limited power over the property, the index of grantors will (if a suggestion made below as to indexing unregistered settlements and wills is not adopted) be searched in the name of each person who could in any way have dealt with the title. And this leads us to our author's first suggestion, (for he scarcely puts it as an objection), viz. that "since there are cases in which persons having limited interests in land are empowered by public acts of Parliament (as by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 7, or the 1 Will. 4, c. 47, s. 12) to convey the fee and bind all in remainder, it would be necessary, in every case anterior to the entire fee getting upon the index of titles, not to omit to search back in the index of grantors in the name of any person having such limited interest during the period such power might have been exercised by him, although it might be known that by death or otherwise such limited interest had actually determined, since a conveyance of the fee by such person so empowered might, according to the provisions of the bill, be duly registered by an entry in his name alone in the index of grantors." This is no more than is now necessary in Middlesex and Yorkshire. But we anticipate—and we shall presently have to recur to this suggestion—that the registrar will find it expedient, wherever particular or trust estates or interests have been created by any unregistered instrument, (as a settlement or a will), to index that instrument under a separate head in the index of grantors, and to require all assurances by persons claiming under such instrument to be entered under the same head. Multiplicity of searches and omissions in searching will thus be obviated.

Mr. Humphrey anticipates, that as every assurance is to be registered according to derivation of title, investigation of title will become an indispensable preliminary to registration; and he mentions contracts for the purchase of lands, leases, and assignments of leases. But not one purchaser in a thousand would wish to register his contract; and if he did, an abstract would be demanded, and the possibility of an erroneous registration and consequent loss in any one of those few cases may be safely disregarded. With respect to long leases, no doubt, if lessees will not trust to the lessor's honesty in respect of future acts, as they do to his representations of title, they must call for his immediate title. The risk, after all, is this—that the lessee, waiving an investigation of the lessor's immediate title, is misinformed by the lessor's solicitor (who will be responsible for the misstatement) as to the proper mode of registering the lease, and in consequence of such error is evicted. The possibility of a misregistry from such a cause is scarcely conceivable. In almost every case of an unregistered title, an entry in the lessor's name would be the proper entry. Registration of rack-rent leases not exceeding twenty-one years is not required; and in other cases the lessor's title ought to be shewn. If a man sells the fee simple of a little piece of land for 300*l.*, he almost invariably shews his title; and he should do the same when he grants a building lease, upon which several thousands of pounds may be risked.

The registration of decrees or orders in equity affecting lands "would be by deposit of a memorial setting forth the decree or order, and examined therewith by some officer authorised to give out an office copy, and certified by such officer—a provision which would in all cases give to a defendant the opportunity of completely nullifying the decree or order, by selling to a purchaser for valuable consideration, who should register his conveyance during the interval, of longer or shorter duration, according to circumstances, which may necessarily be occupied in getting the decree or order drawn up and finally passed and entered, and in preparing the memorial in the mode directed. But, in addition to that, registration could not be performed when, as would generally happen, the plaintiff did not possess a sufficient knowledge of the defendant's title to enable him to ascertain how it was derived by him. And yet upon the correct registration of the memorial, with reference to the defendant's derivation of title, would depend the validity of the decree or order, as against any subsequent assurance by the defendant, well registered."

We think that this is the most obviously untenable of all Mr. Humphrey's objections. When a registry is established, conveyancers, equity draughtsmen, and Courts of equity will of course make the necessary alterations in their practice and proceedings. There is no provision in the act for the registry of lis pendens; consequently, (if the suit is registered under the stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 11), up to the time of passing a decree or order, no one can get a title from the defendant without notice of the suit; and with the effect of that notice, up to the time of passing the decree or order, the act will not interfere. An assurance, therefore, executed by the defendant prior to the decree, will confer as infirm a title after the establishment of a registry as it would under the present system. Mr. Humphrey has probably overlooked the terms of the 31st section, which declares the effect of prior registration—"Every assurance by this act authorised to be registered, other than a will, shall (as regards any lands in England to be affected thereby) be void as against any person claiming for valuable consideration under any subsequent assurance, duly registered, unless the prior assurance have been registered in the manner directed by this act before the registration of the subsequent assurance." Under that enactment a decree cannot be invalidated by a prior assurance; and the very remote danger of the defendant committing a contempt of Court, and getting an adverse assurance registered before the registration of the decree, may be obviated by adopting the practice of issuing an injunction, or a writ in the nature of a distringas, to the registrar before the decree is passed. Then, as to the plaintiff's ignorance of the defendant's title, a suit in equity, prosecuted to a decree having the effect of an assurance, is precisely the case in which either a previous knowledge, or a discovery of the true title, may be most certainly counted on.

It is suggested that mortgages by deposit and other securities taken in the hurry of business could not be depended on without registration, founded on an investigation of the title. The objection is not unfounded, but it is of little importance. A lender taking such a security relies on the character of the borrower. A cursory inspection of the most recent document will in almost every case shew the origin of the title sufficiently for the purposes of registration, or, in the few cases in which the title is not so clear, will shew the necessity of a further investigation; and even in those few cases investigation of title for the purpose of registration would be a much simpler and quicker process than an ordinary investigation for the security of a purchaser or mortgagee; and the objection might be met by a provision which would be available for various useful purposes, namely, making it sufficient, as against persons claiming under assurances by the person on whose application a caveat is entered, or by his heirs or devisees, to index the caveat in the index of judgments, &c. This would cause no inconvenience, as caveats are required to be renewed at short intervals, and would give ample time for an investigation of title when necessary. The registrar might also be authorised to give to any person, though not claiming under a registered assurance, a document having the effect of a certificate of registration, (sect. 52), to be indexed in the index of judgments, &c.

Next, as to the cases in which it is suggested mistakes may occur, though a good title is produced and investigated. The assurance must be indexed according to the way in which the title is derived. Now, in a settlement, an ultimate limitation in fee to the settlor would not give him the fee under the settlement, but he would be in of his old estate, derived possibly under no registered document, in which case an assurance by him should be indexed under a new head, but might by mistake be indexed as derived under the settlement. So, nice questions might arise as to equities of redemption, or under the doctrine of merger, powers, &c.

Here, again, we must ask, what is the value of the objection? The possibility of mistake from inadvertence or want of skill in dealing with real property is unfortunately inseparable from our artificial system of conveyancing, and meets us at every turn; but mistakes of the kind suggested are extremely improbable. The necessity of registering according to the derivation of title would be universally known, and the instructions to be issued by the Registrar-General would point out the rocks and shoals; but cases of doubt or difficulty would be extremely rare, and where they did occur, the advice of the registrar or of counsel would be taken; and the odds against harm being done would be the improbability of the mistake multiplied by the improbability of a subsequent fraudulent and effectual alienation. So, in other cases, where by stipulation the investigation of title is limited, no error can possibly occur, unless an assurance has been registered, and the choice is to be made between registering the title as derived under such assurance, and registering it as derived under some document registered before the opening of the registry. It is difficult even to imagine a case in which, if any documentary evidence, however limited, were produced, it would not enable a purchaser to register correctly.

We now come to the consideration of assurances of a sweeping character, affecting the whole of the grantor's lands, or otherwise binding land without identifying the parcels, as, assignments for the benefit of creditors, settlements, conveyances on the appointment of new trustees under settlements, &c. We agree with the Registration Commissioners and the Real Property Commissioners in thinking that some restriction on the present power of conveying and charging lands by sweeping description is desirable; but without insisting on that, the suggestion made above as to indexing caveats with judgments, &c., may be referred to as completely providing for such cases. In debtor and creditor transactions a judgment would alone be sufficient security against the consequences of any omission in registration. With respect to marriage settlements, it may deserve consideration whether the index of wills should not be made an index of wills and settlements, or rather, which would diminish the number of searches, whether all assurances capable of having a sweeping operation (including bankruptcies, &c.) should not be indexed together. The difficulty with respect to conveyances on changes of trustees, &c. can only exist where the trustees are entitled under sweeping clauses in settlements or wills, and at the time of the change the particulars of the trust estates are not known—a case which cannot occur very often, and involving little risk when it does occur. It may be perfectly met, however, either by a general index of sweeping and indefinite assurances, or by the adoption of our suggestion, that all assurances by persons deriving title under an unregistered will or settlement should be entered in the index of names of grantors under the head of the will or settlement.

We pass over some further remarks on the registration of decrees in equity, as we have substantially answered them by anticipation. Our suggestion as to the indexing of assurances under unregistered wills and settlements will completely meet Mr. Humphrey's grand objection, that decrees, orders, and acts of Parliament binding the interests of persons unknown or unborn, who may become entitled under contingent or executory limitations, cannot possibly be registered at once and for all time.

Again: we are asked to suppose—"what might be no uncommon case—a subsequent assurance deriving title under a prior assurance, to be first registered by the proper entry in the index of grantors and carried to its head of title, and afterwards the prior assurance to be registered in the index of grantors, and carried, as it must be, to its separate head of title; under which of these two separate heads of title is a third assurance, deriving title under both of them, to be registered?" We differ from Mr. Humphrey, and think that the case of a person taking the precaution of registering his own assurance, without enforcing the prior registration of that under which his grantor claims, (see sect. 24 of the bill), would be extremely uncommon; but it is obvious, that if the case did occur, the registrar would exercise his power of altering the indexes, by consolidating the two heads in the index of titles.

As to evidence of registration. Due proof of the derivation of title "would always be necessary whenever the fact of due registration was litigated or had to be proved. Thus, in order to establish the due registration of a deed, it might be necessary to prove that the grantor in the deed in question was heir to "the grantee in the deed under which he derived title; and this through several descents, which might be attended with more or less difficulty. That illustration, though a simple one, is sufficient to shew in a strong light the inconvenience of the system in regard to judicial proceedings, when to prove the mere fact of due registration would require nothing short of 'all the evidence, documentary or otherwise, necessary to establish the derivation of title.'"

We almost doubt whether we should formally answer an objection so trifling and so little in keeping with the rest of the pamphlet. If the registry in any degree answers the expectations of its contrivers, there will scarcely ever be such a thing as a contest on the question of registration, between two persons, each claiming under a registered document; and we may with good consciences leave the fates to settle the quantum of evidence to be called for when such a question arises. The reported cases on points of all kinds, under the local acts from the time of Queen Anne, do not exceed thirty, and those on the Irish Act are very few; and it must be observed, that if a contest of the kind suggested should arise, the claimant under the instrument last registered would have to make out his case.

We have now gone through all Mr. Humphrey's objections founded on the presumed working of the principle of the bill, and we think the result entitles us to point to his pamphlet as a valuable testimony to the soundness of the plan and the completeness of the bill; for no one who reads the pamphlet will fail to perceive in it signs of care, learning, and acuteness sufficient to have led its author to the detection of any serious defect in the bill, if such had existed.

Mr. Humphrey concludes with some miscellaneous suggestions on matters of detail. He thinks, and we agree with him, that a stranger should not have power to register an equitable mortgage without producing a memorandum signed by the mortgagor.

We do not share in Mr. Humphrey's apprehension of mischief from the sanction given by the bill to agreements for the mere registry of declarations of trust or other documents. It is not to be expected that such agreements will be entered into without due consideration; and the power of entering inhibitions seems to be sufficient to obviate any inconvenience that might otherwise result from an inconsiderate agreement not to register. Still less do we fear mischief from the provision for issuing certificates of registration, (sect. 52), intended merely to facilitate secret equitable mortgages, but which might, Mr. Humphrey fears, "enable parties almost entirely to elude the main object of the act, by dealing with such certificates of registration for other purposes than those intended, and making them subservient to the protection of any unregistered assurance." Why not? How could such a dealing be an evasion of the act, of which the main object is—not registration, but—protection? It would be the beginning of Mr. Wilson's excellent plan.

We shall not re-open the discussion of the distinction between notice and fraud. Mr. Humphrey is an advocate for a registry of some kind; and no registry can be established to any purpose without abolishing the doctrine of notice, leaving questions of fraud open. Has he forgotten the Ship Registry Acts?

We have no space to enter into the question of caveats. Mr. Humphrey seems to have overlooked the provision for the frequent renewal of caveats.

Mr. Humphrey asks, "whether there be any good reason for abolishing the protection of the legal estate, and tacking, as between unregistered assurances, and as regards copyholds and other lands exempted from the act?" We think there is, but have not room to discuss the question.

Correspondence.

We have received the following communication from the learned author of the pamphlet on the "Cost-book System:"—

Mr. Joseph N. Higgins presents his compliments to the Editor of THE JURIST. Referring to the note appended to the very fair and liberal review of his pamphlet on "The Gold Companies," &c., in to-day's JURIST, in which it is said, that what purports to be a second edition is not even a reprint of the first, Mr. Higgins begs he may be excused for mentioning, that whatever little claim it may have to the honours of a second edition, it is, at all events, a reprint, as may be seen from two or three trifling differences in the copies sent herewith. He believes there are a few others which he cannot turn to at the present moment.

Mr. Higgins fears that the note may be by some supposed to be an imputation, and that is the only ground on which he thinks himself justified in advertising to a statement in a review. It appears to insinuate a species of chicanery or misrepresentation, which Mr. H. feels assured the Editor of THE JURIST had no desire to suggest, and which is wholly unfounded on fact.

77, Chancery-lane, June 25, 1853.

[We did intend by our note to suggest misrepresentation, and are sorry that we did not more distinctly express our meaning, which was, to censure the publisher, and the publisher only. We had not, and have not, the slightest suspicion that Mr. Higgins was cognizant of the misrepresentation. He is mistaken in supposing that his second edition is a reprint of the first. It is printed from the original forms, with a few corrections of typographical errors that appear in the earlier copies, and the removal of a few battered letters and "wrong founts." But enough of those tell-tales remain to confirm our inference from the general identity of the lines and pages in the two editions that both have proceeded from the same setting up. A "new edition," however, means, not merely a reprint, but a reprint with alterations. If Mr. Higgins has been charged by his publisher for a reprint, we advise him to look to it.—Ed.]

PROFESSIONAL GENTLEMEN, desirous of acting as AGENTS to a well-established Life Assurance Office, are requested to address S. D., No. 1, Edith Grove, New Brompton, London.

TO SOLICITORS AND COPYHOLDERS.

Now ready, price 1s.

SUGGESTIONS AND PLAN, with Tables, for the ESTABLISHMENT OF COPYHOLD ENFRANCHISEMENT AND IMPROVEMENT SOCIETIES. By ARTHUR SCRATCHLEY, M.A., Author of "A Treatise on Benefit Building Societies," &c.

C. Mitchell, 12, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street.

Loans granted to facilitate the enfranchisement and improvement of copyhold and life leasehold property, by the Western Life Assurance Society, 3, Parliament-street, London.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1834.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

ADVANTAGES.

EXTENSION OF LIMITS OF RESIDENCE.—The Assured can reside in any part of Europe, the Holy Land, Egypt, Madeira, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in most parts of North and South America, without extra charge.

MUTUAL SYSTEM WITHOUT THE RISK OF PARTNERSHIP.

The small share of Profit divisible in future among the Shareholders being now provided for, the Assured will hereafter derive all the benefits obtainable from a Mutual Office, with, at the same time, complete freedom from liability—thus combining, in the same office, all the advantages of both systems.

The Assurance Fund already invested amounts to £50,000, and the Income exceeds 136,000l. per annum.

CREDIT SYSTEM.—On Policies for the whole of Life, one-half of the Annual Premiums for the first five years may remain on credit, and may either continue as a debt on the policy, or may be paid off at any time.

LOANS.—Loans are advanced on Policies which have been in existence five years and upwards, to the extent of nine-tenths of their value.

BONUSES.—Five Bonuses have been declared: at the last, in January, 1852, the sum of 131,125l. was added to the Policies, producing a Bonus varying with the different ages, from 24 to 55 per cent. on the Premiums paid during the Five Years; or from 5l. to 12l. 10s. per cent. on the sum assured.

PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Policies participate in the Profits in proportion to the number and amount of the Premiums paid between every division; so that if only one year's Premium be received prior to the books being closed for any division, the Policy on which it was paid will obtain its due share. The books close for the next division on the 30th June, 1856; therefore those who effect Policies before the 30th June next will be entitled to one year's additional share of Profits over later assurers.

APPLICATION OF BONUSES.—The next and future Bonuses may be either received in cash, or applied, at the option of the Assured, in any other way.

NON-PARTICIPATION IN PROFITS.—Assurances may be effected for a fixed sum at considerably reduced rates, and the premiums for Term Policies are lower than at most other safe offices.

PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF CLAIMS.—Claims paid thirty days after proof of death, and all Policies are indisputable, except in cases of fraud. Invalid Lives may be assured at rates proportioned to the increased risk.

Policies are granted on the lives of persons in any station, and of every age, and for any sum on one life from 50l. to 10,000l.

Premiums may be paid yearly, half-yearly, or quarterly, and if the payment of any Premium be omitted from any cause, the Policy can be revived within fourteen months.

The Accounts and Balance-sheets are at all times open to the inspection of the Assured, or of persons desirous to assure.

Tables of Rates and Forms of Proposal can be obtained of any of the Society's Agents, or of

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Resident Secretary.

LONDON, JULY 9, 1853.

In dealing with the subject of evidence, the Common-law Commissioners have adopted the most liberal views which have been floating about the minds of the public, and of a portion of the Profession, since the time when Jeremy Bentham called serious attention to the subject. There is no branch of our laws more interesting or more important than that which relates to the discovery of truth, and there is not one in which more substantial reforms have been effected of late years. Arbitrary impediments to the admission of documentary evidence, and to the extraction of truth from the mouths of witnesses, have been, or are in a fair way of being, removed. The distinction which exists between the admissibility and the credibility of evidence is recognised and acted upon. But a short time ago witnesses were excluded on the grounds of interest and of crime: now these form objections only to their credibility; the very parties to a suit are witnesses; while it is proposed to examine husband and wife for and against each other, except as to communications between them. The sole causes of incompetency which now remain are from defect of understanding and of religious principle. A curious illustration of the tendency, in modern times, to narrow rather than to extend the former ground of exclusion was afforded by the case of Reg. v. Hill, (15 Jur., part 1, p. 470), in which the Court held a lunatic to be a competent witness to speak to those matters to which his delusion did not extend.

VOL. XVII.

Z

With reference to the religious sanction, at present, evidence is received only upon oath or affirmation, and a witness, on presenting himself, may be asked whether he believes in a state of reward and punishment; if he answer in the negative, he is excluded from giving evidence. The Commissioners are averse to the abolition of judicial oaths, but think that an individual, refusing from conscientious motives to be sworn, should be allowed to affirm, although he may not belong to the Quakers, the Moravians, or the Separatists, (to whom the exception is at present limited), provided that the judge is satisfied of the sincerity of the objection. At present he may be committed, and the party calling him be deprived of his evidence. "In principle, there does not appear to be any reason why the same regard which is had to the scruples of a body of persons should not be extended to those of an individual. The only difficulty arises from the danger of abuse; religious scruples might be simulated for the particular occasion, in order to enable the witness to give false testimony, without committing, as he might suppose, the sin of perjury. But we think there are very few minds to which such a distinction would suggest itself, and a person capable of resorting to such a subterfuge would probably not be very scrupulous as to deposing falsely under the sanction of an oath." Upon the more general branch of this question, the Commissioners doubt whether the religious sanction should be made the indispensable condition of testimony in cases where that sanction is admitted to have no existence; and although they have been unable to agree in any recommendation on this point, they state the strongest reasons for relaxing the rule. They put the following case:—"A witness is produced whose testimony is essential to one of the parties to the suit. He is examined as to his religious belief, and at once admits that he has no belief in a state of rewards and punishments. As the rule now stands, he would be excluded, yet his disbelief is not the fault of the party calling him, and to whom his testimony is essential. The penalty of the unbelief of the witness is paid, not by himself, but by the innocent suitor. Under these circumstances, it has been argued, that though the evidence, if received, would be wanting in the important sanction of religion, it would, on the other hand, still possess the not inefficacious sanctions of morality and law, and there would be the additional security for truth arising from the admission itself, on which the witness is now excluded; for it is said that nothing but a sense of truth would induce a man to admit, in a court of justice, a disbelief which must render him odious in the eyes of the mass of his fellow-men."

As we enlarge the sphere of admissibility of evidence, it becomes essential, at all events, not to narrow the tests of its credibility; and it was upon this, among other reasons, that we strongly objected to the decision of the Court of Common Pleas in Macdonnell v. Evans, (see 16 Jur., part 2, p. 21), which was professedly founded on the rule in The Queen's case, namely, that when a witness is asked, in cross-examination, concerning statements which have been made by him, if they are contained in a letter or other writing, the cross-examining counsel must produce the document as his evidence, and have it read, in order to found any questions to the witness upon it. The learned Commissioners notice this rule, and recommend a contrary course, with the limitations, that if it is intended to contradict the witness by the writing, his attention should, before doing so, be called to those parts which are to be used for that purpose; and also, that the judge, if he deem right, may require the writing to be produced for his inspection, to be dealt with by him as he thinks fit. The effect of this alteration will be to allow a cross-examination of a witness as to matter contained in his depositions, without first putting them in, or making them a part of the prisoner's case—a most salutary alteration, which will tend greatly to a full elucidation of all the facts, and to the protection of innocence.

In the cross-examination of an adverse witness, he is often asked whether he has not made statements different from those to which he has deposed in court. If these statements were verbal, and relevant to the subject-matter of the cause, and the witness, having been cross-examined concerning them, so as to afford him an opportunity of explanation, denies having made them, evidence may be adduced to prove that he did make them; but it is doubtful whether this can be done if the witness neither denies nor admits the statement—as if he says he does not recollect having made them, or the like. (See Crowley v. Page, 7 Car. & P. 791; Pain v. Beeston, 1 Moo. & R. 20; and Long v. Hitchcock, 9 Car. & P. 819). The Commissioners think that such contradictory evidence should be admitted in both cases.

The question, how far a party may discredit his own witness who unexpectedly turns against him, is one of considerable moment in the conduct of a trial. The party is, of course, not precluded from shewing, by other testimony, what the witness has negatived; but the weight of authority tends to establish that he shall not be allowed to discredit the witness, either by impeaching his character, or by proving that he has made previous statements at variance with those which he has made in the witness-box. The arguments against this ruling, to its full extent, are ably put in 2 Ph. Ev. 525, last ed.; and we may observe, that very many of the suggestions on this and other questions in that excellent work are fully adopted by the learned Commissioners. Their own recommendation is, that the party should be permitted to prove that the witness has made opposite statements, but that, having presented a witness to the jury as worthy of credit, he ought not to be allowed to impeach his character by general evidence.

Another test of the veracity of a witness is to be found in his general character. The law of England protects a witness from answering any question (which, however, may be put to him) where the answer will tend to subject him to a criminal prosecution, a penalty, or a forfeiture. So, with regard to questions which tend to degrade his character, by imputing to him misconduct, not amounting to legal crime, he is protected from answering, according to the better authorities, unless the misconduct has reference to the cause itself. If he does answer, and denies the imputation, his denial is conclusive, and cannot be controverted. The Commissioners recommend that the existing law in this respect should be maintained, except that where the question relates to the conviction of the witness of perjury, or any other form of the crimen falsi, and the witness denies the fact or refuses to answer, the conviction should be allowed to be proved.

STROUGHILL v. ANSTEY, AND FORBES v. PEACOCK.

IN Stroughill v. Anstey (16 Jur., part 1, p. 671; 1 De G., Mac., & G. 635) a testator appointed three persons his executors, gave them a house in Montague-street in trust for his wife's residence during her widowhood, and then for sale, and gave them the residue of his personal estate, and directed them, and the survivors and survivor of them, his executors and administrators, or other the trustees or trustee to be appointed under the provisions thereafter contained, to stand possessed of the residue of the personal estate, upon trust, at such time or times as to them should seem meet, to sell and convert into money all such part thereof as should not consist of money, and to invest the produce of such sale and conversion. They were to be possessed of the said investments and trust monies upon trust to pay the testator's funeral and testamentary expenses and debts; then to pay an annuity to the testator's wife, and to appropriate two legacies of 15,000*l.* each; and the residue was to be in trust for the testator's two sons equally, and to be transferred to them at the age of twenty-five. G. R. Anstey, one of the sons, was to become a trustee at the age of twenty-five, and there was a provision for the appointment of new trustees. The will contained the following receipt clause:—"I declare that the person or persons who from time to time shall become the purchaser or purchasers of the said house in Montague-street, and who shall pay his, her, or their purchase money or monies to the trustee or trustees for the time being of this my will, or who now have or hath, or from time to time shall or may have, all or any part of the said trust monies, subject to the bequests and trusts of this my will, in his, her, or their hand or hands, or upon securities to be given by him, her, or them, shall not be obliged or required to see to the application of such purchase money or monies, or any part thereof, or the application or disposition of the same monies, stocks, funds, securities, &c., and that the receipt of the acting trustee or trustees shall be a good discharge for the said purchase or trust monies, or any part thereof." The trustee died in 1826; one of the trustees named in the will disclaimed the trusts by deed; the third proved the will, and on the testator's son, G. R. Anstey, attaining twenty-five, was joined by him in the office, and afterwards died, when C. W. Hobson was appointed by G. R. Anstey to be his co-trustee. Part of the residuary estate consisted of two leasehold houses in Tavistock-square, to which the testator was entitled by contract, and they were afterwards assigned to the acting executor. In 1842, Hobson and Anstey borrowed 2800*l.* on the security of a deposit of the title deeds relating to those houses, and executed articles of agreement, in which they were described as the acting trustees of the will, and by which they covenanted to repay the loan, with interest. The money was received by Hobson, and applied by him to his own use, and he afterwards absconded to America. On a claim by the mortgagees, seeking the benefit of their security, Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, V. C., made an order in their favour; but, on appeal, Lord St. Leonards, C., dismissed the claim, but, in consideration of the hardship of the case, not with costs, and directed the plaintiffs to deliver up the title deeds, but not the articles of agreement.

His Lordship considered that the will gave the trustees a general power to give discharges for trust monies. He added—and it is important to note this, to prevent the case from being taken as an authority against an executor's power to mortgage the assets*—that "it was quite clear that the legal estate became vested in the trustees; and that as to the power of the executor, it was entirely at an end." There can be no doubt on this point. The executor had assented to the bequest upon the trusts of the will, and the loan was made, not to the executor, but to the trustees. His Lordship then remarked on the unusual form of the security, which was not drawn as it ought to have been, if the money had been really intended for the purposes of the trust; but as to that, see Ball v. Harris, (cited below). The decision was founded on the impropriety of a mortgage in any form.

"The first question is†, whether a mortgage was or was not authorised by the trusts of this will; and in addressing myself to this point, it ought, I think, to be considered that in a case where trustees have a legal estate, and are to perform a particular trust through the medium of a sale, although a direction for a sale does not properly authorise a mortgage, yet, when the circumstances would justify the raising of the particular charge by a mortgage, it must be in some measure in the discretion of the Court whether it will sanction that particular mode or not‡. It may be the saving of an estate, and the most discreet thing that can be done; and as the legal estate would go*, and as the purposes of the trust would be satisfied, I think it impossible for the Court to lay down, that in every case of a trust for sale, to raise particular sums, a mortgage might not, under circumstances, be justified as a general rule. However, there can be no difficulty in saying that a mortgage, under a mere trust for conversion out and out, is not a due execution of that trust; and looking at the nature of the property in the present case, which was leasehold, and which, as being varying property, would, as a matter of course, be directed to be converted into money, when under a general gift it was to go to different parties having different interests, it is impossible to say that this Court could allow the property to remain unconverted under an absolute trust for conversion out and out, and the trustees to deal with it as if it were property that was to be enjoyed in specie. In the present instance, the trustees went on receiving the rents, and accounting to the persons who were entitled to the benefit of the purchase money of the property producing the rents, and this was done when the will contained a trust that with all convenient speed after the testator's death† the property should be converted out and out, not simply for the purpose of paying a charge which might be more conveniently raised by a mortgage, but for the purpose of conversion. One of the objects of the conversion was to pay the debts; but there were other and final objects which rendered a conversion out and out absolutely necessary—namely, the dedication of the trust monies to raise particular sums, according to the testator's will; and therefore to continue the property unconverted was to set aside the testator's will, instead of executing the trusts of it."

That there were particular sums to be raised might be, as was pointed out in the commencement of the judgment, a reason rather in favour of a mortgage than against it, as the sums might be required at a time when a sale would be inexpedient. The true grounds of the decision were, first, that the property was leasehold, and therefore the trust for conversion as soon as conveniently might be was more material than it would have been if the property had been permanent. Time was "of the essence" of the trust. And, secondly, that the transaction did not appear on the face of it, or to the mortgagees, as a transaction which could possibly be necessary or proper for the due administration of the trusts. It was not pretended that the money was wanted for debts, or to make up the amount of the legacies; and as to debts, the executor was not a party. But if there had been shewn to the mortgagees a reasonable ground for believing that the money was then required either for debts or for the legacies, we conceive that, notwithstanding the breach of trust in delaying the conversion, the mortgage might have been supported. Though a sale ought to have been made long before, yet a sale for the purpose of that immediate exigency might be inexpedient. This will appear more clearly if for the leaseholds we substitute freeholds of inheritance, charged with debts and legacies, and subjected to an imperative trust for conversion. In that case, if there were no special circumstances, (such as existed in Walker v. Shore, (19 Ves. 387)), there would be great difficulty in making the trustees answerable for delaying the sale. Certainly neither the decision nor the judgment of the late Lord Chancellor in Stroughill v. Anstey involves the conclusion that a mortgage of the freeholds, in the case we have supposed, made within * See Mead v. Orrery, (3 Atk. 239); Scott v. Tyler, (Dick. 724); M'Leod v. Drummond, (17 Ves. 154); and Andrew v. Wrigley, (4 Bro. C. C. 138).

† We cite this part of the judgment from De G., Mac., & G. The report in the Jurist is fuller.

‡ We presume that this means that the Court may in certain cases recognise as valid a mortgage made by trustees for sale on their own responsibility, without previously obtaining the sanction of the Court.

* We confess our inability to understand the materiality of the legal estate passing by the security.

† Not so; the trust was, "at such time or times as to them should seem meet, to sell," &c. The Jurist report states this part of the judgment thus—"Here is a trust which means, that with all convenient speed," &c.

a year or two after the testator's death, would be improper. It is true that a mortgage is a transaction which can be more easily kept from the knowledge of the cestuis que trust than a sale even by private contract, and so far it is more available for the purposes of fraud, but that is not a sufficient reason for fettering the discretion of trustees in the performance of their office. Circumstances may unquestionably occur which would justify a trustee in mortgaging an estate for the payment of debts or legacies, though his trust is imperative to sell it. Within a year or two from the testator's death, he would clearly do right to avoid what might appear to him to be an unfavourable market. Can it make any difference that he has delayed the sale for ten or even twenty years? Even if such delay were a clear breach of trust, it might still, at any given moment, be disadvantageous to sell, and then, we submit, a mortgage, even of leaseholds bequeathed in trust for absolute conversion, might be justifiable for the purpose of satisfying a charge.

In Mills v. Banks, (3 P. Wms. 1), Lord Macclesfield, C., referring to the trusts of a term for raising portions, said that a power to sell implies a power to mortgage, which is a conditional sale; though he thought that in the case before him the trust was to raise the portion out of the annual rents. In reference to that observation, Lord Langdale, in Haldenby v. Spofforth, (1 Beav. 395), said, "This I conceive to mean, that when it is intended to preserve the estate then under a direction for sale, a mortgage will sufficiently answer the purpose." So that the dictum, as Lord St. Leonards points out, does not go beyond what was laid down in Stroughill v. Anstey, where, after referring to, and apparently condemning, the generality of Lord Cottenham's dictum in Ball v. Harris, (cited below), Lord St. Leonards said, "My own opinion is, that, generally speaking, a power of sale out and out, for a purpose or with an object beyond the raising of a particular charge, does not authorise a mortgage; but that where it is for raising a particular charge, and the estate itself is settled or devised subject to that charge, then it may be proper, under the circumstances, to raise the money by mortgage; and the Court will support it as a conditional sale, as something within the power, and as a proper mode of raising the money."

The case of Orford v. Albemarle (12 Jur., part 1, p. 811; 17 L. J., Ch., 390) is consistent with the dictum of Lord St. Leonards. There estates in Dorsetshire had been conveyed to trustees, upon trust, at the request of A. and B., or of the survivor of them, or, after the death of such survivor, at the discretion of the trustees, to sell, and to be possessed of the purchase monies upon the trusts declared by a deed of even date. By the deed of even date estates in Norfolk were settled, and the proceeds of the sale of the Dorsetshire estates were directed to be applied in the payment of certain sums of money, some of which were charged on the Norfolk estates, and any surplus of the proceeds of the sale was to be laid out in the purchase of lands, to be settled to the same uses as the Norfolk estates; and the rents and profits of the Dorset estates, until sold, were to go with the rents and profits of the settled estates. The late Vice-Chancellor of England, at the request of the surviving tenant for life, made a decree authorising the trustee to raise the sums charged on the Dorset estates by a mortgage of those estates.

In Haldenby v. Spofforth (1 Beav. 390; 3 Jur. 241) the testator gave his residuary real and personal estate to trustees, upon trust, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, to sell his real estate, and such parts of his personal estate as should not consist of money, with power to give discharges for the purchase money. The proceeds of the real and personal estate, and the rents, issues, and profits of the real estate until sale, were charged with the payment of debts and of a legacy of 3000*l.*, of which the income was given to the testator's wife for her life; and of legacies of 1200*l.* to each of his daughters, payable at twenty-one; and the residue was given to his sons. The will contained powers of maintenance and advancement. The trustees were also executors. The testator died in 1815. In 1822, the acting executors and trustees, together with G. S., a new trustee, (who had married the widow, and was appointed a trustee in the place of one who had disclaimed), made a mortgage in fee of part of the real estate, for securing 1600*l.*, which mortgage was expressed to be made in exercise of the powers contained in the will. The report states that the bill was filed by two of the daughters, whose legacies remained unpaid, and that the question was, whether the mortgage was valid; but it does not state that the money had been misapplied. The mortgagee, by his answer, stated his belief that the 1600*l.* was received by G. S., and by him applied to the purposes of the trusts of the will. It was contended, on the authority of Mills v. Banks, that the power to sell authorised a mortgage; and on the authority of Allan v. Backhouse, (2 V. & B. 65), that the charge of the debts on the rents and profits was of itself sufficient to justify the mortgage. But Lord Langdale, M. R., held, that as there was a clear direction to have a sale out and out, the mortgage had not got a valid title. That case, therefore, went far beyond the decision in Stroughill v. Anstey, and it was distinctly approved of in that case.

Ball v. Harris (4 My. & C. 264) was decided a few months before Haldenby v. Spofforth, but does not appear to have been cited in that case. There the testator gave his real estate, subject to a general charge of debts, and the residue of his personal estate, to trustees, upon trust for his wife and daughter successively for life, and then for his granddaughter absolutely, and in case of her death under age, and after the death of the tenants for life, upon trust for sale and distribution among the testator's next of kin; and the trustees were authorised to sell the real estates at any time, with the consent of the tenants for life, and to give discharges, and to re-invest in the purchase of land, and again to sell, &c. The trustees and the wife were appointed executors. The testator died in 1828. In 1831 the acting executor and trustee, with the consent of the widow and daughter, borrowed 600*l.* for the purposes of the will, on the security of a deposit of the title deeds relating to real estate, which they had purchased under the trusts of the will. After the bankruptcy of the trustee the mortgagee filed a bill to enforce his security against the estate, and he had a decree in his favour. It does not appear that the money had been misapplied. Lord Cottenham, C., affirmed the decree, on the ground that the charge of debts authorised the trustee to sell, as was held in Shaw v. Borrer, (1 Kee. 559). His Lordship added, "That being my opinion as to the effect of the charge of the debts upon the estate, it is unnecessary to advert to the express power to sell with the approbation of the widow and daughter, (both of whom are parties to the deposit of the deeds with the plaintiff), for it cannot be doubted but that the purchased lands are subject to the same trusts as the land devised; and this disposes of the second point," [viz. whether the purchased lands were subject to the charge of debts. From this it appears that Lord Cottenham thought that the express power of sale would have authorised a mortgage.]

"The third point is equally untenable, viz. that the right of the trustee to sell did not authorise the mortgage. So long ago as the case of Mills v. Banks, in 1724, it seems to have been assumed as settled, that 'a power to sell implies a power to mortgage, which is a conditional sale;' and no case has been quoted throwing any doubt upon that proposition. But this is not a mere power to sell; it is a trust to raise money out of the estate to pay debts. It would, indeed, be most injurious to the owners of estates charged if the trustee could effect the object of his trust only by selling the estate.

"This view of the case makes it unnecessary to consider the observation urged on behalf of the appellant, that three years had elapsed since the death of the testator, and that it was not alleged that the COOL was wanted for the payment of debts. It was not necessary to allege what it was not necessary to prove; and the consequence of holding that the trustee was by the will authorised to sell to pay debts is, that the purchaser was not bound to see to the application of the purchase money."

The case of Ball v. Harris is not inconsistent with Haldenby v. Spofforth, or with Stroughill v. Anstey. Before quitting this part of the subject, we may notice an argument which has been sometimes advanced in favour of the power to mortgage in these cases. It is suggested, that if, in the case of a clear trust for absolute conversion, the trustees sell to one of their own number, the Court will not decree a reconveyance, except on the terms of repaying the purchase money, with interest; and that is, in substance, treating the transaction as a mortgage. But it has never been decided that if a sale is made which is a breach of trust within the knowledge of the purchaser, and the purchase money is misapplied, the cestui que trust cannot recover back the estate without repaying the purchase money. The decisions merely negative the right of the cestui que trust to retain the purchase money and recover the estate. In Stroughill v. Anstey, if the mortgage money, instead of being misapplied, had been invested upon the trusts of the will, the mortgagees would have been declared entitled to the benefit of the investment, to the extent, at least, of their contract.

LONDON, JULY 16, 1853.

OUR readers engaged in Chancery business are aware that before the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, it was a fatal objection to a bill that there was misjoinder of plaintiffs; and this was one of the things which led to the passing of the Winding-up Acts; for as it was held, that if, in a suit between the shareholders of a company, one shareholder sued on behalf of himself and all others except the defendants, and any of the represented shareholders had interests opposed to those of the plaintiff on the record, there was misjoinder; and as the doctrine of representation was not admitted, or at least not at all clearly and generally admitted, as applicable to defendants, it became impracticable to work such a suit, by reason of the great number of parties requisite. To remedy this, the Winding-up Acts were passed: the remedy has, however, proved perhaps worse than the disease. But that is not the question which in this paper we intend to discuss.

The doctrine of misjoinder being inconvenient in ordinary suits, as well as in company suits, the Chancery Amendment Act, 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, has endeavoured to provide for it; and accordingly the 49th section is as follows:—"No suit in the said court shall be dismissed by reason only of the misjoinder of persons as plaintiffs therein, but wherever it shall appear to the Court that notwithstanding the conflict of interest in the co-plaintiffs, or the want of interest in some of the plaintiffs, or the existence of some ground of defence affecting some or one of the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs, or some or one of them, are or is entitled to relief, the Court shall have power to grant such relief, and to modify its decree, according to the special circumstances of the case, and for that purpose to direct such amendments, if any, as may be necessary, and at the hearing, before such amendments are made, to treat any one or more of the plaintiffs as if he or they was or were a defendant or defendants in the suit, and the remaining or other plaintiff or plaintiffs was or were the only plaintiff or plaintiffs on the record; and where there is a misjoinder of plaintiffs, and the plaintiff having an interest shall have died leaving a plaintiff on the record without an interest, the Court may, at the hearing of the cause, order the cause to stand revived, as may appear just, and proceed to a decision of the cause, if it shall see fit, and to give such directions as to costs or otherwise as may appear just and expedient."

Under that section a decision has been arrived at in a case of Clements v. Bowes, before Sir R. T. Kindersley, V.C., on the 23rd June, 1853, (not yet reported), which, if it is supported and followed, will have probably the effect of bringing back company suits to the Court of Chancery, and to a great extent preventing future winding-up cases. In that case, the plaintiff, a shareholder in a company, sued on behalf of himself and all others, except the defendants, (who were the members of what was termed the finance committee, and had acted as agents of the committee of management), for a special account of the deposits received by them, and a distribution of what should be found due on taking such account; the company being one of those in which the bill had been thrown out. Among others, the objection was taken that a certain portion of their deposits had been returned to the shareholders, under an arrangement, by which they were to keep so much, at any rate; that the majority had acquiesced in that, and did not desire to disturb it; that if the account sought was taken, the result would be, that the portions so returned must be refunded; that the plaintiff did not and could not offer to refund on behalf of those whom he affected to represent; in fact, that the interests of the plaintiff represented and the plaintiff on the record were not identical, and that there was misjoinder. It was objected also that there were certain shareholders who, under special circumstances, had had the whole of their deposits returned; and their interest was clearly adverse to the plaintiff's. But Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., held, that admitting there was misjoinder, the 49th section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, applied; that it applied as well to a case where some of the plaintiffs were not actually on the record, but only plaintiffs by representation, as to a case where all the plaintiffs are actually on the record; and accordingly the Vice-Chancellor, treating the shareholders represented and alleged to have adverse interests as defendants, disposed of the objections suggested on their behalf, so far as to make an immediate decree for an account, with a declaration, however, that the particular class, who had received back their whole deposits, should be served, and have liberty to attend at chambers.

We confess we should have thought, in the absence of decision, the act did not intend that the Court should treat plaintiffs as defendants, except when they were actually on the record, so that they might actually appear and be heard as defendants; otherwise the effect is, that a decree is made ex concessis against the interest of parties who are not heard, except by co-defendants, who may either misunderstand the real nature of their objection, or may be in collusion with the plaintiff on the record.

The result, however, of Clements v. Bowes will be to clear away the great difficulty in a company suit; because it follows, that in most cases now sent, under winding-up orders, to the Master's office, a very small number of parties will be sufficient on the record; that classes may appear and be represented in chambers; and so the winding-up of a company may take place in a suit, as well as under a winding-up order.

We congratulate the equity judges on the probability of this agreeable accession to their chamber business.

ORDER IN COUNCIL OF JUNE 13, 1853, FOR REGULATING THE PRACTICE IN THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

WHEREAS there was this day read at the board a report from the Right Honourable the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, dated the 30th May last past, humbly setting forth that the Lords of the Judicial Committee have taken into consideration the practice of the Committee, with a view to greater economy, dispatch, and efficiency in the appellate jurisdiction of her Majesty in Council, and that their Lordships have agreed humbly to report to her Majesty that it is expedient that certain changes should be made in the existing practice in appeals, and recommending that certain rules and regulations therein set forth should henceforth be observed, obeyed, and carried into execution, provided her Majesty is pleased to approve the same:

Her Majesty, having taken the said report into consideration, was pleased, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to approve thereof, and of the rules and regulations set forth therein, in the words following; videlicet:—

I. That, any former usage or practice of her Majesty's Privy Council notwithstanding, an appellant who shall succeed in obtaining a reversal or material alteration of any judgment, decree, or order appealed from, shall be entitled to recover the costs of the appeal from the respondent, except in cases in which the Lords of the Judicial Committee may think fit otherwise to direct.

II. That the registrar, or other proper officer having the custody of records in any court or special jurisdiction from which an appeal is brought to her Majesty in Council, be directed to send by post, with all possible dispatch, one certified copy of the transcript record in each cause to the Registrar of her Majesty's Privy Council, Whitehall; and that all such transcripts be registered in the Privy Council-office, with the date of their arrival, the names of the parties, and the date of the sentence appealed from; and that such transcript be accompanied by a correct and complete index of all the papers, documents, and exhibits in the cause; and that the registrar of the court appealed from, or other proper officer of such court, be directed to omit from such transcript all merely formal documents, provided such omission be stated and certified in the said index of papers; and that especial care be taken not to allow any document to be set forth more than once in such transcript; and that no other certified copies of the record be transmitted to agents in England by or on behalf of the parties in the suit; and that the fees and expenses incurred and paid for the preparation of such transcript be stated and certified upon it by the registrar or other officer preparing the same.

III. That when the record of proceedings or evidence in the cause appealed has been printed or partly printed abroad, the registrar or other proper officer of the court from which the appeal is brought shall be bound to send home the same in a printed form, either wholly or so far as the same may have been printed, and that he do certify the same to be correct, on two copies, by signing his name on every printed sheet, and by affixing the seal, if any, of the court appealed from to these copies, with the sanction of the court.

And that in all cases in which the parties in appeals shall think fit to have the proceedings printed abroad, they shall be at liberty to do so, provided they cause fifty copies of the same to be printed in folio, and transmitted, at their expense, to the Registrar of the Privy Council, two of which printed copies shall be certified as above by the officers of the court appealed from; and in this case no further expense for copying or printing the record will be incurred or allowed in England.

IV. That on the arrival of a written transcript of appeal at the Privy Council-office, Whitehall, the appellant, or the agent of the appellant prosecuting the same, shall be at liberty to call on the Registrar of the Privy Council to cause it, or such part thereof as may be necessary for the hearing of the case, and likewise all such parts thereof as the respondent or his agent may require, to be printed by her Majesty's printer, or by any other printer on the same terms, the appellant or his agent engaging to pay the cost of preparing a copy for the printer, at a rate not exceeding 1s. per brief sheet, and likewise the cost of printing such record or appendix; and that 100 copies of the same be struck off, whereof thirty copies are to be delivered to the agents on each side, and forty kept for the use of the Judicial Committee; and that no other fees for solicitors' copies of the transcript, or for drawing the joint appendix, be henceforth allowed, the solicitors on both sides being allowed to have access to the original papers at the Council-office, and to extract, or cause to be extracted and copied, such parts thereof as are necessary for the preparation of the petition of appeal, at the stationer's charge, not exceeding 1s. per brief sheet.

V. That a certain time be fixed within which it shall be the duty of the appellant or his agent to make such application for the printing of the transcript, and that such time be within the space of six calendar months from the arrival of the transcript and the registration thereof in all matters brought by appeal from her Majesty's colonies and plantations east of the Cape of Good Hope, or from the territories of the East India Company, and within the space of three months in all matters brought by appeal from any other part of her Majesty's dominions abroad; and that in default of the appellant or his agent taking effectual steps for the prosecution of the appeal within such time or times respectively, the appeal shall stand dismissed without further order, and that a report of the same be made to the Judicial Committee by the Registrar of the Privy Council at their Lordships' next sitting.

VI. That whenever it shall be found that the decision of a matter on appeal is likely to turn exclusively on a question of law, the agents of the parties, with the sanction of the Registrar of the Privy Council, may submit such question of law to the Lords of the Judicial Committee in the form of a special case, and print such parts only of the transcript as may be necessary for the discussion of the same: provided that nothing herein contained shall in any way bar or prevent the Lords of the Judicial Committee from ordering the full discussion of the whole case, if they shall so think fit; and that in order to promote such arrangements and simplification of the matter in dispute, the Registrar of the Privy Council may call the agents of the parties before him, and, having heard them and examined the transcript, may report to the Committee as to the nature of the proceedings.

And her Majesty is further pleased to order, and it is hereby ordered, that the foregoing rules and regulations be punctually observed, obeyed, and carried into execution in all appeals, or petitions and complaints in the nature of appeals, brought to her Majesty, or to her heirs and successors, in council, from her Majesty's colonies and plantations abroad, and from the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, and from the territories of the East India Company, whether the same be from courts of justice or from special jurisdictions, other than appeals from her Majesty's Courts of Vice-Admiralty, to which the said rules are not to be applied.

STROUGHILL v. ANSTAY, AND FORBES v. PEACOCK.

After deciding the question in Stroughill v. Anstey, Lord St. Leonards proceeded to comment on some of the authorities which had been cited in the argument, but which did not involve or affect the principle of the decision. They were cases in which, there being a charge, and no declaration that the trustees' receipts should be discharges, purchasers or mortgagees were held to be absolved from looking to the application of the money by the circumstance that debts as well as legacies were charged. We have on a former occasion stated and discussed those cases at some length. (See 11 Jur., part 2, pp. 111, 124). They were not material to the decision in Stroughill v. Anstey, which was, not that the mortgagees ought to have seen to the application of their money, but that they ought not to have advanced it at all in the way in which they did advance it. After referring with approval to Watkins v. Cheek, (2 Sim. & S. 199), his Lordship thus stated and commented on Johnson v. Kennett, (6 Sim. 384; 3 My. & K. 630). [We cite from The Jurist report, which is not only fuller, but in this part apparently more accurate than that in De G., Mac., & G.]:—

"Johnson v. Kennett is a very simple case. By the will certain legacies were given, and, subject to those legacies and the payment of his debts and funeral and testamentary expenses, he gave all his real and personal estate to his son in fee. Now, observe that there is a very important distinction in these cases, in my apprehension, whether an estate be given to trustees for a purpose, or whether it be given absolutely to a man subject to the charge. No doubt, by this gift, the son became a trustee, beyond all question, for the payment of legacies and debts; but beyond all doubt, in this court, he did not lose his character of owner: he was not only a trustee for the payment of debts, but he was the owner of the estate, subject to those debts, and therefore he must always, in his dealings, fill the two characters. Well, he settled the estate to uses" [to bar dower, his wife joining in a fine] "as if it were his own property, no doubt, and he then raised money by the sale of the estate; and the question was, whether the sale could be maintained. The Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that it could not, and he went upon the ground that the man was dealing with the property as his own, and that therefore it could not be supposed that it was an execution of the trust for payment of the debts. Lord Lyndhurst reversed that decision, and upon a ground not altogether, I think, satisfactory. He said that the decision below turned upon this—that although there was an original charge of debts and legacies, yet, as the debts had been paid, the legacies then only were charged, and then it became a case within the rule, that the purchaser is bound to see to the application of the money for payment of legacies. The learned judge, in answer to that, said, 'I find no authority for such a proposition; the rule applies to the state of things at the death of the testator; and if the debts are afterwards paid, and the legacies alone are left as a charge, that circumstance does not vary the general rule.' I shall presently make an observation upon that. Now, when Johnson v. Kennett was before the Vice-Chancellor, I see I had to argue against the title, and contrary to my individual opinion. That often happens to counsel. I apprehend that the purchaser there had a good title, but not on the ground stated by Lord Lyndhurst. The son was absolute owner of the estate subject to the debts and legacies. The testator had intrusted him with the estate—that is, had given him the estate beneficially, and intrusted him with the obligation or trust to pay debts and legacies; but that did not take away his ownership. He was at liberty to settle it to uses to bar dower for himself just as he thought proper; and when he sold, he of course sold as owner as well as trustee. Selling, therefore, as the owner was no breach of trust; it was a sale by him in his proper character, but still subject in equity to the payment of the debts and legacies. It is impossible, therefore, to say that that was a breach of trust; he had the power to dispose of the estate by sale if he thought proper, but he was bound to apply the money that he received from the sale of the estate in payment of the debts of the testator; and this Court would compel him to do so, and would not allow him to divert the money to other purposes. But you are not to suppose that he means a breach of trust. I should apprehend, therefore, in a case of that sort, without resorting to any such rule as Lord Lyndhurst resorted to, that that was a perfectly good title in the purchaser." In the other report, Lord St. Leonards is represented as having said that the devisee in Johnson v. Kennett stood in the same position as an heir-at-law, who, being liable to the testator's debts, has power to dispose of the estate. We cannot think that his Lordship intended to make so inaccurate a comparison. The distinction between the liability of real estate as assets, and its liability under a charge, is essential and fundamental, as was pointed out in Ball v. Harris (4 My. & C. 268) and in Pimm v. Insall, (1 Mac. & G. 457). The liability of the heir to the debts, and even the liability of the estate as assets, constitutes no lien on the estate before suit. (Horn v. Horn, 2 Sim. & S. 448; Spackman v. Turnbull, 8 Sim. 260, where the decision would have been directly opposite if the estate had been charged with the debts). If the devises had been compared to an executor who was also a specific or residuary legatee, the comparison would have been just. We have cited the above comment on Johnson v. Kennett for the purpose of shewing that Lord Lyndhurst's notion of the rule, as to the trustee's power of disposition depending on the state of things at the testator's death, is disapproved of by Lord St. Leonards; but we cannot assent to his Lordship's defence of the decision in that case. All the authorities shew, that when a legatee or devisee, who is also executor or trustee, deals with the property as if it were his own, the persons dealing with him, though protected, by the necessity of the case, from the claims of creditors, (Eland v. Eland, 1 Beav. 235; 4 My. & C. 220), are bound to see to the payment of legacies charged on the property. (Cubbridge v. Boatwright, 1 Russ. 549, where a sale by an executor was set aside simply on the ground that he represented himself to have acquired the beneficial title; Hill v. Simpson, 7 Ves. 152; Eland v. Eland, ubi sup.; Rogers v. Rogers, 6 Sim. 364; Watkins v. Cheek, 2 Sim. & S. 199). Now, in Johnson v. Kennett, there can be no doubt that the sale appeared to the purchaser as a dealing by an owner for his own purposes, and not as trustee. The estate had been discharged from the devisee's wife's dower. The devisee was not likely to obtain such a gift from his wife for the benefit of an estate which he intended to sell for the payment of the testator's debts. And the purchaser took a bond of indemnity against the legacies. (See Rogers v. Rogers, 6 Sim. 364).

After noticing and approving of Lord Langdale's decision (or rather dictum) in Page v. Adams, (4 Beav. 269), his Lordship came to Forbes v. Peacock, (11 Sim. 153; 1 Ph. 717).

"I am of opinion," Lord Lyndhurst says, "that if there is a general charge of debts, you must take it as it stood at the death of the testator; and if there were debts then, although they were subsequently satisfied, yet, by reference to the circumstances that existed at the death of the testator, the purchaser is not liable." But then he says, as I understand by the reporter's note, "I do not mean to decide, that if there were no debts at the death of the testator the purchaser is not bound." [The meaning of the reporter's note appears to us to be exactly the reverse, viz. that whether there be debts or not at the testator's death, the purchaser is free; that, in short, (contrary to what appears to be the purport of Lord Lyndhurst's judgment, and to what he said in Johnson v. Kennett, and what Lord Cottenham repeated after him in Eland v. Eland), the rule is a rule of construction, and not dependent on the actual circumstances either at the death or at any other time.] "Now, I cannot follow that distinction. The case must stand upon one of two grounds; either it must stand upon the ground that it is unimportant that the purchaser should know that there are no debts, and then, upon principle, it would be indifferent whether there were no debts at the death of the testator, or no debts at the time of the purchase; or—and this is a ground which is more satisfactory, and which is open to none of these ambiguities—it must stand upon this—that when a testator, by his will, charges his estate with debts and legacies, he has shewn that he means to intrust his trustees with the power of receiving the money, because there may be debts. . . . The power arises from the circumstance that the debts are provided for; but the power does not cease because there are no debts, it being in the very creation of the trust a clear indication amounting to a declaration by the testator that he means, and the nature of the trusts shews he means, that the trustees are alone to receive the money and apply it. In that way all the cases would be reconcilable, and they would stand upon one footing—namely, that if a trust be created for the payment of debts and legacies, the purchaser or mortgagee shall in no case be bound to see to the application of the money." The next extract from the judgment will shew that the reconciliation of the cases is not quite completed even by this rule:—"As to Forbes v. Peacock, it is quite a mistake to suppose that that was a trust executed at a distance of twenty-five years from the time when it arose, for it was executed at the time at which it did arise; that happened to be twenty-five years after the death of the testator."

Lord St. Leonards, therefore, agrees with Lord Lyndhurst in assuming it to be clear, that in Forbes v. Peacock the trustees were not exercising their implied power of sale for the payment of debts, which arose immediately on the testator's death, but were exercising their express power of sale for the purpose of division among the residuary legatees—a power which did not arise until the death of the tenant for life, twenty-five years after the testator's death. We have, therefore, Lord Lyndhurst deciding, and Lord St. Leonards agreeing, that where there is a charge of debts, and in the person whose office it is to satisfy that charge either a fiduciary power to sell for any other purpose, or a general power of disposition as beneficial owner subject to a charge of legacies, the charge of debts is equivalent to an express declaration by the testator that a purchaser from the devisee shall not be liable to see to the application of the money, even though he knows that there are no debts to be paid; in other words, that a charge of debts is an expression of intention with respect to legacies, irrespective of the payment of debts, and in a case where the sale is avowedly made, not under the charge, but under a trust for sale for another purpose. We have on a former occasion given our reasons for thinking that this inference is wholly unwarranted—is not even justified by convenience, and, as Lord St. Leonards admits, was never thought of before the appeal in Forbes v. Peacock*. Up to that time the rule, that where there is a charge of debts, the purchaser is absolved from liability to see to the application of the purchase money, and from inquiring whether the debts are paid or not, was considered to be founded, not on any inference of intention in the testator, but on the necessity of the case, because it would be impossible to satisfy a purchaser, if he had a right to be satisfied on the point. The rule, in short, was a mere application to equitable assets of the rule that always prevailed with respect to legal personal assets, which the law, and not the testator, charges with the debts. Thus, in M'Leod v. Drummond, (14 Ves. 361), Sir W. Grant, M. R., expressly declared that there was no difference between the executor's power to dispose of equitable assets, and his power to dispose of legal assets; and Lord Hardwicke had previously said the same thing, (1 Atk. 463). Now, as to personal assets, we have shewn (11 Jur., part 2, p. 111) that a purchaser from the executor, with notice that the debts are paid, or that the sale is not made for the payment of debts, is bound to see to the payment of legacies charged on those assets, even though the transaction is perfectly regular and justifiable on the face of it, and the purchaser has no reason to suspect that the executor intends to misapply the purchase money. (Crane v. Drake, 2 Vern. 616; Hill v. Simpson, 7 Ves. 152; Cubbridge v. Boatwright, 1 Russ. 549; see Cole v. Muddle, 22 L. J., Ch., 401). We have thus on this important question a distinction established, on no ground of convenience, and in opposition to analogy and principle, between equitable assets and legal personal assets.

* "I must say this for the decisions of Sir L. Shadwell, and it is but fair to do so—that certainly, at the time he gave those decisions, the general feeling of the Profession was in favour of the view which he took. There is no doubt about that."

In Forbes v. Peacock there was no question as to the propriety of the sale; and the doctrine of that case, as explained by the reporter and by Lord St. Leonards, does not affect any such question. We must now take that case to have established (subject to correction in the House of Lords) the following rule of construction, and nothing more—that the charge of debts supplies the power to give discharges for money raised, whenever money is properly raised, whether for payment of debts or for any other purpose; and therefore Lord St. Leonards said, that “people who deal with trustees at a considerable distance of time, without an apparent reason for raising money, in advancing the money must be considered as under some obligation to inquire what the trustees are about. I do not mean at all to incumber or lessen the security of purchasers or mortgagees under trusts; but if, for a great number of years, a trust remains unperfected, and parties are found in possession and receipt of the rents of the property, and then an adverse application is made of the trust property without their concurrence, it may place those who deal with the trustees in a situation of having it established that there was a breach of trust of which they ought to have taken notice.”

A charge of debts and legacies authorises a sale for the payment of legacies only—as a charge of legacies alone would do; and therefore, where trustees take an estate charged with debts and legacies, and are not bound to sell for any other purpose, it would be difficult to sustain any objection to a sale or mortgage on the mere ground of lapse of time, unless the time for raising the legacies has not yet arrived; for there is not the same presumption against the forbearance of legatees as against the forbearance of creditors; and even as to creditors, though there is a presumption that they will promptly seek for payment, it must be remembered that deferred or contingent claims may first become enforceable at an indefinite distance of time from the testator's death. (See Hickling v. Boyer, 3 Mac. & G. 636, and Morse v. Tucker, 5 Hare, 79).

SOLICITORS' AND GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE

SOCIETY, 52, Chancery-lane, London.

At the Seventh Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders, held at the Gray's Inn Coffee-house on Tuesday, the 31st day of May, 1853, William Murray, Esq., in the Chair, it appeared by the Directors' Report, that during the current year 203 Policies had been issued, assuring 93,023*l.*, producing in Annual Premiums 3,058*l.*

That the number of existing Policies was 1,065, assuring.. £480,910
Producing in Annual Premiums .. 16,153

That the Annual Income of the Society was .. 18,548
That a very careful and minute valuation of the assets and liabilities of the Society on the 31st December last had been made, in which each Policy had been separately valued.

That although the Investments had hitherto yielded from 4 to 5 per cent., and might fairly be expected, for many years to come, to produce 4 per cent. at least, the Actuary, in his valuation, had, for the purpose of avoiding exaggeration, assumed the funds of the Society would not be improved at a higher rate of interest than 3 per cent.

That no portion of future profits on existing Policies had been anticipated for this division, although the present value thereof is 41,009*l.* 15s. 5d.

That the total Assets of the Society on the 31st December last were .. £252,288 7 8
And the Liabilities of all kinds .. 212,257 8 3

Shewing a balance in favour of the Society of .. 40,030 15 9
From which deducting Shareholders' paid-up capital of .. 25,000 0 0

A net surplus of .. £15,030 15 9 remained to the credit of the General or Assurance Fund, and was applicable by way of bonus to the different parties interested. Of this surplus 9,770*l.* is to be distributed among the Participating Class of Policyholders, and the residue of 5,250*l.* 18s. 6d. is divisible in equal parts among the Shareholders and those who had introduced assurances to the Society. That the holders of Participating Policies receive no less than 80 per cent. of the profits arising from assurances effected on that scale; and the remaining profits, instead of being, as usual in other companies, appropriated exclusively to the Shareholders, were in this Society divided between the Shareholders AND THOSE THROUGH WHOM POLICIES HAD BEEN INTRODUCED, the Shareholders having by the Deed of Settlement consented to relinquish A MOEITY of their proportion of the profits, with a view to the extension and prosperity of the Office, and without in any manner prejudicing the interest of the Assured.

That the gross Profits which had arisen would enable the Proprietors to declare a Reversionary Bonus of from 1½ to upwards of 2½ per cent. per annum on the amount assured, and equivalent, in some cases, to upwards of 61 per cent. on the amount of Premiums paid; to declare a dividend of 2s. 7½d. per Share on the Shares of the Society, being an immediate Cash Bonus of 10½ per cent. on the paid-up Capital, in addition to the interest of 4 per cent. per annum hitherto paid to the Shareholders; AND ALSO TO DECLARE AN EXTRA COMMISSION OF 72 PER CENT. ON THE COMMISSIONS ALREADY PAID ON THE PREMIUMS RECEIVED FOR ASSURANCES.

CHARLES JOHN GILL, Secretary.

N.B.—The future Divisions will be triennial, and all Policies will be entitled to participate in four-fifths of the Profits after payment of one Premium only, and will be issued free of Stamp Duty to the Assured.

LONDON, JULY 23, 1853.

THE doom of the ecclesiastical courts is suspended for a season, but it is not the less certain. Another session may elapse, but assuredly two sessions will not pass without the remodelling, perhaps the total absorption of those courts.

Of course, upon the subject of the reformation of the ecclesiastical courts various opinions are entertained: some are for sweeping them away brevis manu, as a monstrous nuisance, and transferring all their business bodily to the courts of law; some prefer the Court of Chancery as the whirlpool that is to suck them into its vortex. On the other hand, of those connected with the ecclesiastical courts, some deprecate nearly all interference with them, clinging to them with the fondness with which an eminent conveyancer is said to have clung in years gone by to common recoveries, and devoutly believing that with the dislocation of the ecclesiastical courts must fall the glory of England. There are not wanting for all these different views specious arguments, nor is either of them, separately, wholly devoid of exaggeration and fallaciousness. Let us take, for instance, the arguments of several learned civilians in support of the preservation of the existing system. The evidence on this subject is collected in an able pamphlet by Mr. Pritchard, one of the most eminent, we believe, of the proctors in Doctors' Commons*.

That gentleman says, "There is yet another consideration upon which it appears of the utmost importance to uphold the testamentary jurisdiction of the Courts of Doctors' Commons. In a great maritime and commercial country like Great Britain, the maintenance of a learned and skilful Bar, well versed in the principles of international law, is indispensable, not only to secure a competent tribunal to administer in time of war the law of prize, but also to provide her Majesty's Government at all times with the best legal advice and assistance in the construction and preparation of treaties, and the correct maintenance of its extensive and varied relations with foreign powers. Such a Bar has hitherto always been found amongst the advocates of Doctors' Commons practising in the Court of Admiralty. That Bar has fostered and developed amongst our English civilians talent of the highest order, and produced men of whom their country may well be proud. Foremost amongst these I need only name the late Lord Stowell, whose luminous and eloquent decisions may justly be said to have formed and perfected the prize code of modern nations, and to have earned for him an undying fame. The Bar of the Court of Admiralty, relied upon for these important public results, is mainly supported, in time of peace, by the practice of the testamentary and matrimonial courts of Doctors' Commons. If that practice should be destroyed, or transferred to the Court of Chancery, the consequence would inevitably be, that the Admiralty Bar would cease to attract the talent and industry of first-rate men, and would gradually deteriorate, and ultimately fall into decay—a consequence the more to be deplored since the great improvements that have been made in that court, and the increased number of suitors that have, in consequence, sought its aid."

* Reform of the Ecclesiastical Courts, &c. By W. Pritchard, Esq. Benning, 1853.

And he then refers to the evidence of several learned civilians, of whom we will quote two. Dr. William Adams says, "By such a transfer (the transfer to the Court of Chancery) the Prerogative Court would be abolished altogether. One of the mischiefs ensuing will be this, that it will abolish the Bar of civilians as a separate profession altogether. I can state confidently, from having practised a great many years in the Profession, that the business of the Prerogative Court furnishes nine-tenths of the profits of the advocates in time of peace. Their profits from other sources could not keep them together; and it depends upon keeping that Profession together in time of peace, that the Government has, in time of war, a Profession who can give them competent advice on subjects of a public nature occurring in time of war. If this Bar are permitted to disperse themselves, which they inevitably would do were the Prerogative business taken away, the Government will be in a great difficulty, and without a remedy. On this account alone I think the abolition of the Prerogative Court would be a great public mischief." And Dr. Lushington says, "I think also that without this branch of the business (the testamentary) the Admiralty Court must necessarily be left totally and entirely without any practitioners; and it is then for the Committee to consider whether it would be possible in any other way to supply the deficiency which would be thus occasioned with relation to the very great and important interests which are disposed of in the Admiralty Court during the period of a war. I beg here to observe, that I think no one can exaggerate the importance of the Admiralty Court during the time of war, whether you look at the immense amount of property which is to be disposed of, or you look at the fatal consequences which would necessarily follow from any gross error being committed by the judge, or from any improper practices creeping into the administration of the law at that time. No man acquainted with that subject can, I am sure, overrate the extreme importance of accurate practice and knowledge with respect to that branch of our jurisprudence. Unless some means could be devised whereby a supply of sufficient advocates could be insured during this period, unquestionably a very considerable risk and great injury would arise."

So that here we have three eminent gentlemen, two counsel and one proctor, all contending for the preservation of the testamentary jurisdiction. And why? In order, during time of peace, when the Courts of Admiralty have but little business, to find employment for civilians learned in admiralty matters! If practising in the testamentary courts kept up admiralty learning, there might be something in the argument; but, as the matter stands, the argument is much the same as if one were to contend for employing naval officers during peace on the Stock Exchange, or anywhere else, lest we should lose their valuable services when war comes. That the Government may have, during time of war, a Profession which can give them competent advice on subjects of a public nature occurring during time of war, will depend upon the studies necessary for giving that advice being in themselves, or as connected with other business, such as to attract men of ability. If testamentary business requires as its groundwork such knowledge as qualifies a man for admiralty business, then, whether transacted in Doctors' Commons or elsewhere, whether by an exclusive corps of civilians, or by the general Bar or a portion of it, there will be sufficient men qualified to give the Government advice when the time arrives. If it does not, the preservation of the Prerogative Court will not preserve practitioners qualified for admiralty business.

Mr. Collier's plan, of transferring the whole testamentary jurisdiction to the Courts of common law, appears to us, on the other hand, to be as inconsistent with the spirit of modern legislation as the preservation of the existing courts. The matter in dispute in the contentious litigation of the Prerogative Court is, in principle, the same as the matter in dispute at law, in an issue deviseavit vel non, or in a dispute in equity, whether a deed shall be set aside on the ground of fraud, pressure, or incapacity; the question is always, was a particular instrument executed in proper form? has it the technical qualities that it should have? was it executed by a person having capacity to execute it? Now, these are questions with which the machinery of every superior court is adapted in some way to deal; and if there be in any court, as now constituted, better machinery than in another, the course of modern legislation is not to give exclusive jurisdiction to the one Court, but to improve the machinery of the other.

The only question at this day, in distributing jurisdiction, should be the convenience of the suitor; and that would be best answered by giving the ecclesiastical jurisdiction, which will have to be transferred from the existing courts, indifferently to the Courts of common law and equity. What we should suggest would be, that those Courts should have concurrent jurisdiction in all matters testamentary; that is, that it should be at the option of the parties to commence their litigation in any superior court; and that the cause so commenced should be transferable, at the desire of the parties, from either court to the other, in the same manner as a cause, commenced now in one Vice-Chancellor's court, may be transferred to another. For example, suppose a suit commenced in a court of common law to try the validity of a will—it may chance, that either from the principal witnesses being in London, or from the circumstance of a suit being necessary to administer the trusts of the will, if it is valid, it would be more convenient, when the cause is ripe for hearing, to hear it in Chancery; or, on the other hand, such a cause might be commenced in Chancery, and it might be found, in its progress, that it would be far more convenient to try it at Liverpool, or any other town, when the court of common law is there. In either case the cause should be transferable. But there should be no confining the institution of a suit to any of her Majesty's superior courts.

Our space prevents us continuing this subject; we shall resume it on some future occasion, when it is likely again to be brought before the public.

WHETHER A CHARGE OF DEBTS ON REAL ESTATE AUTHORISES THE EXECUTORS TO SELL.

In the case of Mather v. Norton (16 Jur., part 1, p. 309) a testator made his will substantially in the following terms:—"I appoint F. M. and W. B. to be my executors, and my wife my executrix, in trust to dispose of my property in the following manner, viz. I direct that all my just debts and funeral and testamentary expenses be discharged by my executors and executrix, and the residue of my property, both real and personal, to be held by my executors and executrix for the sole benefit and use of maintaining and educating my children, until my youngest child arrives at the age of twenty-one years. At such time it shall arrive at the age aforesaid, then all my property, both real and personal, whatsoever and wheresoever, to be disposed of by my executors and executrix, and divided amongst my children equally, except my estate in Mellor, which I give to my wife, to hold and enjoy during her life, and at her decease to be sold and disposed of among my children." The widow and her co-executors entered into a contract for the sale of the estate at Mellor, and the purchaser having objected that they had no power of sale, Sir J. Parker, V.C., on a claim for specific performance, held that the executors and executrix had a power of sale, and made a decree for specific performance, with costs. His Honor said this must be taken to be a devise of property in fee to executors, all charged with debts. There was no doubt that the real estate was charged with the debts, and for the purpose of giving effect to that charge the executors must take a present interest in both the real and personal estate. That was a trust that could not be performed without their having the estate, and the exception of the estate at Mellor must be taken to be an exception, not out of the general devise in trust for payment of debts, but out of the devise of the residue to be left after the debts should be paid.

On the other hand, in the case of Doe d. Jones v. Hughes (6 Exch. 223) (which was cited in Mather v. Norton) it was held that the executor did not take a power of sale under a will by which the testator "subjected and made liable all his real and personal estate with the payment of his just debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and charges thereon, and the legacy thereafter bequeathed;" and subject thereto, and to the payment thereof, the testator made several specific devises, but did not dispose of the estate in question. Parke, B., said, "It was contended, on behalf of the defendant, that the effect of a charge of the real estates with debts was to give to the executrix an implied power of sale. But upon a due consideration of all the cases, it is perfectly clear that not one of them bears out that proposition. One class of cases shews, that by a devise to trustees of the real estate charged with the testator's debts, the trustees have thereby imposed upon them the duty of raising money to pay those debts; for as the estate is given to them, they can, through the means of the estate, raise money for the payment of those debts. Another class of cases decides, that if, from the whole purview of the will, it appears to have been the intention of the testator that his real estate should be sold, and the proceeds of that real estate are to be distributed for the purpose for which it is given, which the executors alone by law could perform, then there is an implied power given them by the will to sell the estate, and that the executor, who is to distribute the money, is to sell the estate. Several cases were cited which confirm this proposition, and among them Forbes v. Peacock, (11 M. & W. 637). But upon looking through the cases, not a single authority is to be found which says that a simple charge of the estate with the payment of the debts does more than make a charge upon the estate in the hands of the devisee if the estate is devised, or upon the estate in the hands of the heir-at-law if the estate devolves upon him by the law of inheritance. The only authority which bears the aspect of giving the executor an implied power to sell under such circumstances is the doctrine of Sir L. Shadwell, V.C., in Forbes v. Peacock, which was twice before him, and also before this Court. On one of those occasions the Vice-Chancellor is reported (12 Sim. 541) to have said—'If a testator charges his real estate with the payment of his debts, that prima facie gives his executor power to sell the estate, and to give a good discharge for the purchase money. That was all I decided on the argument of the demurrer.' If that be correctly reported, it would imply that the Vice-Chancellor was of opinion that a simple charge of the estate with payment of debts, without more—without any terms in the will indicating an intention on the part of the testator that the estate should be sold—was an implied authority given to the executor to sell. But that would be a solitary authority, because there is none other to be found that goes to the same extent. But the Vice-Chancellor is merely stating what he decided before, when the case of Forbes v. Peacock was first before him." (The learned Baron then proceeded to shew that the decision on the demurrer in Forbes v. Peacock proceeded on different grounds).

It is apparent that there is some want of harmony between the two cases stated above. In Mather v. Norton the testator certainly did not in terms devise his real estate to his executors in trust to pay debts. He appointed executors "in trust to dispose of my property in the following manner." So far there was no devise of all the real estate, and it is clear that if there had followed only trusts relating to specific estates, no disposition of the real estate generally, and no charge of debts, the trustees would have taken no estate in the realty not specifically mentioned. But there was a subsequent direction to dispose of all the property for division among the children, at a time which had not arrived when the sale took place. That direction satisfied the words at the commencement of the will, "in trust to dispose of my property in the following manner," and rendered it unnecessary to imply an immediate power to sell for debts, in order to give an operation to those words. In fact, those words meant nothing more than this—"In trust to do what they are hereinafter directed to do," or "In trust to execute my will." The power of sale, therefore, if given at all, was given by the direction that the executors should pay the debts, and that "the residue of the property, both real and personal," should be held by them upon the trusts mentioned. Now, that there was a devise of the residue of the real estate to the executors is clear; but the Vice-Chancellor expressly held that it was only the residue left after paying debts; which implies that the devise and trust to sell for payment of debts must be sought in the direction that the executors should pay the debts and hold the residue. So that the decision amounts to this—that a direction to executors to pay debts, coupled with an intimation that the real estate is to be liable to the debts, and a devise of the residue of the real estate, after payment of debts, to the executors, gives them a power of sale for payment of debts; and the distinction between Mather v. Norton and the case in the Exchequer is simply in the circumstance, that in the one case the executors took the legal estate for purposes ulterior to the payment of debts, and in the other case they did not—a distinction alluded to in the judgment of Parke, B. Such a distinction does not seem to be founded on any intelligible principle. When it is considered that the power of the Statute of Wills is sufficient to give effect to every intention of the testator, however imperfectly expressed, or even when merely implied, it must be seen that the decision in Doe d. Jones v. Hughes proceeded upon reasoning which cannot properly be applied to the construction of a testamentary instrument. It is a well-established rule of construction, that effect is to be given to every lawful intention of a testator which can be collected by necessary implication from the words he has used, however informal or incomplete the expression of intention may be. Thus, a devise to the testator's heir after the death of A. gives to A., by necessary implication, an estate for life, if there is no residuary devise which would pass that estate. So, an authority to trustees to sell an estate which is not devised to them, or an expression of intention that they shall sell, implies a devise to the purchaser. Now, when the testator expresses an intention that his real estate shall be applicable to the payment of his debts, he expresses an intention that it shall, if necessary, be sold for that purpose. The difficulty arises from his omitting to say by whom. Now, if he leaves the real estate to descend to his heir-at-law, it is impossible to suppose that he could have meant his heir to sell, for the heir takes neither estate nor office under the will. Yet the testator meant a sale, and in that case it seems to be clear, that the power of sale—though not necessarily the legal estate, (see Hawker v. Hawker, 3 B. & Al. 637)—must be in the person whose duty it is to pay the debts—the executor; for it cannot be supposed that the testator intended a Chancery suit for the purpose of realising the charge. (See Elliot v. Merryman, Barnard. 81). Suppose the will made in articulo mortis, the heir an infant. Again: if the real estate, subject to the charge, is devised in strict settlement, it is equally clear that the power of sale must be in the executors. Why, then, should the power be elsewhere when the legal estate and beneficial interest, subject to the charge, are devised to a person sui juris in fee? Or when, as frequently happens, the whole of the real estate is charged with debts, and then different portions of it are specifically devised to different persons, can it be supposed that the testator intended to intrust the payment of his debts to the various devisees, having conflicting interests—being indeed objects of his bounty, but not being persons in whom he has expressed any confidence as trustees? Again: suppose that part of the real estate is specifically devised, and part descends to the heir, all being charged with debts; that which descends ought to be first applied, but the heir is not contemplated by the will.

Let us now see to what extent this reasoning has been adopted by authority. Lord St. Leonards, in the Treatise on Powers, (vol. 1, p. 139, 7th ed.), states, as a result of the cases, a proposition which goes to the full extent of what we have been urging:—"It appears, therefore, to be settled, that a power in a will to sell or mortgage, without naming a donee, will, if a contrary intention do not appear, vest in the executor, if the fund is to be distributable by him, either for the payment of debts or legacies; and it seems, that whilst the chain remains unbroken, the power, until exercised, will go from him to his executors. (Forbes v. Peacock, 11 M. & W. 630; 12 Sim. 528). And if the produce of the real estate is blended with the personal estate, the power to sell will vest in the executors by implication. (Tylden v. Hyde, 2 Sim. & S. 238)." The authorities amply justify that deduction. (See Shep. Touch. 43; Perk. 547; 15 Hen. 7; 2 Sugd. Pow., App., No. 1; Kei. 436; 2 Leon. 220, pl. 276; Anon., Dy. 371 b; S. C., nom. Milward v. Moore, Sav. 72, where a man excepted out of a devise his manor of Ridgway, which he appointed to pay his debts, and made two executors, and died, and it was held that the surviving executor could sell; S. C., cit. 1 Andr. 145). In Tylden v. Hyde (2 Sim. & S. 238) the substance of the will was as follows:—"The residue of my property, both landed and personal, I desire may be converted into money, lodged in Government securities, and divided into four parts or shares, the interest of one share to be given &c. I request that R. T., and Sir H. M., and Sir T. M., Capt. M., and Sir J. and Major W. T. will act as executors to this my last will and testament." Three only of the executors proved and acted in the trusts of the will; and Sir J. Leach, V. C., held, against a purchaser, that they had power to sell, observing, that where "there is a general direction to sell, but it is not stated by whom the sale is to be made, then if the produce of the sale is to be applied by the executors in the execution of their office, a power to sell will be implied to the executors." (See also, to the same effect, Elton v. Harrison, 2 Swanst. 276, note; Newton v. Bennet, 1 Bro. C. C. 135; Carvil v. Carvil, 2 Ch. Rep. 301; and Blatch v. Wilder, 1 Atk. 420). In Ward v. Dixon (10 Sim. 160) the whole will was as follows:—"Sell all off, both real and personal property, and divide the produce between my wife, M. A. Ward, and my sons and daughters, each to share alike. The law gives the house at T. to the youngest son, but it is my will to sell all. I appoint Mr. R. W., my brother, and my wife, M. A. Ward, my executors." It was held by Sir W. Grant (12 Sim. 536) that the executors could sell the real estate. In Pitt v. Pelham, (1 Ch. Cas. 176; 1 Lev. 304), where the real estate was directed to be sold after the death of the executrix, and the proceeds were not directed to be distributed with the personalty, and there was no charge of debts, the heir was directed to sell; for as the executrix took no power in her lifetime, her executrix could take none. But in Cook v. Fountain (3 Swanst. 593) it was said that the heir was decreed to join, in Pitt v. Pelham, only to avoid scruples and to raise the price. (See Uvedall v. Uvedall, 3 Atk. 118). In Bentham v. Wiltshire (4 Mad. 44) the testator gave an estate to Hannah Barrett for life, provided she did not marry, and after her death he directed it to be sold (without saying by whom) by auction, and he gave the proceeds among certain persons, and appointed Hannah Barrett and another his executors. The tenant for life and her co-executor sold before the time had arrived. All the parties interested in the proceeds joined, but the purchaser required the concurrence of the heir; and Sir J. Leach, V. C., held that the heir was a necessary party, adverting to the fact that the time for sale had not arrived, but mainly relying on the circumstance that the proceeds of the sale were not, in terms or by implication, divisible by the executors. But as the power of sale had clearly not arisen, this part of the judgment cannot be ranked higher than a dictum. It appears that the heir could not be found, and the purchase went off. (1 J. & W. 193). Pitt v. Pelham differed from Bentham v. Wiltshire in this—that in the latter case the sale was necessarily to take place after the death of the surviving executor. In Patton v. Randall (1 J. & W. 189) the real estate was by an inartificial will devised to the testator's children, subject to the guardianship and management of the executors, and in case two of the adult children should disapprove of the management, the estate, with the furniture of the house and the wines, were to be sold, and several annuities were charged on the real estate or the produce of the sale. The executors sold, and in the opinion of Sir T. Plumer, M. R., prematurely, even if they had had the power to sell in any case; but the Court also held, that, as the legal estate was devised to the children, the executors could not have power to sell. To the objection that the testator evidently intended that the sale might (or rather must) take place, if at all, during the minority of one at least of the children, his Honor answered, "That is true; he has done what must postpone the sale till they come of age. But if a testator will give property to minors, and order a sale of it, that cannot authorise the Court to substitute by implication executors or trustees in their place, and to take away the power of sale from one and give it to another." It is submitted that this decision is unquestionably wrong. As a mere grammatical question, it was clear that the executors, who were to manage the estate, were also to sell it, and the furniture and land were to be sold, and the proceeds distributed together—circumstances which, on the authorities, are alone sufficient to vest the power of sale in the executors. The heir could not sell, for the estate did not descend to him; the devisees could not sell, for the sale was only to take place during the incapacity of one or more of them. There was never a clearer case of a power of sale in the executors. The devise of the legal estate to the children was wholly immaterial, as a power of sale in the executors would enable them to overreach that estate by a bargain and sale—as in Barrington v. The Attorney-General (Hardr. 419) and Newton v. Bennet, (1 Bro. C. C. 138), where Lord Thurlow held, that though the executors took a mere power of sale, and the legal estate descended to the heir, the real estate was equitable assets*. (See Allum v. Fryer, 3 Q. B. 446). In Curtis v. Fulbrooke, (13 Jur. 1044; 19 L. J., Ch., 65; 8 Hare, 29), Sir J. Wigram, * See Kenrick v. Beauchert, (3 B. & P. 179), where Lord Alvanley, C. J., appears to have forgotten the machinery of powers.

V.C., on a question as to the parties to a suit, expressed an opinion that the executors took a power of sale by implication, though there was no charge on the proceeds of the sale, and no fusion with the residuary personality. But his Honor afterwards desired to be understood as having expressed no opinion on the point, further than that the executors were proper parties. (8 Hare, 278; see Haydon v. Wood, 8 Hare, 279, note). In Forbes v. Peacock (12 Sim. 536, 541) the Vice-Chancellor said, "If a testator charges his real estate with payment of his debts, that prima facie gives his executor power to sell the estate, and to give a good discharge for the purchase money."

In Forbes v. Peacock (11 M. & W. 630) the testator first directed his debts to be paid. He gave a freehold house to his wife for life, with liberty to sell it in case a good offer should be made, and invest the proceeds for her benefit for life. In a subsequent part of the will he desired that at the death of his wife the residue of his estate might be collected, including the proceeds of the house, if not previously sold, to be then disposed of and divided as follows, &c. He appointed his wife and two others executors. After the death of the widow, the Court of Exchequer, on a case sent to them from the Court of Chancery, held, that whether there were unpaid debts or not, the surviving executor had power to sell and convey the house.

The authorities above cited clearly establish two points: first, that where there is a charge of debts, and the executors take the legal estate, they have a power to sell; secondly, that where the testator says the real estate shall be sold, but does not say by whom, the executors shall sell, and can give a good legal equitable title, if the proceeds of the sale are charged with debts, or are applicable in aid of or divisible with the personality. The case of Ball v. Harris (4 My. & C. 266) is an authority, if any were wanting, for the deduction that a charge of debts implies a power of sale. There was a charge of debts on the real estate by general introductory words, and a devise of real estate to trustees, who, with the widow, were executors; and Lord Cottingham, C., treated it as clear that a charge of debts authorises a sale, and added, "that although the point in some of the cases was, whether the purchaser was bound to see to the application of the purchase money, the decision that he was not assumes that the sale was authorised by the charge in the will of the debts upon the estate; that is, that the charge of the debts upon the estate was equivalent to a trust to sell for the payment of them. This case, indeed, is free from the difficulty which has occurred in some others, for Harris is devisee in trust of the legal fee; and it being established that the will charges the estate with the payment of the debts, it follows that Harris, being trustee for that purpose, must have the power of executing the trust." This observation points at a distinction which may or may not be sound, namely, that when the estate is expressly devised to trustees, and there is a charge of debts, the power of sale is in the trustees, and not in the executors, if they are different persons. It would seem to be the sounder conclusion, that in every case where a power of sale is implied for a purpose connected with the ordinary duties of executors, and no person is named to exercise it, it should be taken to be in the executors or administrators.

In Gooding v. Carter (1 Coll. 648) the testator first directed his debts to be paid, and then gave all his real and personal estate to his wife for life, and after her death, directed a sale of his real and personal estate by his executor. Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, V.C., relying on the general scope of the particular will, held that the widow (who was executrix) and the executor had power to sell the real estate for payment of debts, but considered that the question whether there was a legal power, so as to render the concurrence of the heir unnecessary, was one of too great nicety and difficulty to be decided against the purchaser. After citing Shaw v. Borrer, (1 Kee. 576), his Honor said, "I do not here collect that the Master of the Rolls held that the existence of a legal devise of the fee under the will was an essential ingredient in his decision. I think that a similar remark applies to the observations of Lord Cottingham in Ball v. Harris. In that case the wife (the co-executrix with Harris) was not devisee of the land. Harris was sole devisee, and was also executor. If the devisee was the person to sell, Harris would have been the only person to receive the money. If the executors were the persons to sell, then Harris and the widow were the persons to receive the money, and Harris and the widow did receive the money. If payment ought to be made to one, it was not necessarily a good payment to make that payment to one and another; and Ball v. Harris seems to me to involve the decision, that it was the executors who were to sell, and not the devisee. I repeat, therefore, that I cannot help thinking that in these cases the existence of a legal estate under the will was not considered as essential to the decision."

Lastly, in Stroughill v. Anstey, (1 De G., M., & G. 647), Lord St. Leonards, C., in commenting on Ball v. Harris, said, "This case introduces the very proper distinction, that where there is a general trust without a mode of raising charges, or where, by force of the charge itself, there is an implied trust to raise it, and the estate itself is disposed of subject to that obligation, (which must be a power to sell), then the charge may be raised by mortgage as well as by sale."

In Mather v. Norton, cited at the commencement of this article, the frame of the will favoured the construction that the executors took the legal estate, and not a mere power of sale; but where there are no special circumstances, it is, we submit, a necessary result of the authorities, (with which Doe d. Jones v. Hughes cannot be reconciled), that a mere charge of debts on the real estate authorises the executors to sell, and to vest the legal estate in the purchaser. G. S.
